Age of third-degree torture over, Shah tells police officials

Home Minister gives call for a robust forensic set-up

VIJAYA SINGH
NEW DELHI

The age of third-degree torture was over and the police should stay a step ahead of crime and "criminal-minded people" through better investigation and forensic evidence, Union Home Minister Amit Shah said on Wednesday.

He was speaking at the 50th foundation day of the Bureau of Police Research and Development (BPRD), a think-tank under the Ministry of Home Affairs.

Amit Shah

Mr. Shah said old police concepts should be revived for investigation and mere "reliance on phone tapping" was not going to yield results. He stressed on need for a robust forensic set-up that would make it impossible for criminals to escape the clutches of law.

"Modernisation plan for police forces should be made for at least 10 years... This is not an age of third-degree [torture], police should stay ahead of crime and criminal-minded people," Mr. Shah said.

Cabinet eases rules for FDI in retail, media

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

The Union Cabinet on Wednesday announced a number of decisions designed to attract increased foreign direct investment (FDI) into the country, including easing local sourcing norms for single-brand retail companies.

Currently, the FDI policy says that a single-brand retail company with more than 51% FDI needs to source 30% of its goods from within India. The new decision says that this 30% can be calculated over the first five years of operation.

Further, sourcing for exports will also count towards the local sourcing requirement, the government said. The government also updated the FDI policy in keeping with prevalent business practices, it said.

"With a view to provide greater flexibility and ease of operations to SBRT (single brand retail trade) entities, it has been decided that all procurements made from India by the SBRT entity for that single brand shall be counted towards local sourcing, irrespective of whether the goods procured are sold in India or exported," the government said in a release.

The current FDI policy provides for 100% FDI under the automatic route in the manufacturing sector. There was no specific provision for contract manufacturing in the policy.

It has now decided to allow 100% FDI under the automatic route in contract manufacturing in India as well.

5-judge SC Bench to hear pleas on withdrawal of Article 370

KRISHNADAS RAJAGOPAL
NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Wednesday referred to a five-judge Bench several petitions challenging the withdrawal of Article 370 and bifurcation of the State of Jammu and Kashmir into two Union Territories.

A Presidential Order on August 5 had withdrawn Article 370, through which special rights and privileges had been accorded to the people of Jammu and Kashmir since 1954 in accordance with the Instrument of Accession.

"Let all the petitions on the Article 370 issue go to a five-judge Bench for hearing," Chief Justice of India Ranjan Gogoi, heading a three-judge Bench, said.

The order came amidst fervent prayers by the government, represented by Attorney General K.K. Venugopal and Solicitor General Tushar Mehta, to exercise restraint as far as orders and oral observations on J&K were concerned.

"The Article 370 issue has international and cross-border implications. Whatever statements made here are sent to the United Nations," Mr. Venugopal seemed to caution.

50,000 govt. posts will be filled: Malik

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
SRINAGAR

In his first press conference since the August 5 decision to scrap J&K's special status, Governor Satya Pal Malik on Wednesday announced that 50,000 vacant government posts would be filled in the next few months. Calling on the youth to participate in the recruitment drive, he said the culture, identity, heritage and language of J&K would be protected.

Hinting that the suspension of Internet is likely to continue, he said the Internet was the "most dangerous instrument". He, however, said mobile services were being restored in the Handwara and Kupwara areas of north Kashmir.

Warning political leaders of public wrath for any support to continuation of Article 370, Mr. Malik said, "I want to assure people that identity of J&K, its culture, languages, religions, heritage, will be protected. It's solemn assurance of Prime Minister Modi."

Anti-Brexit MPs condemn move

LONDON

British Prime Minister Boris Johnson announced on Wednesday that the suspension of British Parliament would be extended until October 14 – just two weeks before the U.K. is set to leave the EU – sparking outrage among anti-Brexit MPs.

MPs will return to London later than in recent years, giving pro-EU lawmakers less time than expected to thwart Mr. Johnson's Brexit plans before Britain is due to leave the EU on October 31.

"We're going to do it on October 14," Mr. Johnson told reporters. He is due to attend one last EU summit three days later. "There will be ample time on both sides of that crucial October 17 summit, ample time in Parliament for MPs to debate," Mr. Johnson said.

The move enraged opposition MPs involved in trying to stop Brexit. Tom Watson, deputy leader of the opposition Labour Party, said, "This action is an utterly scandalous affront to our democracy. We cannot let this happen."

Silence is a punishment, says Minister Javadekar

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

Union Information and Broadcasting Minister Prakash Javadekar said on Wednesday that the "biggest punishment" for people was not having a means of communication and not being able to talk to anyone.

He was speaking at the National Awards for Community Radio.

His comments come against the backdrop of the ongoing communication blockade in Kashmir, where Internet and mobile services have been suspended for the last 22 days.

Mr. Javadekar also launched a booklet titled 'Jan Connect' on the first 75 days of the Narendra Modi government's second term. Launching the booklet, he applauded the nullification of Article 370 revoking special Constitutional status for Jammu & Kashmir.

"With the historic decision on Article 370, Kashmir will get the development that they did not get till now. All the laws that are applicable to the rest of the country will be applicable there too," Mr. Javadekar said.

The Minister gave away awards in five community radio categories for the years 2018 and 2019.

In Shivpuri, one birthday to link them all

SHIVPURI

"I think I am 30," says Kallu Adiwasi who, according to her crisp Aadhaar card, is 39, and going by her tattered black-and-white voter ID, 49.

But there's one thing that this member of the vulnerable Saharia tribe shares with other residents of Kakra village in Madhya Pradesh's Shivpuri district: the date and the month of birth mentioned on the Aadhaar card – January 1.

Young or old, male or female, in fact, anyone without a proof of date of birth has been shown to be born on January 1.

"I like to tell people I am 25 in order to seem younger," says Ashok

Adiwasi, born on January 1, 1985, as per his card. "We don't have a system of recording birthdays. I don't even know when I was born. How does it matter anyway? We don't celebrate birthdays."

Jagam, Maho, Puran, Asarapi, Radha and Jasodi and several other villagers share the same birthday. Even Ajuddi Adiwasi, purportedly 84, shares his birthday with Kallon Adiwasi, now four.

According to the policy of the Unique Identification Authority of India (UIDAI),

tasked with enrolling citizens under the programme, if an individual is unable to produce a proof of birth at the time of registration, they can declare it without supporting documents. In case they don't remember the date, merely stating the age will do.

Official's decision

In 2016, at Jakhanod village, when it was Ramadullhari Adiwasi's turn at a registration camp, she was left stammering when she was asked her age.

"The official scanned me from top to bottom and declared that I was 39," she says, flashing her card that shows January 1, 1977, as her date of birth.

Back in Kakra, Udaysingh Adiwasi's date of birth on his Aadhaar card is January 1, 2004, which makes him 15. Yet, he holds a voter identity card which gives his birth year as 2000. When asked about the discrepancy, he says, "Wait, I'll get my other Aadhaar card. It has yet another date of birth."

In 2017, news reports claimed that nearly all residents of a tribal-dominated village in Hardwar in Uttarakhand were born on January 1 as per their Aadhaar cards. The UIDAI had clarified that as per its policy, if a person was only able to declare his or her age during enrolment, the system by default takes January 1 of that year as the date of birth.

1 killed, another injured in U.P. mob attack on child-lifting suspicion

GHAZIABAD

A man was killed and another seriously injured by a mob in a village in Sambhal when it mistook the two for child-lifters on Tuesday.

Raju and Ramavtar, from Chhabra village of Chandausi in Sambhal district, were taking their nephew Ravi for treatment on a motorbike to a hospital when a group of men in Jarai village attacked them.

Local sources said the child was crying because of stomach pain and the unidentified men, agitated by social media posts about the presence of alleged child-lifters in the area, mistook the uncles as culprits. They were mercilessly beaten by sticks by a mob that gradually swelled to around 300 people. By the time the police reached, the two brothers had lost consciousness. Mr. Raju passed away on the way to hospital while Mr. Ramavtar's condition remains grave.

Yamuna Prasad, Superintendent of Police, Sambhal, told The Hindu, "Based on video evidence collected from the spot, four persons have been arrested under charges of murder and rioting and an FIR has been registered against 14 more for rioting. We will arrest them soon. Ramavtar is stable."

He appealed to locals not to believe in rumours being spread through social media.

20 cases in two weeks

In the past two weeks, at least 20 cases have emerged from western U.P. of rumours of 'bachcha chor' (child-lifters) leading to mob attacks. Five women from Gujarat were thrashed by a mob on suspicion of being child-lifters while they were selling ropes in Shamli district on Monday. They were rescued by the police. Even mentally-ill persons are not being spared. Two such cases have come to light in Balandshahr and Bareilly.

Court orders police protection for NGO counsellor after abduction bid

STAFF REPORTER NEW DELHI

The Delhi High Court on Wednesday ordered police protection to a counsellor at Shakti Shalini, a Delhi-based NGO which works with survivors of sexual abuse, following a complaint that she has been receiving threats and has escaped an abduction bid earlier this month.

Justice Brijesh Sethi also ordered the Delhi police to reinvestigate into the complaint made by a Shakti Shalini coordinator and file a status report before the court by the next date of hearing in October.

During the hearing, the judge questioned the Delhi police as to why they have registered a Non-Cognizable Report of a lost mobile in the case.

The Shakti Shalini coordinator, in her petition, stated that the NGO had provided shelter to a woman and her 11-month-old baby after she sought their help.

Creates ruckus

After her admission at the shelter home, her live-in partner and a few others started visiting the shelter home and its head office demanding that she and her child be returned. On August 2, the live-in partner along with others visited the shelter home and created a ruckus and threatened the woman and attempted to snatch the child away from her.

On August 7, when the coordinator was heading back home after work and stopped at an ATM booth in Jangpura, the live-in partner of the woman and a few others tried to abduct her by forcibly pulling her into a car.

When the coordinator tried to make a call to the police, her phone was snatched. Then, one of the spectators called the police. A beat constable came to the spot and rescued her and took all the persons to the police station.

Upon insistence by the Shakti Shalini coordinator to register an FIR of abduction and assault, the police official handed her a non-cognisable offence information report. On Wednesday, before the High Court, the Station House Officer of Nizamuddin assured that he will look into the complaint and take action as per law.

During the day, another HC Bench directed the police to provide protection to the woman and her child. The Bench further directed to provide the phone number of the officer whom the woman can call if she receives any threat in future.

Kejriwal announces campaign against vector-borne diseases

STAFF REPORTER NEW DELHI

Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal announced the launch of a mega 10-week campaign against dengue and chikungunya here on Wednesday.

Titled 10 Hafte, 10 Baje 10 minute Har Ravivar, Dengue Par War, the campaign will be launched from CM's official residence on Sunday and continue for the next 10 consecutive weeks.

While making the announcement, the Chief Minister took the opportunity to appreciate the collective efforts of the government and the people of the Capital for "successful results" in containing and combating the vector-borne diseases during the last three years. He said that the city witnessed a "sharp decline" in the number of cases reported.

"We appeal to the people of Delhi to give 10 minutes every Sunday at 10 a.m. to check all sources of stagnant water at their homes as the dengue mosquitoes breed only in clean water," the Chief Minister said.

As per government data, the number of dengue cases reported in the Capital steadily decreased from 15,867 in 2015 to 2,798 in 2018; 75 cases have been reported so far this year. Deaths due to dengue have come down from 60 in 2015 to four in 2018; no deaths have been reported so far this year. Chikungunya cases have come down from 7,760 cases in 2016 to 165 in 2018; 21 cases have been reported so far this year.

BJP takes credit

Meanwhile, Delhi BJP chief Manoj Tiwari said that the data provided by Mr. Kejriwal was an "admission" of the fact that the BJP-ruled corporations had functioned well in controlling such diseases.

Candidates for JNU Students' Union election declared

SFI, AISA, AISF and DSF come together to form united Left panel to fight ABVP

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

Candidates for the Jawaharlal Nehru University Students' Union election, to be held on September 6, were declared on Wednesday.

The Students' Federation of India (SFI), All India Students' Association (AISA), All India Students' Federation (AISF) and the Democratic Students' Federation (DSF) joined hands to form a united Left panel to take on the Akhil Bharatiya Vidyarthi Parishad (ABVP).

The other student organisations in the presidential race are the National Students' Union of India (NSUI), the Birsa Ambedkar Phule Students' Association (BAPSA) and the students' wing of the Rashtriya Janata Dal. There is one independent candidate in the race who has also thrown his hat into the race for President of the JNUSU.

The united Left panel's candidate for president Aishe Ghosh said that the association of the Left at JNU was not symbolic but based on everyday hard work that activists put in for the student community and their concerns.

Key issues

She said that the Left panel would uphold the democratic and progressive ethos of the campus, would resist all administrative and Right-wing assaults on JNU. The Left unity panel would fight for decent accommodation for every student, improvement of transport facilities and gender justice on campus, she said.

The ABVP's presidential candidate Manish Jangid said, "The ABVP would focus on issues affecting daily life of students like poor living conditions, social justice in admission policy and establishing placement cells." He said that the ABVP was the single largest student organisation on campus and it worked on real campus issues. The ABVP attacked the Left leaders for not being on campus and focusing on student issues. Instead it helped their leaders fight elections in different parts of the country, the Right-wing unit claimed.

BAPSA's presidential candidate Jitendra Suna said that it would fight for marginalised students and would challenge the binary of the Left and Right-wing forces. NSUI's candidate Prashant Kumar and RJD's student wing candidate Priyanka Bharati also promised to work towards a better campus. Independent candidate Raghavendra Mishra called for the construction of a Saraswati temple on campus.

Passengers on Metro trains in the country will be allowed to carry one bag weighing up to 25 kg, up from the earlier limit of 15 kg, though baggage in the form of "bundles" would not be allowed, according to rules notified by the Union Housing and Urban Affairs Ministry on Tuesday.

'DU colleges facing financial crisis'

BJP urges Kejriwal to release grants to institutions

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

Delhi University-affiliated colleges under the Aam Aadmi Party government are facing a "deep financial crisis", the Opposition BJP alleged here on Wednesday.

Leader of the Opposition in the Delhi Assembly Vijender Gupta sought to urge Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal to take urgent measures to release the required grants and sanctions to colleges fully funded by the Delhi government.

"These colleges need immediate financial assistance for smooth and effective functioning... it is the Delhi government's primary duty to protect the interests of students, teachers and employees alike," Mr. Gupta said.

"The government must ensure that withheld grants should not hamper introduction of new academic programmes and courses... the Delhi government's release of grants and sanctions to University colleges is inadequate and is causing deep concern amongst students, teachers and staff of these colleges," he said further.

According to Mr. Gupta, the arrears of revised HRA with effect from July 1, 2017, of the 7th UGC pay package had not yet been paid to employees in Delhi government colleges.

Salary dues

If grants were not released in time in the coming months, Mr. Gupta alleged, it would be difficult even to pay salaries of teachers.

"These colleges had introduced some new academic programmes and courses. But the required additional teaching strength could not be obtained due to administrative reasons," he said.

Nine died in 2018 building collapse

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

The Noida administration on Wednesday invoked the National Security Act (NSA) against a builder who had illegally constructed a multi-storey building which collapsed last year, leaving nine people dead.

This is the first case in Uttar Pradesh in which a builder has been detained under the stringent NSA, which prohibits bail to an accused for 12 months, subject to judicial review, the

Dear Delhiites,
This year too, we have to come together to fight against Dengue.
1st September onwards.

10 हफ्ते, 10 बजे, 10 मिनट
हर रविवार, डेंगू पर वार।

Know about Dengue

- The Dengue mosquito breeds in stagnant clean water.
- The Dengue mosquito grows from an egg into a mosquito in 8-10 days. If clean water is not allowed to stand, the mosquito will not be able to breed.
- The Dengue mosquito's flight range is approximately 200 meters. If someone in your house contracts Dengue, then it is likely that the mosquitoes have either originated from your or your neighbour's house. It is important to check your home and also that of your neighbours for your family's health and wellbeing.

10 minutes, every Sunday

- For the next 10 weeks, we all need to set aside 10 minutes at 10 o'clock every Sunday. Check flower pots, coolers, vases or anywhere inside or outside your house to make sure that clean water has not accumulated. If you find there is an accumulation of clean water, pour it out, change it or add petrol or oil to it.

