Directions (Q.No. 21-25) Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions given below it. Certain words have been printed in bold to help you locate them while answering some of the questions.

The most avid users of social-networking websites may be exhibitionist teenagers, but when it comes to more grown-up use by business people, such sites have a surprisingly long pedigree. LinkedIn, an online network for professionals that signed up its ten-millionth user this week, was launched in 2003, a few months before MySpace, the biggest of the social sites. Consumer adoption of social networking has grabbed most attention since then. But interest in the business uses of the technology is rising. Many companies are attracted by the marketing opportunities offered by community sites. But the results can be painful. Pizza Hut has a profile on MySpace devoted to a pizza-delivery driver called Ted, who helpfully lets friends in on the chain's latest promotional offers ("Dude, I just heard some scoop from the Hut," ran one recent post). Wal-Mart started up and rapidly closed down a much-derided teenage site called The Hub last year. Reuters hopes to do better with its forthcoming site for those in the financial-services industry. Social networking has proved to be of greatest value to companies in recruitment. Unlike a simple jobs board, social networks enable members to pass suitable vacancies on to people they know, and to refer potential candidates back to the recruiter. So employers reach not only active jobseekers but also a much larger pool of passive candidates through referrals. LinkedIn has over 350 corporate customers which pay up to $250,000 each to advertise jobs to its expanding network. Having lots of people in a network increases its value in a "super-linear" fashion, says Reid Hoffman, LinkedIn's founder. He says corporate use of his service is now spreading beyond recruiters: hedge funds use it to identify and contact experts, for example. This technique is also gathering momentum in "knowledge management". IBM recently unveiled a social-software platform called Lotus Connections, due out in the next few weeks, that lets company employees post detailed profiles of themselves, team up on projects and share bookmarks.

- Why does the author call "Lotus Connections" a social software platform?
1) Because it is used for knowledge management
2) It has a feature to allow employees to interact and cooperate with each other
3. Because IBM developed it
4. Because the service team can get in touch with the right engineers using it
- What meaning of avid could you infer from the passage?

5) Hibernate
- What is the most probable context in which the author is talking about Pizza Hut?
1) Social Networking did not benefit it
2) Social Networking was a big success for it
3) Social Networking created problems for it
4) any of the above
5) none of the above

- Which of the following statement is true?
1) LinkedIn's rich pool of corporate customers scarcely add weight to its expanding network.
2) Social networks enable members to pass suitable vacancies on to people they know, and to prefer potential candidates back to the recruiter.
3) Employers have a ready to use database of selected candidates.
4) Social networks help the recruiters in providing the information about potential candidates.
5) Interest in the business uses of the technology is alarming

1) It is a rare breed
2) It is a food used for pet animals
3) It means full of rage
4) To derive something
