Every second means life and death for miners: SC

KRISHNADAS RAJAGOPAL
NEW DELHI

"Every second means life and death for those 15 trapped miners," Justice A. K. Sikri said, even as the Supreme Court expressed its dissatisfaction with the ongoing operations to rescue men from the flooded rat-hole mine in Meghalaya.

A Bench of Justices A.K. Sikri and S. Abdul Nazeer said the rescue efforts seemed uncoordinated. The court asked the Centre what it had done so far. "You had wanted to send high-powered pumps to Thailand [to rescue Thai boys and their teacher trapped in a cave]... Why have you not done it here?" Justice Sikri asked Solicitor-General Tushar Mehta.

"We are not satisfied. There should be one central coordinated rescue effort and it is the Union of India which should do something," Justice Sikri observed. Mr. Mehta responded that the Coal Minister, along with the Meghalaya Chief Minister and senior officials, was monitoring the rescue, and would appoint a nodal officer for the effort.

The court asked why the government had previously refused the Army's offer of help. "Army offered to help, but the government did not want it. Why?" Justice Sikri asked Mr. Mehta. "Instead of the Army, we have the NDRF [the National Disaster Response Force]," Mr. Mehta responded. "But there are already 72 NDRF personnel there, with no result," Justice Sikri persisted. "Instead of the Army, we decided to send the Navy... Navy divers..." Mr. Mehta continued.