Just 10 Sundays

- Most Dengue cases occur in the monsoon or just after that. During this period, there are 10 Sundays. If we dedicate 10 minutes at 10 o'clock every Sunday for this, we can get rid of Dengue and Chikungunya. We need to spend less than two hours over 10 weeks. In the last five years, Dengue and Chikungunya have been brought under control, and this year, we will do it again!

Let's come together!

- If you have inspected your house, do take a selfie inside your house and WhatsApp it to 8287972050. Together, we will make Delhi Dengue-free.

Flood delays work on 25-acre reservoir along Yamuna river

Officials say it will take at least two more weeks to complete the project

The construction of a 25-acre reservoir to store floodwater from the Yamuna during the monsoon, being built on the floodplains, has been delayed due to the recent flood.

The shallow reservoir to recharge the groundwater was supposed to be completed by August 20. "We had dug around 17 acres. We cannot dig the rest of the area as the flood has made it inaccessible for machines," an official privy to the development told The Hindu.

On August 9, the work on the pilot project, which is a pet scheme of Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal, was launched by him and Union Jal Shakti Minister Gajendra Singh Shekhawat.

Officials said it will now take at least two more weeks

Now, piezometers will be installed about three km upstream of the project to measure the increase in water table. "We will then compare the readings of both the areas to understand whether the increase is due to the reservoir water or the flood," the official said.

Failed actor and accomplice arrested for duping contractor

Accused exchanged victim's money with fake notes

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

The Delhi police arrested a man and his accomplice for allegedly duping a contractor by replacing real notes with fake ones, in Badarpur in south-east Delhi, the police said on Wednesday.

The arrested persons have been identified as Shahid alias Raj Shinghaniya, who hails from Purnia district of Bihar and lives in Jamia Nagar, and his accomplice Hemraj alias Salman, a resident of Noida.

Shahid wanted to act in Bhojpuri films. He tried his luck in acting, but failed. He could not even produce his own film due to financial crisis.

He had come to the city and started an acting school at Nizamuddin's that was named 'Shahid Stars'. However, due to financial crisis, he failed to bear the expenses. He then hatched a plan of making money by duping people. His idea was inspired from a movie, the police said.

"The complainant said that he got convinced and handed him the cash he had and took double the amount in fake currency notes. When he tried to check the packet, Raj refused. The complainant was in a hurry and so he left. He reached home and opened the packet to find that all ₹2,000 notes had 'Children's Bank of India' inscribed on them," said Mr. Biswal.

He tried to trace Raj and his accomplice but in vain. He then registered a complaint with the police.

"Following a tip-off, Raj was held at Jaitpur Mor in Badarpur and at his instance, Hemraj was nabbed," said Mr. Biswal. Raj has spent the entire amount.

Chinmoy Biswal, DCP (South East) said that on August 8, they received a complaint from one Manoj Kumar Sahani, a resident of Haryana, at Badarpur police station. Lake will use recycled water from STP

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

The Delhi Jal Board (DJB) has awarded a tender of ₹64 crore for the construction of a 25-acre lake, walkways, park benches and playing areas in Rohini.

The lake will use recycled water.

"Of the total 25 acres, there will be landscaping and walkways on 14.5 acres and the lake will cover an area of about 10 acres. The project is expected to be completed in 18 months," said Ankit Srivastava, technical advisor of the DJB.

The project was approved by the DJB last year. The water in the lake will recharge the groundwater and the overflowing water will go into harvesting pits.

Recycling process

The lake will be next to a sewage treatment plant (STP) in Rohini and recycled water from it will be used for it. The treated water from the STP will have BOD level of 30mg/l and it will be brought down by a wetland system.

"The water will be passed through gravel, plants and certain types of bacteria to bring down the BOD level to 10 mg/l," an official said. Then the water quality will be further enhanced in the lake by using aeration system and providing sufficient retention time in the lake.

Natural flora, fauna

"There will be certain floating plants which will also increase the quality of water and the BOD level will be brought down to 3 mg/l in the lake. The area will have natural flora and fauna," the official said.

AAP on Wednesday alleged that a race to be the Chief Ministerial face in the BJP is affecting works meant for the public.

AAP MP Sanjay Singh also said that their party is not involved in any "personal" fight with Prime Minister Narendra Modi or the BJP.

'Negative reaction'

He said that as soon as the Kejriwal government makes an announcement, BJP leaders start giving negative reaction.

"If we declare that water will be free, BJP opposes it. We declare free travel for women, BJP is against it. We talk about opening the registry for unauthorised colonies, BJP opposes it. I want to tell the BJP not to sacrifice the interests of the people of Delhi while fighting for the Chief Minister's post," he added.

"There is a big drama going on... Sometimes Manoj Tiwari is the CM, sometimes Vijender Gupta is the CM... at least decide among yourselves," the AAP leader said.

Allot unique IDs to waterbodies, says NGT panel

NEW DELHI

Landowning agencies must ensure prevention of encroachments of waterbodies in the city and unique ID numbers should be given to them for identification, a monitoring committee has suggested to the National Green Tribunal (NGT).

The committee told the NGT that the waterbodies should be secured by constructing boundary walls and relevant entries in the revenue records. "The government agencies should on priority start mapping of small waterbodies on GPS platform, monitoring the water quality, penalising the defaulters and putting high values on these waterbodies and give proper weightage for their protection. Action shall be taken against trespassers," the panel told the NGT.

"The agencies shall have dedicated staff to take care of the waterbodies. DJB has recently designated Rakesh Sahni as SE (Water Bodies). The monitoring committee shall ensure that there is co-ordination between different agencies," the panel said.

The committee told the tribunal that new water bodies are being taken up for revival from time to time on the basis of information given by activists or newspaper clippings.

"The monitoring committee has visited remote areas/villages to have first-hand information. "There is awareness among the people now and the monitoring committee is getting several requests to visit the neglected waterbodies for their revival. Our attention has been drawn recently towards water bodies at Tihar Jheel [Hari Nagar], Prasad Nagar Lake and Tuglakabad Lake," it said.

The monitoring committee has already visited two of them and plans to visit the other ones shortly. Necessary steps are being taken to improve the condition of these waterbodies, it said.

The AAP government's scheme of providing 20,000 litres of water each month free of cost to every household in Delhi is being misused by several housing societies, the committee also said. It said that after availing 20,000 litres free of cost, these societies start extracting groundwater. "The extraction of groundwater by using tube-wells/bore-wells is being done to avoid payment of water tariff. The DJB should take steps to prevent this," it said.

Delhi zoo to move extra animals to other facilities

NEW DELHI

The Delhi zoo has initiated the process of transferring surplus herbivores such as blackbucks and spotted deer to nearby facilities through exchange programmes in a bid to bring down the number of animal deaths, an official said on Tuesday.

According to a recent census, 245 animals died in the zoo in over 14 months - from April 2018 to June 2019. It prompted the zoo authorities to order an assessment of the deaths.

"The Central Zoo Authority (CZA) has permitted the zoo to shift surplus herbivores, including blackbuck, spotted deer, nilgai and sambar, to the nearby zoos. This will help reduce the number of animal deaths," the official said.

"A major reason for animal deaths in the zoo is infighting and premature births. As per CZA guidelines, a large zoo should keep 20 animals of a particular species, whereas we have around 250 blackbucks, 150 spotted deer, 60 sambar deer and 40 nilgai," he said. The CZA has allowed the Delhi zoo to "shift" 120 blackbucks, for now, he said.

The Madhya Pradesh High Court has served a notice on the State government over the constitution of the Wildlife Board after an animal rights activist filed a public interest litigation petition claiming that law has been violated by nominating persons with "special interest in wildlife" to the Board.

On August 3, the State government, under Section 6 (1) of the Wildlife (Protection) Act, reconstituted the Board by nominating 30 members, with Chief Minister Kamal Nath as its Chairman and Forest Minister Umang Singh as Vice-Chairman. Under the Section 'experts in the fields of environmentalism/protection', the government has nominated four out of eight persons to the Board for

'Word diluted'

The PIL plea, filed by Bhopal-based Ajay Dubey, claimed that while resorting to "nepotism, corruption and favouritism" to nominate such members, thereby violating the Act, the government had "diluted" the word

'eminent conservationist', as mentioned in the Act.

According to Section 6 (e) of the Act, the State governments could nominate 10 persons to the Board from "amongst eminent conservationists, ecologists and environmentalists including at least two representatives of the Scheduled Tribes." The PIL claimed that not even a single Scheduled Tribes member had been nominated to the Board. And Moreover, it said, "As per Section 64 of the Act, the State government has to make rules for carrying out the provisions of the Act, but strangely the Government of Madhya Pradesh till date has not made any rules whatsoever". However, Chapter 2 of the Wildlife (Protection) (Madhya Pradesh) Rules, 1974, provides for the constitution of a Wildlife Advisory Board.

CBI examines Mukul Roy, Trinamool MP in Narada case

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI/KOLKATA

The Central Bureau of Investigation on Wednesday examined BJP leader Mukul Roy and Trinamool Congress MP K.D. Singh in connection with the Narada News sting operation case.

Both leaders could not be contacted on phone despite repeated attempts. Refusing to divulge the details, CBI spokesperson Nitin Wakankar said: "The CBI does not comment on ongoing investigation."

It is learnt that Mr. Roy visited the agency's headquarters around 3 p.m. and remained there for about two hours.

Sovan summoned

The CBI has also summoned former Kolkata Mayor Sovan Chatterjee and Trinamool Congress MP Aparupa Poddar in the cash-on-camera scam.

Mr. Chatterjee recently joined the BJP. While Mr. Chatterjee was asked to appear for questioning on Saturday, Ms. Poddar has been summoned in the first week of September, CBI sources said.

The agency has also summoned businessman and Narada News head Mathew Samuel who had submitted the recordings of several politicians allegedly accepting money from a journalist posing as representative of a fake company.

The sting operation was allegedly conducted in 2014 and the contents were made public ahead of the 2016 Assembly elections in West Bengal.

Following a High Court directive in March 2017, the CBI initiated an inquiry into the allegations and based on the findings registered a case against 12 leaders, including MPs and West Bengal Ministers, and an IPS officer.

An FIR was lodged for alleged criminal conspiracy under the provisions of the Prevention of Corruption Act dealing with bribery and criminal misconduct.

Mr. Roy, earlier a close associate of West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee, joined the BJP in November 2017. On the basis of the CBI case, the Enforcement Directorate is also conducting money laundering investigations.

GUWAHATI

A sizeable number of people belonging to the Garo tribe are expected to be excluded from Assam's updated National Register of Citizens to be published on August 31. The reasons: their matrilineal culture and Assam-Meghalaya boundary dispute.

Most of matrilineal Garos inhabit the western half of Meghalaya. Some inhabit two districts of western Assam - Goalpara and Kamrup - along the border with Meghalaya. In our society, the men come to live with their in-laws after marriage. Some men from Meghalaya wedded into families in Assam could not get pre-1971 documents. They are expected to miss out on the NRC," Thengsil Sangma, general secretary of the United Garo Autonomous Council Movement Committee (Assam), told The Hindu.

Haryana not yet stray cattle-free

GURUGRAM

The ambitious programme of the Haryana government to make the State stray cattle-free has failed to accomplish its objective and missed two deadlines, a reply under the Right to Information Act has revealed.

The annual budget for the Haryana Gau Seva Aayog, however, has increased from ₹45 lakh to ₹30 crore - almost 60 times - over the past five years under BJP rule.

Two deadlines missed

In reply to an RTI application by Panipat resident P.P. Kapoor, Animal Husbandry and Dairying Departments of various districts have conceded that their respective districts were yet to be made stray cattle-free.

According to the Gau Seva Aayog's reply to the RTI, the Haryana government had decided to make the State stray cattle-free by August 15, 2018, but later pushed the deadline to January 26 this year.

Though Nuh district and Hailey Mandi and Narnaul municipal areas have been declared stray cattle-free, the Animal Husbandry and Dairying Departments of Fatehabad, Rohtak, Faridabad, Panchkula, Jind, Hisar, Sonapat and Bhiwani districts have conceded that these districts were yet to accomplish the target.

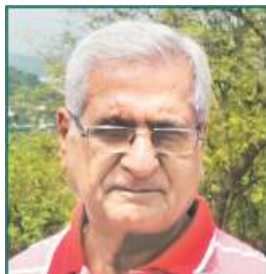

The maximum of 4,954 stray cattle are still roaming free in Bhiwani, followed by Sonapat (1,969), Fatehabad (1,415), Hisar (1,200), Jind

(1,196), Faridabad (1,011), Rohtak (805) and Panchkula (198).

Mr. Kapoor, an RTI activist, said the analysis of the data furnished by the municipal bodies and the dairying departments hinted at possible financial irregularities and demanded a probe into the matter. "The Hailey Mandi municipal council caught 205 stray cattle at the total cost of ₹4,30,500 at an average of ₹2,100 per cattle, whereas Kaithal and Panchkula did not incur any expenditure on it. Similarly, Sonapat municipal corporation incurred a cost of ₹12,43,800 to catch 1,382 cattle at an average of ₹900 per cattle. Also the Sonapat municipal body spends ₹25 lakh per month on the upkeep of these cattle," he said.

One year later: process has become punishment, say activists' family members

'Police must prove whatever they claim and then punish; government has hatched a conspiracy against them'

SONAM SAIGAL
MUMBAI

It has been a year since poet Varavara Rao, unionist and human rights lawyer Sudha Bharadwaj, and activists Vernon Gonsalves and Arun Ferreira have been arrested and charged under the Unlawful Activities Prevention Act (UAPA) for their alleged links with the CPI (Maoist) and for their alleged role in the Bhima-Koregaon violence. Their family members, who spoke to The Hindu on Wednesday, said, "The process has become the punishment", and it is extremely disheartening that it has become very difficult for them to even get bail.

Mr. Gonsalves's son Sagar Abraham Gonsalves (24), who works for an NGO, said, "It is really disheartening and heartbreaking to see the pace of the matter. There are 10 people languishing in jail without anything against them. The police even refuse to share the material they have against them. The process is becoming the punishment."

He said, "The police must prove whatever they claim and then punish. They have just put them behind bars. Even if they are proven innocent, who is going to compensate for the lost time? It is just unfair."

About being able to meet his father at Yerwada Central Jail, he said, "Since I am the blood relation there is no problem. But whoever comes to meet Ms. Bharadwaj, they are given a tough time."

Varavara Rao

Maaysha (22) said she cannot wait to be with her mother. "I miss my mother's physical presence. I am a single child to a single mother. We started staying together only three months ago in Faridabad. Since childhood, I had been staying with union workers," she said.

Similar sentiments are echoed by Mr. Rao's 70-year-old wife Hemlata. She and her daughters still wonder how their lives changed on the same date one year ago. "All of them have been booked under the UAPA. But all the raids, searches, and arrests happened unlawfully. There was no arrest warrant, and the police got panchamas from Maharashtra," she said.

"The police are not providing any material they have against them. This is unlawful. The government has hatched a conspiracy against them. No one will be punished because they have no evidence but the process is the punishment," Ms. Rao said.

She said she worries about her husband's health as he is 79, and that the barrack that has all the accused in the jail didn't even have a fan until they moved court seeking the facility.

Central team begins visit to flood-hit areas from today

MUMBAI

A Central team will visit Pune and Konkan divisions to assess the damage caused by recent floods, a government official said on Wednesday. The State has sought ₹6,813 crore in financial assistance from the Centre after heavy rains and floods caused a wide-scale damage and claimed lives of 60 people.

"A team of seven officials from various Central departments will begin its visit to Pune and Konkan divisions to assess the damage caused by heavy rains and floods," a relief and rehabilitation department official said.

Konkan administrative division comprises seven districts of Mumbai City, Mumbai Suburban, Thane, Palghar, Raigad, Ratnagiri and Sindhudurg. Pune division consists of Sangli, Pune, Kolhapur, Satara and Solapur districts.

Kolhapur and Sangli districts in western Maharashtra were badly affected by floods caused by unprecedented rains and release of water from dams earlier this month. "Some officials of the team will visit flood-hit areas in Kolhapur, Sangli, Satara, Pune, Ratnagiri and Sindhudurg districts. They will be first briefed tomorrow (Thursday) morning before they actually begin their tour," Deepak Mhaisekar, Pune Divisional Commissioner, said.

The team will also interact with affected people for making their assessment during the three-day visit before talking to State government officials.

Seat-sharing with BJP already fixed: Uddhav

ALOK DESHPANDE
MUMBAI

Shiv Sena chief Uddhav Thackeray on Wednesday said there is no change in the seat-sharing formula for the Assembly polls, which was worked out with the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) prior to the Lok Sabha elections.

"Political alliance between the BJP and the Sena was decided ahead of the Lok Sabha elections in Mumbai. There is no change in that seat-sharing arrangement," Mr. Thackeray told reporters at his residence Matoshri.

He said, "We have already decided (alliance) everything. There is no meaning of any other discussion. Situation is very good for us and we are getting better colleagues. The alliance is bound to happen. I have told you before and I remain firm on my answer."

In February 2019, while announcing the Lok Sabha alliance between the two parties, BJP chief Amit Shah and Mr. Thackeray had said that they would contest an equal number of seats and leave the remaining to other parties in the fold. Last week, Maharashtra BJP president Chandrakant Patil said a seat-sharing agreement between the two would have to be worked out for the Assembly polls.

on Wednesday. Besides Mr. Sopal, former Congress MLA Dilip Mane and Congress leader Nag-nath Kshirsagar from Solapur district were also inducted into the Sena.

Welcoming Mr. Sopal and others, Mr. Thackeray said all fresh inductions were made after consultation with local party leaders. "We have not kept anyone in the dark about such political decisions," he said. Last week, another NCP leader from Kar-mala tehsil in Solapur, Rashmi Bagal, joined the Sena.

In last one month, the ruling BJP and Sena have inducted more than 12 senior Congress and NCP leaders, leading to speculations that both the safron allies may contest the Assembly polls separately, like in 2014.

Meanwhile, the NCP termed Mr. Sopal as an untrustworthy colleague for crossing over to the Sena and claimed that his political opportunism on the eve of the State polls will erode his credibility among people.

"You (Mr. Sopal) spent your entire life on one side (in the NCP) and at this juncture, you knocked at Mr. Thackeray's door...what a trustworthy colleague you are...how come people will trust you?" asked State NCP chief Jayant Patil while addressing a rally in Malshiras taluka as part of his party's Shivswarajya Yatra.

At end of Mahajanadesh Yatra, Shah may announce poll pact

SHARAD VYAS
MUMBAI

The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) has announced that its mega voter outreach programme Mahajanadesh Yatra in the State will be concluded on Sunday at Solapur in the presence of Union Home Minister and party president Amit Shah.

Sources said the party is also likely to signal the strengthening of the alliance with the Shiv Sena in the presence of Mr. Shah and also party leader J.P. Nadda. "We are likely to see the alliance materialise or at least its blueprint being announced when Mr. Shah attends the valediction of the second phase of the rally," a party leader said, adding Mr. Shah will hold a meeting of party leaders afterwards. The yatra had until last week covered 1,641 km while crisscrossing 60 Assembly constituencies. It had been planned to pass through 150 Assembly constituencies and 32 districts by the end of this month. The yatra has completed the journey of Vidarbha, and except some parts of Nashik-Nagar, North Maharashtra has been covered, party leaders said.

Chief Minister Devendra Fadnis said, "On Tuesday, the yatra entered Marathwada. We are getting tremendous response. People express support because they believe only this government can meet their demands."

He said other parties are also taking out rallies, which are not getting the public support. "The Congress started its journey on Tuesday. Since there was no crowd, they had to start it in a wedding hall and hold the meeting in a small hall. The Nationalist Congress Party also has two yatras in progress. Their leader Supriya Sule has taken out a 'Samvad Yatra' (dialogue journey). The situation would not have been so bad had Supriyatani had this 'dialogue' while being in power for 15 years. Then they thought of themselves only; that is why people have ignored them now," the CM said.

The yatra was flagged off by Union Minister Rajnath Singh on August 1 and had in a month-long journey and two phases aimed to cover 668 km in Konkan, 812 km in Western Maharashtra, 1,232 km in Vidarbha, 633 km in North Maharashtra, and 1,069 km in Marathwada. By the time it ends, the CM shall have travelled approximately 4,384 km covering 32 districts.

Prohibition Act gets more teeth

ALOK DESHPANDE
MUMBAI

The State Cabinet on Wednesday cleared the proposal to make the Maharashtra Prohibition Act more stringent, increasing the fine as well as jail term for offenders. It will also revise the definition of 'dry region' and 'prescribed limit'.

An ordinance will be issued in this regard soon. "Maharashtra will go to the polls in the next few months. However, the first Assembly session will only be held in winter, when a bill to make the amendments will be introduced. Till then, the State will execute the changes through the ordinance," said an official from the State Excise Department.

Under the new provisions, first-time offenders who will transport, sell, carry alcohol or run shops illegally will face imprisonment ranging from three to five years and a fine ranging from ₹25,000 to ₹1 lakh. Second-time offenders will face five to seven years in jail and a fine ranging from ₹1 lakh to ₹2 lakh, while third-time offenders will face a jail term of 7 to 10 years and a fine ranging from ₹2 lakh to ₹5 lakh.

Prohibition has been imposed in Gadchiroli, Chandrapur and Wardha districts. The government has also announced recruitment in 37 posts for legal assistance that the State Excise Department requires.

Existing licences for the sale of liquor will be void in the government-notified 'absolute prohibited' areas.

3 children buried alive in sandpit in Koppal

Their playmates escaped unhurt

STAFF REPORTER KOPPAL

Almost a fortnight after the electrocution of five high-school students at a Karnataka-run hostel, Koppal district faced another tragedy when three children died after falling into a sandpit and a wall of mud buried them on Wednesday.

According to the police, Sonu, 7, Savita, 3, and Kavita, 2, the children of Maharashtra-based nomadic tribes, were killed after loose soil fell on them while they were playing at Navalli village in Kanakagiri taluk of the district.

Three other children, who were playing along with them, escaped unhurt. The police said that a large pit had been dug on private land for extracting sand.

The surface soil that was dug out to reach the sand reserve was piled up around the pit.

The children, who were playing on the mound, slipped and fell into the pit, and the loose soil instantly covered them.

Prime accused in JMB terror case arrested

STAFF REPORTER BENGALURU

The National Investigation Agency (NIA) on Tuesday arrested Mohammed Najir Sheikh, alias Patla Anas, 25, from a hideout in Agartala, Tripura, in connection with a Jamaat-ul-Mujahideen Bangladesh (JMB) terror case.

Sheikh is the prime accused in the case and has been absconding since an NIA raid last month in Bengaluru and surrounding districts led to the arrest of his associates.

NIA officials said Sheikh had been staying in Chikkabanavara in Bengaluru, along with other members of the JMB. The group was actively involved in raising funds for committing dacoities in Bengaluru. They had established hideouts at various places in the city and planned to carry out subversive activities by procuring material and equipment for making IEDs, sources said.

Sheikh has been brought to Bengaluru and will be produced before the NIA special court in the city.

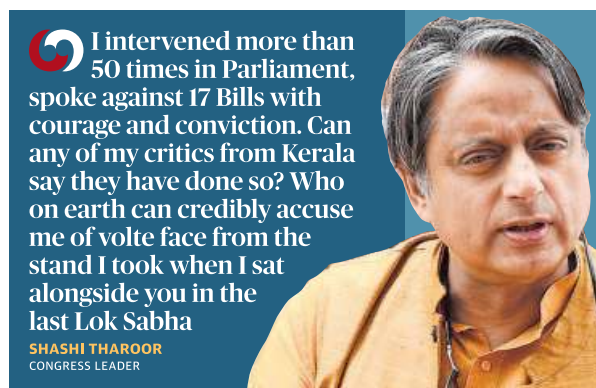

PM deserves no praise: Tharoor

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT THIRUVANANTHAPURAM

Congress MP Shashi Tharoor on Wednesday stated that he had always been a staunch critic of Prime Minister Narendra Modi and the "outcry" in the party over his remarks supporting Jairam Ramesh and Abhishek Singhvi was based on "hysterical reactions to distorted reporting of a single tweet".

In his explanation to Kerala Pradesh Congress Committee president Mullappally Ramachandran, he said the reference in his tweet that "Modi should be praised when he says or does the right thing" was not a praise for Mr. Modi, but an argument for the Congress to enhance its credibility with fair minded voters who had abandoned the party for the BJP but can be won back

I intervened more than 50 times in Parliament, spoke against 17 Bills with courage and conviction. Can any of my critics from Kerala say they have done so? Who on earth can credibly accuse me of volte face from the stand I took when I sat alongside you in the last Lok Sabha again, especially in the national context.

"Mr. Modi has done little worth praising. But he has been effective in raising his vote percentage across India from 31% in 2014 to 37% in 2019 and as a party which stayed around 19%, we, in the Congress need to make an effort to understand why," he said.

Mr. Tharoor said he was "astonished to hear" that Mr. Ramachandran believed he had justified Mr. Modi. On the contrary, he continued to be a vehement critic of Mr. Modi as could be seen from debates in the recent Lok Sabha session.

"Find me one leader from our State who has made 10% of the effort I made to study, research, anticipate and oppose the Modi government on every Bill they sought to introduce against the spirit of the Constitution and the values of the Congress. I intervened more than 50 times in Parliament, spoke against 17 Bills with courage and conviction. Can any of my critics from Kerala say they have done so? Who on earth can credibly accuse me of volte face from the stand I took when I sat alongside you in the last Lok Sabha?"

Mr. Tharoor said he had always used the power of his pen and his credibility as an author to write against the Modi government's first term. In addition, the BJP had filed two cases against him for demonising Mr. Modi, of which, one was for an arrest warrant, that he considered as a badge of honour.

Sulking Ministers take charge in Karnataka

Central leaders do not want to accommodate dissenting voices: party strategist

STAFF REPORTER BENGALURU

As the dust over portfolio allocation seems to be settling down, those who did not make it to the Karnataka Cabinet have been exerting pressure for a second expansion. Though Chief Minister B.S. Yediyurappa is also reportedly keen on this, the party central leadership has ruled out any such move till the case of disqualification of the rebel MLAs - pending before the Supreme Court - is settled.

"The next round of Cabinet expansion will happen only when the rebels' case in the Supreme Court is settled," said a senior leader.

Two in waiting

Mr. Yediyurappa is reportedly keen on inducting seventh-time MLA Umesh Katti from Belagavi and three-time MLA Arvind Limbavali from Bengaluru, his close associates and former Ministers, sources close to the Chief Minister said. However, this has been turned down by the high command.

"The central leadership does not want to accommodate any dissenting voice as that will only open a Pandora's box, which may lead to a situation similar to that of the coalition government that was pulled down mainly by unfulfilled ministerial aspirations," a senior BJP strategist said. Meanwhile, most Ministers sulking over portfolios or not being made Deputy Chief Minister visited the Secretariat and took charge of their Ministries.

Revenue Minister R. Ashok, Rural Development and Panchayat Raj Minister K.S. Eshwarappa and Tourism Minister C.T. Ravi, who were reportedly sulking, took charge and held their maiden meetings on Wednesday.

Senior Congress leader M. Veerappa Moily on Wednesday alleged that the then Union Minister Jairam Ramesh was among those responsible for "policy paralysis" during the UPA-2 government as he hit out over his controversial remarks on the Prime Minister.

The former Union Minister also slammed party leader Shashi Tharoor for his statement that praising Prime Minister Narendra Modi for doing the right things would lend credibility to the Opposition's criticism of him.

Moily seeks action against Jairam, Tharoor

Says Jairam was among those responsible for 'policy paralysis' during UPA-2

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA BENGALURU

Senior Congress leader M. Veerappa Moily on Wednesday alleged that the then Union Minister Jairam Ramesh was among those responsible for "policy paralysis" during the UPA-2 government as he hit out over his controversial remarks on the Prime Minister.

The former Union Minister also slammed party leader Shashi Tharoor for his statement that praising Prime Minister Narendra Modi for doing the right things would lend credibility to the Opposition's criticism of him.

'Unfortunate statements'

Terming the statements "most unfortunate," Mr. Moily called for appropriate disciplinary action against the two leaders by the Congress leadership.

"He [Mr. Ramesh] is responsible for policy paralysis of our government [UPA-2] and he is also responsible for compromising the principles of governance many a time," Mr. Moily alleged in an interview to PTI.

He later clarified that Mr. Ramesh was among those responsible for the policy paralysis and "not the only person".

"He [Mr. Ramesh] was Environment Minister... he was also Minister in charge of Rural Development... there... on land acquisition. A lot of hardship was created for industrialists acquiring land and industries' establishment. [When he was] Environment [Minister], everything was negative... no system was evolved to clear it [environment clearance for projects]," Mr. Moily alleged.

"As if the Congress is demonising [Mr. Modi]," Mr. Moily said in a counter to Mr. Ramesh, who had recently expressed the view that "demonising" the Prime Minister all the time was not going to help.

Mr. Moily claimed that Mr. Ramesh's remark was in "very bad taste," and charged the latter with "compromising himself" with the BJP with such a statement.

"And any leader who would like to give such a statement, I think, they are not doing service to the Congress party or its leadership. Because they enjoy power as Ministers, once they come in the Opposition, they would keep a bridge with the ruling party," Mr. Moily said.

Claiming that Mr. Tharoor was never considered as a mature politician, he said, "He [Mr. Tharoor] is often fond of giving statements and finding his place in the press. That's all." "I don't think his [Mr. Tharoor's] statement could be taken that seriously," he said.

CHENNAI
Before leaving on a fortnight-long trip to the U.K., the U.S. and Dubai on Wednesday, Tamil Nadu Chief Minister Edappadi K. Palaniswami hit back at DMK president M.K. Stalin for criticising his foreign visit, asking why the DMK leader hadn't yet explained his "frequent personal" foreign trips.

New ₹9.3 crore study to check antibiotic resistance in Ganga

The project, expected to last two years, will identify sources of Escherichia coli

JACOB KOSHY
NEW DELHI
The government has commissioned a ₹9.3 crore study to assess the microbial diversity along the entire length of the Ganga and test if stretches of the 2,500 km long river contain microbes that may promote "antibiotic resistance".

The project, expected to last two years, is to be undertaken by scientists at the Motilal Nehru Institute of Technology, Allahabad; the National Environmental Engineering Research Institute (NEERI), Nagpur; Sardar Patel Institute of Science & Technology, Gorakhpur, as well as start-up companies, Phixgen and Xcelris Labs. The latter two provide genome sequencing services, which in this case will involve mapping the genomes of the microbes sampled.

Clean drive: The project aims at identifying contaminants in the river and the threat to human health. *K.R. DEEPAK

The aims of the research project, according to a note by the National Mission for Clean Ganga under the Jal Shakti Ministry is to indicate the type of "contamination" (sewage and industrial) in the river and "threat to human health (antibiotic resistance surge)", identifying sources of Escherichia coli, a type of bacteria that lives in the gut of animals and humans. While largely harmless, some species have been linked to intestinal disease as well as aggravating antibiotic resistance.

'Entire stretch'
There have been several studies that have looked at microbial diversity in the Ganga but these have been isolation. No study has looked at the "entire stretch" of the river, according to Atya Kapley, a scientist at NEERI and part of the project.

In 2014, researchers from Newcastle University in the U.K. and IIT-Delhi sampled water and sediments at seven sites along the Ganga in different seasons. They reported in the peer-reviewed Environmental Science and Technology that levels of resistance genes that lead to "superbugs" were about 60 times greater during the pilgrimage months of May and June than at other times of the year.

A 2017 report commissioned by the Union Department of Biotechnology and the U.K. Research Council underlined that India had some of the highest antibiotic resistance rates among bacteria that commonly cause infections.

Discrimination alleged in varsities

NEW DELHI
The mothers of Rohith Vemula and Dr. Payal Tadvi moved the Supreme Court on Wednesday seeking a direction to the University Grants Commission to take steps to implement norms against "rampant" caste discrimination in varsities and higher educational institutions.

Abeda Salim Tadvi is the mother of Dr. Payal Tadvi, a tribal student of TN Topiwala National Medical College who committed suicide on May 22, 2019 after being subjected to caste-based discrimination by her upper caste peers in the college.

Radhika Vemula is the mother of Rohith Vemula, a PhD scholar at Hyderabad

Central University who committed suicide on January 17, 2016 after being subject to caste-based discrimination in the university.

"There have been several incidents of caste-based discrimination against members of the SC, ST community which reflect flagrant non-compliance with the existing norms and regulations in place for the same. These incidents are violative of the fundamental rights to equality, right against discrimination, equal opportunity, abolition of untouchability, and right to life," the petition said.

They urged the court to order the strict enforcement of and compliance with the UGC (Promotion of Equity in Higher Educational Institutions) Regulations, 2012.

They have sought a range of directions, including the revival and funding of Equal Opportunity Cells on the lines of such other existing anti-discrimination internal complaints mechanisms and to include members from the SC/ST communities and independent representatives from NGOs or social activists to ensure objectivity and impartiality in the process.

They urged a direction to universities and higher educational institutions to conduct preparatory courses, bridge courses, including peer learning mechanisms, to support SC/ST students and first/second generation learners from these communities on campus.

Chandrayaan-2 nears Moon

Third orbit manoeuvre narrows gap

Chandrayaan-2 narrowed its distance from the Moon after a manoeuvre on Wednesday morning. The Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) said it completed the third orbit action lasting nearly 20 minutes to bring the spacecraft closer to the Moon. It was done from the Mission Operations Complex at ISTRAC in Bengaluru.

An update on Day 38 of the launch said, "The third lunar-bound orbit manoeuvre of Chandrayaan-2 spacecraft was performed successfully today (August

On track: Chandrayaan-2 completed an action lasting nearly 20 minutes to bring the spacecraft closer to the Moon. *ISRO

A total of five manoeuvres are planned to gradually make the lunar craft's oval orbit circular. It now goes around the Moon in a 179 km x 1,412 km orbit - shifting about 3,000 km closer to its target at the far end of the oval. It is due to reach the desired circular orbit after two more orbit reducing operations - on August 30 and September 1.

Launched on July 22 from Sriharikota, Chandrayaan-2 has been in lunar orbits since August 20. It is due to land on Moon in the early hours of September 7.

Mega dam plan leads to fury on Assam border

GUWAHATI

The National Green Tribunal's nod for restarting construction of the 2,000 MW Subansiri Lower Hydroelectric Project at Gerukamukh on the Assam-Arunachal Pradesh border has triggered a string of protests.

Tribal organisations in Assam such as the Takam Mising Porin Kebang and All Assam Chutia Students' Union have stepped up their anti-mega dam movement with hydropower major NHPC planning to begin work from October.

Work on the mega project across river Subansiri was started in 2006 but halted in 2011 owing to various local issues, including submergence fears in the downstream areas. NHPC officials said 65% of the work was done at the time and the remaining work would take less than four years.

The hydropower major has been losing an estimated ₹10 crore per day on the project, estimated to cost ₹20,000 crore on completion.

"Our prime concern is people's safety. Unless the government takes adequate measures to ensure safety and livelihood of the affected people, along with protection of biodiversity, there is no question of restarting construction," the organisations said in a joint statement.

Dibang project

The Subansiri Lower project has not met with any resistance in Arunachal Pradesh, but people in the State have expressed concern over the 2,880 MW Dibang hydroelectric project estimated to cost ₹28,080 crore. The Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs had cleared the project in July.

SO₂: Sulphur Dioxide. Short-term exposure can harm the respiratory system, making breathing difficult. It can affect visibility by reacting with other air particles to form haze and stain culturally important objects such as statues and monuments.
NO₂: Nitrogen Dioxide. Aggravates respiratory illness, causes haze to form by reacting with other air particles, causes acid rain, pollutes coastal waters.
CO: Carbon monoxide. High concentration in air reduces oxygen supply to critical organs like the heart and brain. At very high levels, it can cause dizziness, confusion, unconsciousness and even death.
PM2.5 & PM10: Particulate matter pollution can cause irritation of the eyes, nose and throat, coughing, chest tightness and shortness of breath, reduced lung function, irregular heartbeat, asthma attacks, heart attacks and premature death in people with heart or lung disease.

Senior AI pilot forced to resign

Rohit Bhasin had allegedly shoplifted a wallet from Sydney

NEW DELHI

Air India has forced its Regional Director for East, Rohit Bhasin, to resign after an internal probe found that he had shoplifted a wallet from a duty-free shop at the Sydney airport on June 22, airline officials said on Wednesday.

The national carrier rejected his request to exit the airline under the Voluntary Re-irement Scheme (VRS), which would have given him certain post-retirement benefits, said an official.

In April 2016, Bhasin was involved in another serious incident while operating a Delhi-Paris flight as the pilot-in-command. Before take off, he had asked the first officer to enter fraudulent low temperature in the system so that take off was permitted.

Once the flight took off, he took the B787 Dreamliner aircraft to an altitude that was beyond its operational capability, endangering the lives of passengers, the official said.

His last day at Air India would be August 31. "Bhasin's suspension was revoked on Monday so that his resignation can be accepted on Tuesday," said the official.

Message delivered

Not everything went right at the G-7 summit, but PM Modi got the ear of President Trump

Prime Minister Narendra Modi's twin missions as a special invitee to the G-7 summit in France over the weekend was to address the world's seven most advanced economies on Climate Change and Digital Transformation, but it was his meeting with U.S. President Donald Trump that wound up taking centre-stage. Mr. Modi took the initiative to clear the air about Jammu and Kashmir. This was necessitated by the repeated references that Mr. Trump has made about U.S. mediation between India and Pakistan over Kashmir, as well as a briefing by a senior administration official last week, who said that Mr. Trump would "want to hear from Prime Minister Modi on how he plans to reduce regional tensions and uphold respect for human rights in Kashmir". Both U.S. statements run counter to the Indian position that the withdrawal of special status to J&K under the Constitution is an "internal matter", and the issue of Kashmir will be resolved bilaterally with Pakistan. In the event, Mr. Modi appeared to have driven the message home, and Mr. Trump backed away from both statements. The two leaders also appeared to have made some headway on deadlocked trade talks between India and the U.S., and have decided that their trade representatives, USTR Robert Lighthizer and Commerce Minister Piyush Goyal, will meet ahead of the Modi visit to the U.S. in September.

The interaction between Mr. Modi and Mr. Trump appeared to be in line with the broader themes that characterised this year's G-7 summit, where bilateral meetings appeared a little more successful than the multilateral meeting itself. As host, French President Emmanuel Macron decided to invite Iranian Foreign Minister Javad Zarif, but the other G-7 members rejected any suggestion to include him in their conclave to discuss the future of the JCPOA nuclear deal. Mr. Trump's push to invite Russia back into the club (it was called the G-8 until Russia was suspended in 2014), which represents more than half the world's wealth also came a cropper as the other members did not agree to Russian President Putin's re-entry. As one of nine special guests invited to address various sessions, Mr. Modi spoke on how India is keeping its climate change commitments, but it was a session where Mr. Trump, whose presence was vital given the U.S.'s walkout from the Paris accord, didn't make an appearance. G-7 members also discussed the Amazon fire crisis and pledged over $20 million to Brazil, but were rebuffed after a spat broke out between Brazilian President Jair Bolsonaro and Mr. Macron. It came as no surprise that the summit ended as it did: for the first time in the grouping's 44-year old history, there was no joint communiqué.

Murder most foul

India needs a comprehensive law to deal with 'honour killing'

The use of murderous violence in the face of imagined threats to family or community honour is an unfortunate reality in most parts of the country. The term 'honour killing' is being used widely to describe the class of murders that family members commit while seeking to impose on young couples their medieval view that all marriages should be within their community. The Supreme Court, which has been intervening repeatedly to preserve the freedom of marital choice of individuals, once remarked that there is no 'honour' in 'honour killing'. Various judgments have highlighted the need to come down on such crimes, as well as the social structures that keep such a communal outlook alive. The judgment of the Principal Sessions Court, Kottayam, Kerala, awarding life imprisonment to 10 men involved in the abduction and murder of Kevin Joseph, a 23-year-old Dalit Christian, in May 2018, is in line with the apex court's views. The investigation and trial into Kevin's murder have been notably fast. Kevin was abducted by a group led by Shyanu Chacko, the principal accused and brother of Neenu, Kevin's fiancée, just as the young man was making arrangements to have his marriage registered. The court ruled that it was an 'honour killing' based on Neenu's testimony that her family was vehemently against the marriage as Kevin was a Dalit. The police managed to drive home the guilt of the accused by digital and electronic evidence, including records showing mobile phone signal locations and CCTV footage, to confirm the time and the routes through which the accused had taken Kevin before drowning him.

The court rightly chose not to award the death penalty. Instead it handed down two separate life terms, one each for kidnapping with intention to threaten the victim with death, and for murder. Even though there is a Supreme Court judgment allowing trial courts to deem 'honour killings' as those that fall under the 'rarest of rare cases' category, the trial judge chose to take note of the fact that the accused were young and had no previous criminal background. It is disquieting that the 'honour killing' phenomenon persists in highly literate societies too. Discrimination against Dalits is not limited to Hindu communities listed as Scheduled Castes, but extends to those who have converted to other religions too. At a time when caste groups have become politically organised and caste associations attract the young and the educated, there is a need for a redoubled effort to eliminate the evils of a stratified society. In particular, administrators must give full effect to the various preventive, remedial and punitive measures recommended by the Supreme Court. The Centre may also examine the need for a comprehensive law to curb killings in the name of honour and prohibit interference in matrimonial choice of individuals.

Hardly the brick and mortar of a revival

The transfer of the RBI's surplus is only a stopgap measure which will not address the key problem of a lack of demand

JAYATI GHOSH

There is no longer any room for doubt on the parlous state of the Indian economy. The automobile industry, seen as a bellwether of activity in the post-liberalisation years, is in crisis, as automakers, parts manufacturers and dealers have laid off about 350,000 workers since April this year, with more job cuts likely. While this could still reflect falling demand only from higher income groups, recently, Parle Products, once the world's largest selling biscuit brands, announced that it may have to lay off up to 10,000 workers (around a tenth of its workforce). The company blamed falling sales due to the Goods and Services Tax (GST) that led to higher prices of the cheapest small packets of biscuits at a time of extreme price sensitivity because of reduced livelihood, especially among rural consumers.

Home budgets under strain

Sales in the fast-moving consumer goods (FMCG) sector as a whole grew at only 10% in the April-June quarter of this year, less than nominal GDP growth. The slowdown in sales is across food and non-food items, with the biggest reductions in salty snacks and biscuits, spices, soaps and packaged tea. These represent the more discretionary element of consumer spending even among the poor — the items more likely to be cut down when household budgets are under strain.

Economists with the government who finally recognised that there is a problem have blamed the current situation on the "financial stress" inherited from the United Progressive Alliance government more than five years ago, which is apparently preventing investment because "no one trusts anyone else". But this isolates only one factor in the current slowdown: the undoubted mess in the credit system, reflecting both the overhang of bad debts of banks (worse today than in 2014) and the erosion of non-banks after the collapse of the aggressive lender, Infrastructure Leasing & Financial Services Limited.

This is a factor, but this explanation completely misses the demand side of the story. It is clear beyond doubt now that the slowdown in mass consumption, combined with falling and then subdued rates of investment over several years, have led to what is undeniably a crisis of inadequate effective demand in the economy.

This scenario has been unfolding for a while because of a medium-term trajectory in which the fruits of growth went disproportionately to a small elite of big capital and rich individuals without translating into broader economic improvement. The increasing inequality associated with jobless growth meant that mass consumption demand did not rise as expected with rapid GDP growth.

Impact of demonetisation

The hugely damaging impact of demonetisation in November 2016 was further accentuated by the poor implementation of the GST barely seven months later. These badly managed policy measures served as body blows to informal economic activity, causing major declines in employment and output. At first, they did not affect formal enterprises so much as they gained at the cost of informal ones. But the resulting loss in livelihoods and wage incomes eventually had an effect on demand for formal sector output, which has worsened over time because there have been no counterbalancing moves by the government. Total employment actually declined by more than 15 million workers between 2011-12 and 2017-18, even as unemployment rates reached their highest levels in nearly half a century.

This operated in addition to a medium-term trend of wage suppression, something that was even celebrated by the late former Finance Minister Arun Jaitley as a means of combating inflation. Rural wages have been stagnant or declining in the recent period. Meanwhile, the continuing crisis of cultivation has obviously affected the purchasing power of the farming community. Urban wage incomes are also apparently not keeping pace with inflation, even as informal activity and "start-ups" in urban areas have faltered.

The government could have countered this adverse impact of declining employment and consumption demand, which in turn reduced the profit expectations of producers in formal enterprises, by providing a fiscal stimulus. It did not do so. Instead, it kept assuming or hoping that using optical measures — manipulating "Ease of Doing Business" indicators and offering further incentives to foreign capital to attract more inflows, however volatile — would somehow attract investment into the economy that would counteract all the negative impulses.

Private investors simply kept demanding more fiscal and regulatory concessions even as they continued to sit on investment plans as they waited for overall demand improvement. More recent complaints of the private corporate sector have been about oppressive tax collection methods of a government desperate to meet its revenue targets. But these along with the greater difficulties of accessing loans from both banks and non-banks are irritants that would have been tolerated in a buoyant economy. They have become serious issues now because of the wider stagnation.

Supply-side approach

In this context, the Finance Minister's recent announcements of measures to boost the flagging economy are not a case of "too little too late"; rather, they completely miss the point. They do nothing to address the issue of inadequate demand generation or the underlying tendencies of wage suppression and low employment growth. Instead, they once again reveal a supply-side approach to the problem, which is unlikely to yield much benefit.

Even these measures are mostly cosmetic or affect only a small segment of the economy, not enough to cause any real change in economic direction. The capital infusion of ₹70,000 crore into public sector banks had already been announced in the Budget; frontloading this inadequate amount is not going to rev up an economy if those whom banks are willing to lend to are hesitant to invest. Giving into demands of foreign portfolio investors with regard to taxation likewise does nothing to increase domestic demand; it simply provides some solace to the stock market. The middle classes repaying home loans may see a minor benefit if banks actually do pass on lower interest rates, but this too will not provide a major boost to the economy. The decision of the government to buy more cars to shore up the automobile industry is bizarre in the extreme, because it undermines the medium-term strategy of shifting to electric vehicles as soon as possible.

What could the Finance Minister have done instead? If the immediate problem is lack of demand, the immediate response should be to increase it — ideally in ways that provide the desired basis for future economic growth.

Rural focus

Rural distress is real and deeper and greater than the much-hyped distress of angel investors and high net worth individuals; so a massive increase in rural public expenditure, including in the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme to provide public works as well as in social spending would provide immediate relief. The multiplier effects of such spending would generate more employment, incomes, consumption and, therefore, investment over time — as well as more tax revenues for the government. There is also both scope and need for increases in "green" public investment for a sustainable future.

But to seize this crisis as an opportunity for progressive change would require more visionary economic policy making, something that this government has been sadly lacking in.

So does the massive transfer of the Reserve Bank of India's surplus amounting to ₹1.76 lakh crore suggests that this is the government's game plan? Unfortunately, because of the mess in public finances, all that this is likely to do is fill the massive gap left by inadequate tax collection, thereby letting the Finance Minister off in the current fiscal year from another embarrassing situation of budgetary discrepancies. The proposed Budget was not particularly expansionary and did not provide for more spending in the areas required. So this stopgap measure may provide more fiscal space than before, without really addressing the basic problem.

Kashmir's information vacuum

Legislative backing is being appropriated to normalise communication shutdowns

AAYUSH RATHI & AKRITI BOPANNA

On August 4, around midnight, Jammu and Kashmir was thrust into a near total communication shutdown. In the continuing aftermath of the dilution of Article 370, cable television, cellular services, landline and Internet and even the postal services have been rendered inoperational. Even hospitals and fire stations have not been spared. While law enforcement personnel have been provided satellite phones, locals are having to queue up outside designated government offices and register the numbers they want to call. The blackout is all encompassing.

The erstwhile State of Jammu and Kashmir is accustomed to the flicking on of the "Internet kill-switch", but this indiscriminate embargo is unprecedented. The blocking of multi-point/two-way communication is quite frequent in Kashmir, with close to 55 instances of partial or complete Internet shutdowns being recorded just this year. Of the 347 cases of shutdown that have been imposed in India since 2012, 51% have been in Kashmir. The blocking of one-way communication media, such as cable television, however, is new. Even the measures adopted during the Kargil war in 1999 stopped short of blocking telephone lines.

Appearing for the incumbent government on a petition challenging the communications shutdown in Kashmir, the Attorney General of India, K.K. Venugopal, made the necessary-for-law-and-order argument.

However, recent research by Jan Ryzdzak looking exclusively at network shutdowns in India has shown no evidence backing this claim. On the contrary, network shutdowns have been shown to compel actors wanting to engage in collective action to substitute non-violent mobilisation for more violent means as the latter requires less coordination.

In dubious company

Network shutdowns have a limited and inconsistent effect on even structured, non-violent protests. Cross-country comparative research indicates that the shutdown of communication for achieving objectives of social control is usually the riposte of authoritarian regimes. The shroud of secrecy it creates allows for further controversial measures to be effected away from public scrutiny. Authoritarian regimes masquerading as liberal democracies are following suit. In 2016, the Turkish government had ordered the shutdown of over 100 media companies in the aftermath of a failed military coup. Earlier this year, Joseph Kabila's government in the Democratic Republic of Congo had shut down Internet and SMS services for three weeks under the pretext of preventing the circulation of fake election results.

Mr. Venugopal further reassured the Supreme Court that the residents of Kashmir would experience the least amount of inconvenience. This line assumes that the primary use of telecommunication networks is for supposedly banal interpersonal interaction. What is forgotten is that these networks function both as an "infrastructure" and as medium of communication. Impacting either function has dire and simultaneous consequences on its use as the other. As an infrastructure, they are akin to a public utility and are foundational to the operation of critical systems such as water supply and finance.

In the Kashmir Valley, over half the business transactions are said to happen online. The payment of wages for the government-run employment guarantee scheme for unskilled manual labour is almost entirely made electronically — 99.56% in Jammu and Kashmir. The reliance on the Internet for bank-related transactions has meant that automated teller machines and banks are inoperative. What is telling is that the increasing recourse to network shutdowns as a law and order tool in India is also happening simultaneously with the government's digitisation drive. Information flows are being simultaneously facilitated and throttled.

Ambiguous backing

Moreover, communication shutdowns have ambiguous legal backing. One approach imposes them as an order passed under Section 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. A colonial relic, Section 144 is frequently used for the imposition of curfew in 'sensitive' areas as a preventive measure against public demonstrations. This approach lacks procedural accountability and transparency. Orders are not mandated to be publicly notified; they do not identify the duration of the lockdown or envision an appeal mechanism.

Perhaps realising these challenges, the Temporary Suspension of Telecom Services (Public Emergency or Public Safety) Rules, 2017, notified under the Telegraph Act, do incorporate a review mechanism. However, reviewing officials do not have the authority to revoke a shutdown order even if it is deemed illegal. The grounds for effectuating any shutdown also have not been elaborated other than for 'public emergency' or 'public safety' — both these terms are undefined. Legislative backing, then, is being appropriated to normalise, not curb, communication shutdowns. Tellingly, the owner of an Internet service provider in Kashmir pointed out that with Internet shutdowns becoming so common, often the shape that an order takes is of a call from a government official, while the procedural documentation follows much later.

Treated as collateral damage in imposing communication blackouts are the fundamental freedoms of speech and expression, trade, and also of association. The imposition of Section 144 along with the virtual curfew is designed to restrict the freedom to assemble peacefully. Such preemptive measures assume that any assembly will be violent along with negating the potential utility of technological means in maintaining social order (such as responsible digital journalism checking the spread of rumours).

Most critically, this enables a complete information vacuum, the only salve from which is information supplied by the suppressor. Of the days leading up to August 5 and the days since, sparse information is publicly available. Local newspaper outlets in Kashmir are inoperative. This lack of information necessarily precludes effective democratic participation. Beneath the national security sentiments, a key motivation for network shutdown presents itself: that of political censorship through the criminalisation of dissent.

RBI's autonomy

Despite the protestations of the Finance Minister to the contrary, one cannot but observe a significant erosion in recent times in the autonomy of the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) (Front page, "Questions on RBI's credibility outlandish, says Nirmala", Aug. 23). Two Governors have had to leave the office before the completion of their terms on finding that their views were not to the liking of the mandarins in the Finance Ministry. Among the reasons cited for Urijit Patel's departure was the government's expressed desire for transfer of a major part of the reserves of the RBI. It is not uncommon to find tensions and dissonance of views between the central bank of a country and those in charge of fiscal policy. However, in normal circumstances, these are resolved and not allowed to spill out in the public.

The wealth creators

The Finance Minister last week said the government 'respects' the 'wealth creators'. It is said that more than 50% of contribution to India's GDP comes from workers in the unorganised sector, who form around 93% of the country's workforce. Being the real 'wealth creators', they deserve to be provided at least a minimum social security package. Many of them live in slums and platforms and are deprived of access to good education or health care. They are the people who infuse life into the market by spending the little they earn and they are the people who vote with the lofty hopes of seeing some light at the end of the tunnel. The Finance Minister should consider the woes of these wealth creators on priority.

Clean cooking

Many Indian men living in rural areas maintain primitive attitudes when it comes to clean cooking methods (OpEd, "Cooking with gas, not wood", Aug. 28). The gender dynamics prevalent in patriarchal rural families is evident from the article. The household patriarch, who holds the family's purse strings, exercises control over women by relegating them to smoke-filled kitchens. Rural women need to be sensitised to the politics behind such deprivation. In reality, the gas stove has been a life-altering appliance that has averted deaths caused by asphyxiation and asthma due to smoke emitted from solid fuels. Making cylinders available to rural women at subsidised rates is surely a positive step.

Bypassing Constitution

Jawaharlal Nehru said that Universal adult suffrage is not an experiment but the fulfilment of a promise.

This assumes relevance in the context of Article 370's dilution, at a time when Jammu and Kashmir had not elected Assembly and the wishes of Kashmiris to exercise their franchise had not been fulfilled. The special status guaranteed to the erstwhile State was an integral part of our Constitution. The Centre may proclaim that it has done a 'constitutional bypass' but it has actually 'bypassed the Constitution'.

Democracy and its discontents

ARUN MAIRA

Civilisation progresses with the evolution of institutions designed by humans to govern their affairs. Institutions of electoral democracy have evolved over the centuries, with notable innovations in the U.K., France and the U.S. that provided models for electoral democracies everywhere. These models have been vigorously exported by Western countries to promote democracy around the world. Now, the system of democracy invented in the West and exported to the rest is falling in the West. "Are Western democracies becoming ungovernable?" asks The Economist. Elected governments are in office, but not in power, it says. Many countries in Europe cannot form stable governments because the largest party does not command a majority. Coalitions are unstable. Parliaments are unable to pass laws. "The home of failure to pass meaningful laws is the United States", it says. Americans will point a finger back to The Economist's home country: the performance of political parties in the British House of Commons has not been edifying either.

Democracy in India

By these yardsticks, democracy is shining in India. With a strong government at the Centre, Parliament has passed a slew of big laws recently. The most recent is the change in the governance set-up of Jammu and Kashmir, which has been haunting India's constitutional arrangements.

However, democracy consists of much more than elections and passage of laws. India has a great Constitution. It conducts free and fair elections. Its Parliament has passed many landmark laws since Independence. Yet failures of governance (and democracy) in India can be seen on the ground, in so-called 'backward areas' in the heartlands. Indeed, the Indian government has justified its bold reduction of powers of Jammu and Kashmir's elected Assembly on the grounds that democracy was not functioning within the State and benefits of good governnance were not reaching the citizens.

Democracies need an architecture of institutions. Some institutions provide the vertical pillars. Other institutions provide the lateral binders that give strength and stability to the democratic structure. In the popular discourse about democracy, too much attention has been given to the vertical institutions required for people to elect their leaders, and too little to the lateral institutions required to create harmony amongst people.

Universal franchise, elections, and political parties fighting each other to win elections enable a society to determine who is in the majority and has the right to govern. The problem with a majoritarian democracy is that it is not designed to find solutions for complex problems with many points of view. A government with a majority, especially a large one, can become as authoritarian as a dictatorship. It can deny minorities their rights for their views to be considered while framing laws and resolving contentious issues. The people have spoken once in the election; that should be enough. Now, they must leave it to the government in power. Thus, a government elected by a majority can justify the exclusion of the minority.

However, by excluding the views of the many that did not vote for it – and quite often these may even be the majority in the first-past-the-post system – a government reduces its own effectiveness. Those dissatisfied with the governments' decisions go to courts wherever courts are independent, like in India. However, courts are not set up to find policy solutions to complex problems and must interpret the laws as written. In India, many have complained that courts are venturing into matters of governance that they should not. This is a sign that something is missing in India's democracy.

When problems are complex, good governance requires effective methods for people's participation. Referendums of the entire electorate give an illusion of good democracy – that the people have been consulted. Politicians on both sides of a referendum will run populist campaigns appealing to the basest of instincts to sway the opinions of the masses. Whereas, when the issue is complex, voters should be educated about what they are voting for. And then, when a small majority determines how all must go (52% wanted Britain to leave the European Union versus 48% that did not), referendums become yet another example of the problem with a majoritarian democracy rather than a good solution.

Three layers of institutions

Healthy democracies need three vibrant layers of institutions. At the bottom is the public space and the media in which people must be free to speak up if they want to. On the top is the layer of constitutional institutions – parliaments, courts, etc. Social media has enlarged the public space enormously. Many more people are speaking up and many issues are being raised. Social media provides a good platform for opposing views, but is glaringly inept at reconciling them. On the contrary it is heightening divisive walls. Therefore, more problems require the attention of constitutional institutions above, and they have more on their plate than they can digest.

When elected representatives are expected to vote in their assemblies only according to the wishes of their own constituency and to also follow party whips, they cannot open their minds to listen to the views of other constituents. Thus, assemblies of elected representatives, in which framers of the U.S. Constitution hoped representatives would deliberate upon what is best for the whole system and not just for their parts of it, have become incapable of performing the role they should perform, The Economist laments.

With democratic governance slipping into ineffectual log-jams, it is tempting to close down the public space at the bottom, or to impose a majoritarian view from above to strengthen the government. There is fear that India may be slipping down this path, which may strengthen government on the ground, while stifling democratic governance. It is the road to 'maximum government, minimum governance'.

The weak intermediate layer

Political middles are thinning in democracies everywhere. People want change. Radical parties of the Right and Left are gaining support. The solution for strengthening governance and democracy at the same time is to strengthen the middle layer of institutions within democracies that lie between the open public sphere and formal government institutions. These are spaces where citizens with diverse views can listen to each other, and understand the whole system of which they are only parts. Neither elected assemblies nor social media provide such spaces. Sadly, even think tanks have become divided along ideological and partisan lines.

It is imperative for India to build intermediate level, unofficial or semi-official institutions for non-partisan deliberation amongst concerned citizens. The government must give more space for such institutions to form and operate. When there is global despair about the ability of democratic institutions to deliver the benefits of good governance to citizens, this innovation must become India's invaluable contribution to the history of democracy's evolution.

In Tamil Nadu, making power while the sun shines

MARTIN SCHERFLER

In 2012, Tamil Nadu released its Solar Energy Policy and introduced a net-metering mechanism for rooftop solar panels, becoming the first Indian State to do so. This policy marked a paradigm shift as electricity consumers could now simultaneously become electricity producers.

The net-metering arrangement allowed surplus solar energy exported by consumers to the grid to be credited in energy units (kWh). Consumers paid for the net-imported energy units (import minus export). They received monetary benefits, equivalent to the regular tariff, for the units exported. Consumers with higher electricity tariffs benefited more than those with lower tariffs and most domestic users did not find the mechanism financially attractive.

The Tamil Nadu Solar Energy Policy 2019, announced in February this year, replaced net metering with a net feed-in mechanism. Under this, surplus solar energy exported to the grid will be credited at a tariff fixed by the Tamil Nadu Electricity Regulatory Commission. While for self-consumed units, consumers will get a monetary benefit equivalent to the consumer tariff, for units they export they will receive a feed-in tariff determined by the regulator. The attractiveness of this net feed-in tariff will determine the success of this measure, especially at the domestic-consumer level.

Capacity targets not met

The 2012 policy set a solar energy capacity target of 3,000 MW to be achieved by 2015. Nearly four years later, in January 2019, about 81% of this target had been met, the majority of it having been installed by commercial and industrial entities. The 2019 policy has scaled the capacity target up to 9,000 MW by 2023. About 40% of this, 3,600 MW, is to be met by the consumer category.

Here, an incomprehensible provision is that all High Tension (HT) consumers have been excluded from the net feed-in facility. This means that educational campuses, commercial, industrial and institutional entities and other consumers with an HT connection cannot make use of the facility.

So, why has the rooftop solar model failed to take off in a big way in Tamil Nadu, seven years after the announcement of the first policy? This can be attributed primarily to the State's electricity tariff model.

Take the example of a domestic user with a monthly consumption of 350 kWh. Under the current slab, after accounting for the 50 units per month provided free of cost, the consumer will pay a monthly electricity charge of ₹1,550 – ₹4.43 per kWh of electricity. The utility company, Tamil Nadu Generation and Distribution Corporation (TANGEDCO), incurs an expenditure of ₹8 for every kWh of power delivered, making a steep loss.

Cross-subsidising low-tariff users

To recover this extra cost, the company imposes higher charges on commercial and industrial entities. Hence, the higher-paying consumers end up cross-subsidising the low-tariff ones, creating a vicious cycle. This results in the high-paying consumers either moving their manufacturing base to States with lower electricity tariffs or entering into power-purchase agreements with independent power producers. Hence, TANGEDCO loses its high-value consumers, with the result that the utility's financial losses keep mounting.

To address this issue, electricity tariffs that allow the power distribution company to cover its cost of supply would be a good start. Subsidy, where required, can be provided through a direct cash transfer to those in need, unlike today where the rich and poor consumers receive the same subsidy.

However, apart from such tariff rationalisation, additional elements are required to enable consumer-category rooftop solar power to thrive. First, a fair and transparent net feed-in tariff setting process is needed. In March, a formula was established to determine the tariff, based on which it came to ₹2.28 per kWh for solar photovoltaic systems commissioned during the Financial Year 2019-20. This is extremely low and represents only about 50% of the actual cost of small-scale solar energy generation. With this tariff, the chance of the State meeting its consumer-category solar energy target is close to zero.

Second, innovative rooftop solar programmes, which include alternative financing mechanisms and demand aggregation to reduce the capital cost of solar energy production, will have to be designed.

Lastly, the State may do well in starting with a dedicated feed-in tariff for battery storage system. This would prepare the state to transition into a smart grid future of the 21st century.

Public health versus free speech

Tobacco companies will try their best to prevent pictorial warnings on cigarette packages in the U.S.

R. PRASAD

Ten years after U.S. Congress passed the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, on August 15 this year, the Food and Drug Administration finally issued a proposed rule that pictorial warnings be carried on cigarette packages and advertisements. Once this is finalised, the FDA will be able to specify the images to be used along with the written warning. The images and text will occupy the top 50% of the front and the back panels of the packages. At present, cigarette packages in the U.S. carry only text warnings and only on one side.

Canada was the first to introduce pictorial warnings on cigarette packets in 2001. By October 2018, 118 countries had implemented such warnings in line with the World Health Organisation's Framework Convention on Tobacco Control that came into force in 2005. It is an irony that a country that introduced written health warnings in 1966 and updated it in 1984 to include the Surgeon General's warning still does not carry pictorial warnings on its cigarette packets.

Industry resistance

Stiff opposition from the tobacco industry on the ground that graphic images violate its First Amendment rights protecting free speech has been the main reason why the U.S. has not been able to introduce them. Even the new proposed rule came into being only after the U.S. court for the District of Massachusetts issued an order in March 2019 directing the FDA to publish a rule by August 2019 and a final rule in March next year.

It is almost certain that tobacco companies will challenge the FDA rule before March 2020. In June 2011, the tobacco companies had successfully challenged the introduction of pictorial warnings even after the FDA published the final rule.

By virtue of their small size and placement, text warnings largely remain invisible and fail to convey the harmful effects of smoking. On the other hand, gory pictures are very likely to be noticed, leave a lasting impression of the varied risks of smoking. They also convey the central message immediately and easily.

The power of pictures

Tobacco companies are well aware of the power of pictorial warnings in reducing tobacco consumption, urging users to quit smoking and preventing young adults from taking up smoking. It is for these reasons that the industry will pull out all the stops to prevent the introduction of graphic images in the U.S., one of the biggest markets in the world (1.4 million children between the ages of 12 and 17, and 34 million adults currently smoke).

A 2017 study based on modelling found that pictorial warnings could reduce the prevalence of smoking in the U.S. by 5% by 2020 and up to 10% by 2065. Data from countries that introduced pictorial warnings show how powerful they can be in shaping public opinion and causing a sharp drop in tobacco consumption. For instance, in Canada, there was 12% relative reduction in smoking prevalence in just six years after graphic images were made mandatory on cigarette packages. Similarly, Australia, which introduced graphic images in 2006, witnessed more than a 10% drop in prevalence between 2004 and 2008. The U.K. saw a 10% relative decline in 2009, just a year after image warnings were introduced. The biggest threat that pictorial warnings pose to tobacco companies is in reducing the appeal and consumption of tobacco. About 30% of young adults in 28 European countries and Canada reported that graphic images made them less likely to start smoking.

Pictorial warnings can turn the power of packaging on its head – far from brand building, packages with graphic images will become a mobile medium to spread public health messages at no cost to the government.

Cabinet eases FDI rules in retail, media

Another change the Cabinet has approved is that single-brand retail companies can now start selling online before setting up a brick and mortar store as long as they set one up within two years of starting online sales.

Earlier, they had to set up a brick and mortar store before selling online. "Online sales will lead to creation of jobs in logistics, digital payments, training and product skilling," the government said. Apart from single brand retail, the Cabinet also approved changes to the FDI rules for digital media and coal mining. It has decided to permit 26% FDI, with government approval, for uploading and streaming news and current affairs using digital media, on the lines of print media.

Malik promises 50,000 govt. jobs in J&K, Ladakh

Referring to the detention of around 179 mainstream leaders in J&K, Mr. Malik said, "The more politicians spend time in jail, the more political dividends they are likely to accrue. I have gone to jail 30 times. Those who will go to jail, will become leaders. Let them be there," he said.

"I have gone to jail 30 times. Whoever goes to jail will come out shining as a future leader, they can take political benefit of detentions in future..." Mr. Malik said on being asked when the political leaders will be released. Senior mainstream leaders, including former chief minister Omar Abdullah, Dr. Farooq Abdullah and Mehbooba Mufti have been under detention since August 5.

On the suspension of Internet, Mr. Malik said Internet was the "most dangerous instrument". "Internet is little bit useful for us but more useful for terrorists. It is also used to mobilise and for indoctrination. This is kind of a weapon against us that is why we have stopped it and we will restore it gradually."

J&K DGP Dilbagh Singh admitted that youth had been arrested in the Valley since August 5, adding that "arrests and release" were a dynamic process. "Young men are detained, counselled and released also. It's not a very huge number that should concern you," Mr. Singh said when asked for details on the number of youth arrested so far.

5-judge Bench to hear petitions on Article 370

The CJJ sought a response from the government within the next seven days.

In the past two hearings on pleas filed by Anuradha Bhasin and others, the court had adopted a wait-and-watch approach, expecting the situation to clear up enough for restoration of communications in the Valley.

The three-judge Bench had assembled for a special session to examine the dozen writ petitions dealing with the various issues triggered by the withdrawal of Article 370 and splitting of the State of Jammu and Kashmir into two Union Territories.

The Chief Justice said it had been difficult to juggle court schedule as Ayodhya appeals were being continuously heard by a Constitution Bench led by him.

The various petitions include ones by advocate M.L. Sharma and the National Conference party, which had challenged the Centre's "unilateral" move to impose curfew and unravel the unique federal structure of India by dividing Jammu and Kashmir "without taking consent from the people" to a plea by Mohammed Aleem Sayed, a young lawyer who is worried about his aged parents in the Valley to the likes of Ms. Bhasin, an editor with Kashmir Times, who is fighting to free the Press from the choke-hold of the authorities.

Age of third-degree torture over: Amit Shah

"It should use forensic science to get irrefutable evidence against the suspect that would lead to conviction in court," he said.

The BPRD should work on a proposal to amend various sections of the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure (CrPC) after seeking suggestions from the people. "If a Class XII student wants to join police force, he should be properly guided and arrangements should be made. The BPRD has submitted a proposal for this and it will be placed before the Union Cabinet soon," he said.

Mr. Shah said that in the British era, the police were raised to protect their interests, but now the duty of the police was "protection of the people."

Since Independence, more than 34,000 policemen had lost their lives in the line of duty.

Yechury to visit Valley

He wanted to know about the welfare and whereabouts of his party colleague, but had been refused entry into the State.

"Whether he has Z or Z

Plus category, if a citizen wants to go and meet him, you have to let him," Chief Justice Gogoi, heading the Bench, told Mr. Mehta.

Mr. Mehta said the government would make arrangements to escort Mr. Yechury. "You don't escort, he [Mr. Yechury] will go on his own," the Chief Justice retorted.

A stupid man cannot launder money, ED tells SC

KRISHNADAS RAJAGOPAL NEW DELHI

"A stupid man cannot launder [money]," the Enforcement Directorate (ED) told the Supreme Court, defending its push to arrest former Union Finance Minister P. Chidambaram in the INX Media case.

The ED is investigating the money laundering angle in the case.

Solicitor-General Tushar Mehta, for the ED, told the court that a "stupid man cannot launder" because the crime requires "layers and layers of concealment" devised by a crafty brain.

Mr. Mehta then explained the "basics" of money laundering to a Bench of Justices R. Banumathi and A.S. Bopanna.

"If I rob a bank - this is only an example for the benefit of Your Lordships' understanding - of ₹2,000 crore, I have to park the money somewhere. So I launder the proceeds of the crime... Money laundering is never thought of in the heat of the moment... It has to be cleverly crafted," he said.

It was usually difficult to trace the money trail. Transactions were digital and global. "It is not like rape where forensics can collect blood stains," he said.

India, he said, was part of an international community which has vowed to wipe out the global phenomenon of money laundering. The crime had affected the integrity and economy of nations.

'It is prevention'

Mr. Chidambaram's lawyers have described the arrest as a deliberate attempt to humiliate the senior Congress leader. "They say it was humiliation, humiliation, humili-liation. We say it is prevention, prevention," Mr. Mehta said. Money laundering was an independent crime and the offenders faced extradition. The question of custodial interrogation should be left to the special court to decide, he noted.

The probe agencies have based their case against Mr. Chidambaram on cogent evidence and not on fabricated records, as contended by the other side, he said. "We have received material, like records from banks all over the world... We have been given specific inputs like house numbers, companies which own them, etc," he said.

Mr. Mehta submitted that a statutory procedure was followed before seeking arrest. Firstly, only a Director (of the ED) can make an arrest, that too, after recording the reasons for the arrest in writing. Any material collected as evidence in the course of investigation was sent to a neutral adjudicatory authority. The material was kept enclosed in doubly sealed envelopes and not opened. "It is too sensitive... Copies of evidence cannot be shared with accused before chargesheet is filed," he contended.

Sibal's intervention

Senior advocate Kapil Sibal, for Mr. Chidambaram, intervened to say he never argued for getting any copies of the evidence.

He argued only on the limited point that the ED should have confronted Mr. Chidambaram first with the evidence before using them in a sealed cover in the Delhi High Court to deny him anticipatory bail on August 20.

Mr. Sibal said this way the High Court could have had the benefit of both the evidence as well as Mr. Chidam-baram's reactions to them before deciding the question of anticipatory bail.

Mr. Sibal argued that Mr. Chidambaram was denied bail solely on the basis of sealed documents handed over to the Delhi High Court judge.

"He [Mr. Mehta] has got it wrong. I never said I wanted copies of the evidence. I only said the accused should have been confronted with the evidence first. Only such evidence should have been shown to the High Court to deny him anticipatory bail," Mr. Sibal protested.

While both lawyers clashed over what was actually argued, Justice Banumathi drew on her past experience as trial judge to consult her handwritten notes of the arguments made in the past two days. Her notes agreed with Mr. Sibal's version.

Guide to check names in NRC list

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT GUWAHATI

The office of the State Coordinator for the National Register of Citizens (NRC) in Assam on Wednesday published a guide for checking one's name in the final list to be published on August 31.

The links will be available on www.nrcassam.nic.in from August 31, titled "Supplementary list of inclusions/exclusions status (final NRC status)".

People who could view the results would be those who had submitted a claim after not being included in the complete draft published on July 30, 2018, or excluded via the additional draft exclusions list published on June 26 this year, or had any objection filed against their inclusion, the NRC authority said.

Such people could see their status in the supplementary list of inclusion by visiting their designated NSK (NRC Seva Kendra) or office of the circle officers or deputy commissioners.

People, the guide said, could also check their status online by typing their Application Receipt Numbers or ARNs.

inclusion status. They continue to be included in the final NRC," he said.

Assam published the first NRC in 1951. Alleged large-scale illegal immigration from East Pakistan (1947-1971) and Bangladesh since 1971 led to the anti-foreigners' agitation in 1979 and the signing of the Assam Accord that sought the updating of the 1951 register.

The Central government took the first formal decision to update the NRC in 1999 and a resolution to undertake the exercise was adopted in 2005 in the presence of former Prime Minister Manmohan Singh. But the push came after NGO Assam Public Works filed a case in the Supreme Court in 2009, claiming that 41 lakh foreigners were included in the State's electoral rolls and sought an updated NRC. A pilot project was launched the next year in Barpeta in western Assam and Chhaygaon near Guwahati.

'NRC cannot protect indigenous people'

Various NGOs are against the 1971 base year for identifying foreigners in Assam

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT GUWAHATI

One of the Assam-based organisations that has been pursuing cases related to the National Register of Citizens (NRC) has said that the NRC cannot protect the indigenous people of the State if 1971 remains the base year for identifying foreigners.

The Assam Samilta Mahasangha (ASM), an umbrella organisation of several indigenous groups, said that a final NRC would not be possible until the Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court gives a verdict on its petition. The petition was submitted in December 2014.

The ASM had challenged the Constitutional validity of the midnight of March 24, 1971, as the cut-off date for detecting and deporting foreigners. This date was agreed upon while signing the Assam Accord in August 1985 to end a six-year violent agitation against foreigners in the State.

The ASM had demanded 1951 as the cut-off year for determining citizenship as in other parts of India.

"The NRC to be released on August 31 cannot be the final one until the Constitution Bench gives its verdict on our petitions. The base year of 1971 will not protect the rights of indigenous people because many migrants from erstwhile East Pakistan and later Bangladesh entered Assam from 1951 onward," ASM's working president Motiur Rahman said.

More than 80 organisations battling for indigenous communities had demanded 1951 as the base year for identifying foreigners. These organisations included the National Democratic Front of Bodoland (Progressive), Indigenous Tribal People's Front and Sonowal Kachari Jatiya Parishad.

A code of conduct for legislatures soon

The aim is to check interruptions

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT NEW DELHI

"A common code of conduct will be framed for legislative bodies to check interruptions and for this a committee of presiding officers will be formed, which, after due consultations with the Speakers of Legislative Assemblies and Chairmen of Legislative Councils, will present its report later this year," Lok Sabha Speaker Om Birla said here on Wednesday.

He released this statement after presiding over the meetings of the executive committee of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA) India Region and Presiding Officers of Legislative Bodies in India held in Parliament House Annexe earlier in the day. The Speaker said the presiding officers were of the unanimous view that Parliament and State legislatures, the representative institutions, were accountable to the people and matters concerning different regions need to be constructively discussed and debated.

"There was a consensus among the presiding officers to increase the number of sittings of the State Legislatures and also to increase the productivity of legislative work. It was also felt that there is a need to have extensive and healthy debates in the Legislatures for passing the laws and the House needs to function without any interruptions," the Speaker said.

Babur may not have built Babri Masjid, SC told

'In fact, he may not have even visited Ayodhya'

LEGAL CORRESPONDENT NEW DELHI

The Constitution Bench led by Chief Justice of India Ranjan Gogoi was told on Wednesday that the first Mughal Emperor, Babur, may not have built the 'Babri Masjid' structure in Ayodhya.

In fact, the court was told by senior advocate P.N. Mishra, who appears for the Ram Janmabhoomi Puna-ruddhar Samiti, that Babur may not have even visited Ayodhya.

Mr. Mishra referred to three works - Ain-i-Akbari written by court historian Abu'l Fazl; Humayun nama; and Tuzuk-i-Jahangiri or Memoirs of Jahangir - to argue his claim. He said none of them mentioned that Babur had built the disputed structure.

They said a work by Italian Niccolao Manucci, who is believed to have been a commander of Emperor Aurangzeb, also does not contain any reference to the disputed structure. Manucci did not include hearsay in his work. He noted only incidents he had seen or experienced himself.

There was no reference also to Mir Baqi, a nobleman Muslims believe constructed the disputed structure for Babur.

Mr. Mishra said there might have been some demolition of a structure, probably a temple in the disputed area, during the period of Aurangzeb. He argued that the claim by Sunni Waqf Board that the disputed structure was built in the 16th century was without merit.

The structure had none of the features of a mosque. He said Hindus, from time immemorial, have believed and worshipped Ramjanmabhoomi as the birth place of Lord Ram. Lawyers for the Ayodhya deity, Ram Lala Virajman, have also been contending that the disputed Ramjanmabhoomi is itself a deity and could not have been partitioned.

Senior advocate C.S. Vaidynathan, for the deity, had contended that if there was once a temple on the Ramjanmabhoomi and people were worshipping there as the Lord's birthplace, then nobody could possibly claim ownership by adverse possession. He had said on Wednesday that the Ayodhya deity was a perpetual minor.

SC gets notice on Kureshi's elevation

Collegium to examine it and take a call

LEGAL CORRESPONDENT NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court recorded in a judicial order on Wednesday that the Chief Justice of India has received a communication from the government in response to the apex court Collegium's recommendation to appoint Justice Akil Kureshi as chief justice of Madhya Pradesh High Court.

It is learnt from government sources that the file has been returned. In its short order, the apex court Bench comprising Chief Justice Ranjan Gogoi, Justices S.A. Bobde and S. Abdul Nazeer recorded that "a communication has been received by the office of the Chief Justice of India, on the administrative side, from the Department of Justice. The same will be put up before the Collegium in due course".

The Bench further recorded that the petition filed by the Gujarat High Court Advocates Association would be listed "once the decision of the Collegium is taken on the basis of the response/communication of the Department of Justice".

In an earlier hearing, senior advocate Fali Nariman, representing the association, criticised the "unexplained" delay by the government in taking a call on Justice Kureshi. He said the government should act as a "distinguished communicator" and not resort to what seemed "deliberate inaction" over a recommendation made by the Collegium as way back as May 10. It should clarify whether it had even sought a feedback from the Madhya Pradesh government.

The association alleged that Justice Kureshi's elevation was singled out for uncertainty, while those of other judges, who were recommended along with him, had sailed through.

"The deliberate inaction of the respondent [Centre] in not appointing Mr. Justice Akil Kureshi as the Chief Justice of the Madhya Pradesh High Court impinges and diminishes the primacy of the judiciary in the matters of appointment and transfer of judges to High Court and Supreme Court," the petition filed by the association through its president and senior advocate Yatin Oza submitted.

It said the May 10 recommendation was made by the Collegium in accordance with the law laid down in the Second Judges Case and Memorandum of Procedure for judicial appointments and transfers. It said the "recommendation is rendered moot by the arbitrary inaction by the respondent."

Payment issues on S-400 deal resolved

DINAKAR PERI MOSCOW

All payment issues between India and Russia with regard to the S-400 deal have been resolved very successfully, senior Russian officials said at the ongoing MAKS air show in Russia.

"There were initial difficulties due to banking restrictions. But we talked on Government-to-Government level... It is no more an issue. In certain cases they use Ruble, in certain cases they use Rupee. In certain cases a different currency," said Viktor Klodov, head of international cooperation, Rostec Corporation.

Speaking separately, Dmitry Shugaev, DG, Federal Service of Military-Technical Cooperation of Russia, said that all issues arising over advance payments "have been settled". (The writer is at the MAKS 2019 air show on the invitation of the Russian Government)

BJP, Congress spar over Pak. letter to UN on J&K

Islamabad's Minister quotes Rahul Gandhi, Javadekar says Congress leader now has made a complete U-turn

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

A letter from the Pakistan government to the United Nations, quoting remarks by Opposition leader Rahul Gandhi on Kashmir, has sparked a war of words between the Congress and the BJP. While the BJP has said Mr. Gandhi had "insulted" the country and sought an apology from him, the Congress accused the BJP of "doing cheap politics".

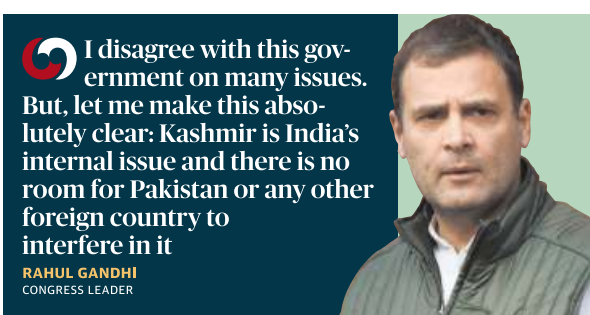

Pakistan's Federal Minister for Human Rights Shireen Mazari, in a letter on the withdrawal of Articles 35A and 370 in Jammu and Kashmir, addressed to multiple UN officials, quoted Mr. Gandhi as saying that people were "dying" in Jammu and Kashmir. The letter mentions Haryana Chief Minister

M.L. Khattar's comments that revoking Article 35A will allow men from the rest of India to marry Kashmiri women.

In response to Ms. Mazari's letter, Mr. Gandhi took to Twitter to hit out at Pakistan for instigating and supporting violence in Jammu and Kashmir, and backed the Government of India's position that withdrawal of special status of J&K under Article 370 was an internal issue.

"I disagree with this government on many issues. But, let me make this absolutely clear: Kashmir is India's internal issue and there is no room for Pakistan or any other foreign country to interfere in it," Mr. Gandhi said on Twitter.

lence because it is instigated and supported by Pakistan which is known to be the prime supporter of terrorism across the world," he said.

Minister's dig

Union Minister of Information and Broadcasting Prakash Javadekar, addressing a press conference in the BJP headquarters in Delhi, said

Mr. Gandhi had made a U-turn on his stand on Kashmir. "He [Mr. Gandhi] has made a complete U-turn not due to his own will but due to circumstances and public pressure," the Minister said.

The Congress leader's allegations about violence in Kashmir were wrong, he said, adding that it was made due to that party's "vote bank" politics.

Taking a dig, Mr. Javadekar asked if Mr. Gandhi's mindset had changed due to a change in his constituency. The Congress leader represents Wayanad, a minority-dominated seat, in the Lok Sabha. Questioned further about his remarks, Mr. Javadekar said those were not about the constituency but it was representative.

Mr. Javadekar did not respond to the Pakistani petition quoting the Haryana Chief Minister and another BJP MLA for remarks on "Kashmiri women".

The Congress slammed Mr. Javadekar's statement. Congress chief spokesperson Randeep Surjewala said the Minister had lost his "political balance". "It is tragic that Mr. Javadekar is twisting a statement made by Mr.

Gandhi which reflected that Indian National Congress and all other parties are united. We are in unison to take on the fake and false propaganda of Pakistan vis-a-vis the State of Jammu & Kashmir," Mr. Surjewala said.

The Congress did not comment on the reference to Mr. Khattar's comments in Ms. Mazari's letter. Manish Tewari, MP, said that taking cognisance of the letter was essentially conceding that Kashmir was a multilateral and not a bilateral issue. "It's imbecile and childish on the part of the BJP to shoot from Shireen Mazari's shoulders because they don't realise the implications of their act. It only plays into a Pakistani game plan to internationalise a strictly bilateral issue," Mr. Tewari told The Hindu.

Never supported J&K blockade: PCI Chairman

'Willing to resign if proved wrong'

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

The Chairman of the Press Council of India, Chandramauli Kumar Prasad, said on Wednesday that he did not support the communication blockade in Kashmir in the intervention petition of the Council in the Supreme Court.

In a letter addressed to the Chairman of The Hindu Group Publishing Private Ltd., N. Ram, he said a plain reading of the intervention application showed that he had "not supported the communication blockade", and he would be willing to resign if he was proved wrong.

Last week, the PCI sought to intervene in the petition filed by Kashmir Times executive editor Anuradha Bhasin, who challenged the restrictions imposed on communications in the State since August 5 when the government revoked the State's special constitutional status.

Mr. Prasad, in his letter, a copy of which was released to reporters, said the very premise on which Mr. Ram's comments at a meeting on Tuesday were made was a "blatant lie". Mr. Ram, he said, was "greatly swayed by distorted media reports".

Mr. Prasad wrote: "In case you agree that there is something called national interest, my anxiety is to know what should prevail when there is head-on collision between individual right and national interest."

36 suffered pellet injuries: official

Governor says pellet guns were used

NEW DELHI

As many as 36 persons have received pellet injuries in the Kashmir Valley since August 5, a senior government official told The Hindu. The official said the numbers were based on records available with authorities of hospitals in Srinagar. The data from other districts were not available.

On Wednesday, Jammu and Kashmir Governor Satyapal Malik admitted that pellet guns were used by security personnel during protests but they took utmost precaution to prevent injuries.

"It's our achievement that there has been no civilian casualty so far. There were allegations that we are concealing the number of deaths, but on the contrary, we are sharing information even on pellet injuries. Barring one case, all pellet injuries were below the waist," Mr. Malik said in Srinagar.

Severe restrictions, including a communication blockade, has been imposed in the Valley since August 5 when Home Minister Amit Shah moved two Bills in the Rajya Sabha to read down Article 370, which granted special status to J&K, and bifurcate the State into Union Territories.

Of the 36 persons who received pellet injuries, eight were reported in the first week of the clampdown, the official said. More than 200 incidents of stone throwing have been reported during the period. "No one has been blinded. Except four, all pellet injuries are below the waist," the official said.

In 2016, after Hizbul Mujahideen "commander" Burhan Wani was killed in an encounter with the security forces, over 70 civilians were killed in a spate of violence and protests in the Kashmir Valley. By 2016 records, from July 8 to September 6, as many as 7,550 civilians were injured, of which 127 were admitted to hospitals.

The security personnel had come under attack for the use of pellet guns, that by official records, had blinded or partially blinded 30 people the same year.

Poor attendance in Srinagar high schools on Day One

SRINAGAR

The J&K government's bid to reopen high schools on Wednesday for the first time in 24 days failed to bring in many students, as parents remained wary of sending their wards in the absence of public transport and communication links.

Burnhall, Delhi Public School, Presentation Convent, Tyndale Biscoe and other private schools wore a deserted look in the morning, despite the government announcement to reopen classes up to Class 10. The staff were present, but the school buses failed to pick up students.

"It's very risky to send my son to school. Who will guarantee his safety? Who will drop him back," asked T.A. Rather, father of a DPS student.

The government-run high schools, opened in areas in the limits of 81 of the III police stations where restrictions were lifted, also registered very thin attendance, an official said.

The government started reopening schools on August 19, but attendance, according to officials, remains "very thin" due to unease on the streets and sporadic stone throwing.

Governor Satyapal Malik said the attendance was "picking up slowly".

He said it would further improve after communication lines are restored in more areas. "All phone lines will start working in Kupwara and Handwara too. A total of 46 of the 95 exchanges are functional," Mr. Malik said.

Delhi HC to hear plea against Faesal's detention

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

The Delhi High Court on Wednesday sought the Centre's response on former IAS official Shah Faesal's petition for a copy of the look-out circular against him. A Bench of Justice Manmohan and Justice Sanjiv Dhillon has listed the case for hearing on September 3 along with a habeas corpus petition filed on behalf of Mr. Faesal.

Central government standing counsel Vikas Mahajan sought time to respond to Mr. Faesal's plea for seeking a copy of the circular.

The Jammu and Kashmir government had informed the High Court that Mr. Faesal was put under detention as per the order of an executive magistrate in Budgam after he created an "unruly atmosphere at the (Srinagar) airport".

Moscow won't mediate on Kashmir: envoy

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

Moscow follows a policy of non-interference in domestic affairs of countries and will not mediate in the Kashmir issue unless requested by both India and Pakistan, said an official of the Embassy of Russia here. The comments came at a press interaction where the Russian envoy declared the agenda of the upcoming Eastern Economic Forum where

Prime Minister Narendra Modi is the chief guest.

"The events next week are extraordinary. Their meeting in Vladivostok, which is called the Pacific capital of Russia, will open a new chapter in the Russia-India special and privileged strategic partnership," said Ambassador Nikolay Kudashov announcing that Mr. Modi would meet President Vladimir Putin during the September 4-5 visit.

Nation heading towards presidential form: Mamata

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
KOLKATA

West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee on Wednesday warned that the country was heading towards a presidential form of government. "I want to tell you, especially the educated class, intellectuals and students, we are heading towards a presidential form of government with one election, one leader, one political party and one emergency," she said at the foundation day event of her party's student wing, Trinamool Congress Chhatra Parishad. Ms. Banerjee, who has been exercising restraint in her remarks against the Centre after the Lok Sabha poll, touched upon a host of current issues in her address. On the issue of Kashmir she said that people there have been silenced using the "barrel of the gun". Raising the issue of change of power in Karnataka, she alleged "horse-trading" and said that the BJP's next target was West Bengal.

Congress to blame for J&K row: Mayawati

LUCKNOW

Former Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and the Congress alone are the "root cause" of the Jammu and Kashmir "problem", Bahujan Samaj Party chief Mayawati said on Wednesday as she launched a fresh attack on the Opposition party for its stance following the suspension of the special status of J&K.

"...Had the Congress Party completed the work of ending Article 370 during the long period of its rule, today the conditions in Jammu and Kashmir would have been better and the BJP would not have got an opportunity to play politics under its pretext," Ms. Mayawati said.

Ms. Mayawati blamed the Congress and other Opposition parties for visiting Kashmir recently and giving the BJP and the J&K Governor an opportunity to "play politics".

She was addressing a meeting of the BSP's central executive committee and all-India State office-bearers in which she was "unanimously" re-elected the national president of the party.

U.K. Opposition condemns Boris move

LONDON

Prime Minister Boris Johnson on Wednesday announced the suspension of Parliament in the final weeks before Britain's EU departure date, enraging anti-Brexit MPs.

Queen Elizabeth II has approved the request to close what has been the longest session of Parliament in nearly 400 years, and reopen it on October 14 setting out Mr. Johnson's fresh legislative programme.

Seemingly caught on the hop, incensed anti-Brexit MPs were left scrambling for a way to stop the move.

Mr. Johnson's announcement came after six Opposition parties said on Tuesday they would first seek to legislate to prevent leaving the EU without a deal when Parliament returns from a summer recess next week.

Jeremy Corbyn, the leader of the main Opposition Labour Party, has said he wants to call a vote of no-confidence in Mr. Johnson's government, which commands a majority of just one seat.

Strong reaction: A man wearing a mask of British Prime Minister Boris Johnson protesting outside Downing Street in London on Wednesday. • REUTERS

John Bercow, the Speaker of Parliament's lower House of Commons, described the closure as a "constitutional outrage" designed to stymie debate on Brexit, with Britain currently on course to crash out without a divorce deal.

An EU summit on October 17-18 could decide whether Britain ends its four decades of membership without a withdrawal agreement that governs future trade relations and citizens rights.

Mr. Johnson said there would be "ample time" either side of the summit for MPs to debate Brexit.

He said it was "completely untrue" that the move was designed to stop MPs blocking his Brexit strategy.

Mr. Johnson said it was to "bring forward a new, bold and ambitious domestic legislative agenda for the renewal of our country after Brexit".

The government's chief Brexit adviser David Frost was in Brussels for talks on Wednesday.

In the seismic 2016 referendum on Britain's EU membership, 52% voted in favour of leaving the bloc, a result that has left parliament and the country bitterly divided.

Mr. Johnson insists Britain must leave on the October 31 deadline - already twice-delayed - with or without a divorce deal from Brussels.

Parliament has rejected three times the withdrawal agreement struck between Brussels and the government of Mr. Johnson's predecessor

Theresa May. Parliament typically goes into recess again around the annual party conference season, which kicks off on September 14 and ends on October 2.

'A coup'

Mr. Bercow, who was not forewarned about Mr. Johnson's suspension decision, said: "It is blindingly obvious that the purpose of prorogation now would be to stop Parliament debating Brexit."

"Shutting down Parliament would be an offence against the democratic process."

Mr. Corbyn called it "an outrage" and a "smash-and-grab on our democracy in order to force through a no-deal exit", while Labour's Finance spokesman John McDonnell branded it a "coup".

Liberal Democrat Brexit spokesman Tom Brake tweeted: "The mother of all parliaments will not allow him to shut the people's parliament out of the biggest decision facing our country. His declaration of war will be met with an iron fist."

'One country, two systems' and many problems

With Hong Kong in disarray, China's policy is back in focus

STANLY JOHNY

Protests in Hong Kong, now in its 13th consecutive week, have brought a decades-old policy of China back into focus - 'One Country Two Systems'.

The protesters, who started occupying the city's streets in April after the local government proposed an extradition law, say Beijing is trying to violate this policy by infringing on Hong Kong's autonomy. They want China to end its interference, while Beijing says it sticks to the principle and has likened the protesters to terrorists.

So, what's this One Country Two Systems principle?

Origin of policy

To put it simply, it means Hong Kong and Macau Special Administrative Regions, both former colonies, can have different economic and political systems from that of mainland China, while being part of the People's Republic of China.

The policy was originally proposed by Deng Xiaoping shortly after he took the reins of the country in the late 1970s. Deng's plan was to unify China and Taiwan under the One Country Two Systems principle. He promised high autonomy to Taiwan. China's nationalist government, which was defeated in a civil war by the communists in 1949, had exiled to Taiwan. The island has since been run as a separate entity from the mainland China, though Beijing never gave up its claim over Taiwan.

signed the Sino-British Joint Declaration, which set the terms for the autonomy and the legal, economic and governmental systems for Hong Kong after the British exit. Similarly, on March 26, 1987, China and Portugal signed the Joint Declaration in which China made similar promises for Macau.

Hong Kong returned to Chinese control on July 1, 1997, and Macau on December 20, 1999. The regions can have their own currencies, economic and legal systems, but defence and diplomacy will be decided by Beijing. Their mini-Constitutions will remain valid for 50 years - till 2047 for Hong Kong and 2049 for Macau. It is unclear what will happen after this term.

Back to China

The idea of two systems in one country resurfaced when Beijing started talks with Britain and Portugal, who were running Hong Kong and Macau, respectively.

EXPLAINER

The British had taken control of Hong Kong in 1842 after the First Opium War. In 1898, the British government and the Qing dynasty of China signed the Second Convention of Peking, which allowed the British to take control of the islands surrounding Hong Kong, known as New Territories, on lease for 99 years. Macau, on the other side, had been ruled by the Portuguese since 1557.

In the 1980s, China initiated talks with both Britain and Portugal for the transfer of the two territories. Beijing promised to respect the region's autonomy under the One Country Two Systems principle. On December 19, 1984, China and the U.K.

Current crisis

In recent years, there has been a growing outcry among Hong Kong's pro-democracy activists against China's alleged attempts to erode the city's autonomy.

In 2016-17, six legislators critical of Beijing were debarred. In 2018, the Hong Kong National Party, a localist party, was outlawed. This, Carrie Lam, the Chief Executive of Hong Kong, proposed the extradition Bill, which sought to extradite Hong Kongers to places with which the city doesn't have extradition agreements. Critics said it would allow the city government to extradite Beijing critics to the mainland China.

This triggered the protests, and they went on despite Ms. Lam's decision to suspend the Bill. The protesters, who often clashed with the police, now want the Bill to be formally withdrawn. Ms. Lam to resign, the arrested protesters to be released and the city's electoral system to be reformed.

'Taliban and U.S. close to deal'

KABUL

The U.S. and the Taliban are "close" to reaching an agreement for a deal that would see the Pentagon slash its troop numbers in Afghanistan, a spokesman for the insurgents said on Wednesday.

The two foes have been meeting in Doha in recent days in a bid to put the final touches on a historic deal that would see the Taliban make various security guarantees in return for a sharp reduction in U.S. troops based in Afghanistan.

"We are close to an agreement. We hope to bring good news for our Muslim and freedom seeking nation soon," Taliban spokesman Zabihullah Mujahid tweeted. The U.S. embassy in Kabul did not immediately comment. But Sediq Sediqqi, a spokesman for President Ashraf Ghani, said U.S. special envoy Zalmay Khalilzad would come to Kabul in "one or two" days to brief the Afghan leader about the deal.

A senior Taliban commander in Pakistan said that a meeting of insurgent leaders was under way at an undisclosed location along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border, where the senior figures were reviewing the proposed agreement. "All the Shura (consultation) members have received the draft and they are reading it carefully, yet no go-ahead signal has been given to the Taliban negotiating team in Doha," the Taliban official said. "It may take a day or two as Taliban leadership has to take all the commanders in confidence."

Facebook tightens rules for political ads in U.S.

WASHINGTON

Facebook said on Wednesday it would tighten its rules for political ad spending ahead of the 2020 U.S. election, notably by requiring more information about who is paying for campaign messages.

The move is the latest by Facebook to crack down on efforts to deceive or manipulate users after the social network admitted lapses in the 2016 election.

While Facebook has already begun requiring political advertisers to provide identification to confirm who they are and where they are located, the new policy requires more information to show they are registered with the U.S. government. This new verification can be done by submitting a tax identification number or proof that the group is registered with the Federal Election Commission.

Respiratory ailments rise as Amazon fires rage

PORTO VELHO

Lingering smoke in the Amazon is reportedly causing increased respiratory problems, particularly among children and the elderly, as fires in the region rage.

"The kids are affected the most. They're coughing a lot," said Elane Diaz, a nurse in the Rondonia state capital of Porto Velho, as she waited for a doctor's appointment on Tuesday at the city's 9 of July hospital with her 5-year-old son Eduardo. "They have problems breathing. I'm concerned because it affects their health."

The number of people treated for respiratory issues increased sharply in recent days at the local Cosme Damia Children's hospital. "This period has been very tough. The dry weather and the smoke causes many problems for children such as pneumonia, coughing and secretion," Daniel Pires, a pediatrician and the hospital's adjunct director told the Folha de S. Paulo newspaper.

Fears over health impacts have been growing with the surge in fires, with more than 77,000 blazes documented by the country's National Space Research Institute since the start of the year. About half of the fires occurred in the Amazon region, with most in the past month.

26 killed, 11 injured as attackers set strip club in Mexico on fire

Gunmen burst into a Mexican strip club in a hail of bullets and killed at least 26 people as they trapped revellers inside and started a raging fire, officials said on Wednesday.

President Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador condemned the "shameful" attack in the city of Coatzacoalcos, and said federal authorities would investigate evidence it may have stemmed from collusion between local authorities and organised crime.

Authorities said many of the victims died of smoke inhalation. It was not immediately clear whether some died of gunshot wounds.

Italy's M5S seals deal with PD for new coalition

It will be led by outgoing PM Conte

ROME

Italy's anti-establishment Five Star Movement and the centre-left Democratic Party clinched a deal on Wednesday to form a government and stave off elections in Europe's third largest economy.

Five Star (M5S) said the coalition would be led by outgoing Prime Minister Giuseppe Conte, who had resigned following the collapse of the populist government. The deal between the two historic enemies is set to bring to an end what Italian newspapers have dubbed "the craziest crisis ever".

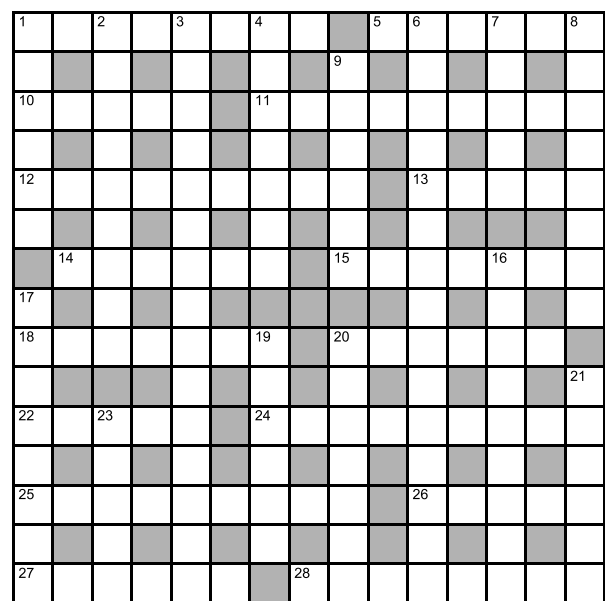

M5S head Luigi Di Maio told journalists in Rome that the endorsement on Tuesday of Mr. Conte by U.S. President Donald Trump "had shown us we were on the right path". The parties had been bickering over whether Mr. Conte - a soft-spoken former academic - should lead a new coalition or whether a fresh face would better signal a fresh start.

Mr. Di Maio has warned, however, that any deal with the Democratic Party (PD) would still have to be approved by party members in an online vote.

Far-right leader Matteo Salvini, who triggered the crisis on August 8 when he withdrew his League party from the governing coalition with M5S, said the new setup was unlikely to last.

Five divine elements

The Lord's physical form is not made of the five elements in the case of humans. It is composed of five divine elements. The Lord's physical form is called Divya Mangala Vighraha. But when the Lord took avatars, He did not reveal these differences between our forms and His. When Rama goes to bring the golden deer, Lakshmana warns Him. He says other deer run away in fear from the golden deer. This must be because the golden deer gives off the smell of an asura, Lakshmana says. So however much one might try to disguise one's natural traits, they are bound to show up.

But, during His avatars, the Lord concealed all His natural characteristics, taking on the characteristics needed for that avatars, said M.A. Venkatakrisnan in a discourse. When He appeared as Varaha, other boars did not shy away from Him. Instead, they rubbed themselves on His back. This would have been possible only if they had been convinced that He was one of them. So, He must have also smelt like them. But how can He smelt like a boar? Would it not be wrong to make such inferences? Nampillai explains why it is not wrong. The Vedas describe Him as sarva gandhah, that means the One who has all kinds of smells. In that case, what is wrong if we say that He did not smell differently from the boars, during His Varaha avatars?

The Varaha Purana says we should offer tubers of nut-sedge to Lord Varaha. These are tubers only boars like to eat. When Nanjeeyar read of Varaha's preferred food, he fainted at the thought of the Supreme One eating the favourite food of boars. In the Srimushna temple, even today they give devotees a churnam as prasada. This is nothing but the nut-sedge tubers powdered with sugar to make them palatable to us. But the Lord gladly ate this when He was Varaha!

Nod for sugar export subsidy

Cabinet okays offer of ₹10.45 per kg to incentivise mills to export surplus stocks

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

With record sugar production continuing to drive down prices even as cane farmers face huge arrears in payment, the Centre has decided to offer a ₹10.45 per kg subsidy to incentivise mills to export their surplus stocks. The export subsidy package will cost the exchequer ₹6,268 crore, according to an official statement.

The decision was taken at a meeting of the Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs on Wednesday.

The subsidy package will facilitate the export of up to 60 lakh tonnes in the 2019-20 marketing season, which begins in October. It will benefit millions of farmers in U.P.,

Maharashtra and Karnataka, as well as other states. Information and Broadcasting Minister Prakash Javadekar told journalists.

A month ago, the Food Ministry told the Lok Sabha that sugar mills across the country owed cane farmers a total of ₹17,518 crore, of which ₹9,935 crore was due to U.P. farmers alone.

tonnes, and end with a closing stock of 162 lakh tonnes.

This surplus will only be partially mitigated by previously announced government measures to create a buffer stock and incentivise diversion of cane for the production of ethanol. Global sugar prices are more than ₹10/kg lower than domestic prices. The lump sum export subsidy will be provided for expenses on marketing costs including handling, upgrading and other processing costs, costs of international and internal transport and freight charges.

"The subsidy would be directly credited into farmers' account on behalf of mills against cane price dues and subsequent balance, if any, would be credited to mills' account," the statement said.

Producers welcome decision

'WTO-compliant subsidy will aid shipping of 6 mn tonnes'

M. SOUNDIRIYA PREETHA
COIMBATORE

The approval by the Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs on Wednesday for sugar export subsidy would help reduce the surplus sugar inventory, according to the Indian Sugar Mills Association (ISMA).

Abinash Verma, director general, ISMA, said that the export of six million tonnes of sugar during the 2019-20 marketing season would not only reduce the surplus inventory of the commodity in the country next season but also result in an additional cash flow of ₹18,000 crore in the sector, including subsidy amount.

With an expected global deficit next season of nearly four million tonnes, "the timely announcement of India's export programme with a WTO compliant export subsidy of ₹10,448 per tonne will enable Indian millers export the six million tonnes," he said.

An industry source said sugar production this season (October 2018 to September 2019) in the country was almost 33 million tonnes and close to four million tonnes of sugar were exported.

The opening stock next season (2019-20) is expected to be 14.5 million tonnes and the production 28.5 million tonnes. In the current season, though exports were expected to be five million tonnes, it is close to four million tonnes, mainly as international prices were down. In the next season, a global deficit is expected.

Hence, exports are likely to be viable for the Indian sugar sector. "It is a huge stock [that we have] and we need to export. Now, people can plan for the next season," the source said.

R. Varadarajan, whole-time director, Rajshree Sugars and Chemicals, said while the export subsidy would benefit mills in north India, sugar mills in Tamil Nadu need a "larger support package." The mills in Tamil Nadu were already operating below capacity.

So, the units here might still not be able to export. The Tamil Nadu mills need incentives without linking them to exports, he said.

out and approved by the board of CPCL," IOCL chairman Sanjiv Singh told The Hindu. In a bid to diversify into non-fossil fuel, IOCL is also planning to set up an aluminium anode battery plant in Chennai.

"We are looking at manufacturing various batteries, storage, [and] improving conventional battery. We are talking something beyond lithium, as lithium batteries are not the best answer, for, India doesn't have lithium," Mr. Singh said.

Gurmeet Singh, IOCL's Director - Marketing, said, "We are in an advanced stage of development of aluminium anode-based batteries, as aluminium is available in India in abundance. We will manufacture these batteries in Chennai. These will be self charging and much cheaper and lighter than the conventional lithium ion battery."

"The battery plant is expected to come up in joint venture with a foreign player. The ideal size of the unit may be one giga watt," said S.S.V. Ramakumar, Director - R&D at IOCL.

ATUL ANEJA
BEIJING

In a humanitarian gesture, China has decided not to impose heavy penalties on the import of unapproved but cheaper generic drugs, which are needed to treat critically ill patients, from countries such as India.

Monday's announcement will give hope especially to less-affluent patients and their relatives who have struggled to get affordable medicines to treat chronic diseases such as cancer.

Prior to the latest decision, drugs not approved by the National Medical Products Administration (NMPA) of China were considered "fake." Companies and individuals caught selling such drugs could face heavy fines or even imprisonment up to three years.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

Aviation safety regulator DGCA on Wednesday said it would be imprudent to ground the entire fleet of Pratt & Whitney (P&W) powered planes with Indian airlines, adding that strong mitigation measures were in place.

'Serious consequences'

"About 40% of the domestic seat capacity of India is powered by Neo Engines and therefore, any knee-jerk reaction to completely shut their operations will have serious consequences;... with strong mitigation measures in place and strict adherence to SOPs by the airlines, the problem is being contained, the Directorate

General of Civil Aviation (DGCA) said in a press statement following an emergency meeting with IndiGo and GoAir.

There are 127 P&W-powered engines in the country, out of a total of 436 planes. Of these, 92 are with IndiGo and 35 with GoAir.

It added, "we are alive to the situation and will take the strictest action possible."

The DGCA said that while some of the issues being faced by PW engines that have caused in-flight shut-downs, air turnbacks or rejected take-offs had been resolved, it asked the airlines to not induct new planes after August without modified gear box and new low pressure turbine, as these two technical problems continue to persist.

There will also be restrictions imposed on leasing of spare engines without these two issues being addressed.

There were nine incidents related to these two technical problems in 2019, as compared to seven in the previous year faced by IndiGo and GoAir, according to the latest data from the DGCA.

Ind-Ra cuts GDP growth forecast in FY20 to 6.7%

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

India Ratings and Research has revised downwards its projection of the country's GDP growth in financial year 2019-20 to 6.7%, a six-year low, from its earlier forecast of 7.3%, the agency announced on Wednesday.

"The agency expects FY20 to be the third consecutive year of subdued growth pushed by (i) a slowdown in consumption demand; (ii) delayed and uneven progress of monsoon so far; (iii) decline in manufacturing growth; (iv) inability of Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code to resolve cases in a time-bound manner, and (v) rising global trade tension adversely impacting exports," it said in a report.

The agency expects growth in the first quarter of the current financial year to decline for the fifth consecutive quarter to 5.7%.

Further, it said that the reform measures announced by Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman recently would make an impact only in the medium term.

"On August 23, 2019, Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman announced a slew of measures to revive the economy, which included addressing some of the woes facing auto sector, MSME, banking sector, capital market, etc.," the report said. "However, these measures are likely to support growth only in the medium term, but the agency expects GDP growth to recover to 7.4% in the second half of FY20, mainly on account of the base effect."

Forex gains, OMOs aid RBI's record surplus

The large transfer to the Union government is likely to be a one-time event

MANOJIT SAHA
MUMBAI

Large scale open market operations (OMO) conducted by the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) and higher earnings from foreign exchange operations helped boost the central bank's surplus to record levels in 2018-19.

The RBI posted a surplus of ₹1.23 lakh crore in 2018-19 compared to ₹50,004 crore in 2017-18 and ₹30,663 crore in 2016-17. On Monday, the central bank said that its board had approved the transfer of ₹1.76 lakh crore to the government, which includes the surplus of ₹1.23 lakh crore and excess provisions of ₹52,637 crore identified as per the revised Economic Capital Framework.

ing cash does not yield any return but when invested in securities, interest income is earned. Market estimates suggest that the additional income during the accounting year was to the tune of ₹26,000 crore on larger OMOs.

"Interestingly, the regular dividend is much higher than the excess dividend, and almost double of the regular dividend transferred over the last five years. The reason for this is the record OMO purchases in FY19 (₹3 lakh crore, over 70% of g-scc issuances). It led to a high interest income," economists at HSBC said.

In addition, there was a gain of ₹21,000 crore due to change in methodology to calculate foreign exchange gains, which was reflected in net income.

Observing the large transfer is likely to be one-time event, India Ratings said, "As the net liquidity injection under the liquidity adjustment facility continued in FY19 and the credit offtake remains weak, the banking system continues to see surplus liquidity. Therefore, while the RBI is likely to have sustained its earnings from senior income in FY19, the growth will come down incrementally."

India Ratings said the contingency fund reserve at about 5.5% of the total assets of the RBI, the central bank could be expected to appropriate its net income towards the fund in order to maintain the fund's corpus at least at the current levels.

IRDAI to review motor third-party targets

HYDERABAD

Insurance regulator IRDAI has decided to review the formula it applies to set motor third-party obligation targets that insurers have to meet every year.

The review is to be undertaken by an eight-member working group and may bring into focus a demand of insurers that the IRDAI should de-tariff TP premium or, in other words, permit them to decide the premium.

The demand of the insurers comes in the backdrop of traditionally motor TP not being profitable for the companies.

There are estimates of how a good number of automobiles on the road are plying without third party insurance though such a cover is mandatory as per law. Comprising officials of the IRDAI as well as senior executives of a few general insurance firms - private as well public - the working group will identify areas of difficulty or concerns, including those relating to the formula in vogue.

It will review the framework of the obligations in the light of new developments such as long-term motor TP products.

Following a Supreme Court order, a five-year policy and a three-year policy have become mandatory for new two-wheelers and private cars respectively from last year.

The Working Group will also make recommendations regarding modifications that may be required to the current framework.

Moody's downgrades Yes Bank

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
MUMBAI

Moody's Investors Service on Wednesday downgraded Yes Bank's long-term foreign-currency issuer rating to Ba3 from Ba1.

"The outlook on the bank's ratings, where applicable, is negative," the rating agency said. With this, Moody's has concluded the rating review process of the private sector bank that was initiated in June.

The rating downgrade is due to the lower-than-expected amount of capital raised by the bank recently and the risk that substantial decline in the bank's share price will challenge its ability to raise sufficient capital to maintain the rating at its previous level, Moody's said. In the last one year, Yes Bank's shares have tanked around 84%. Earlier this month, the bank had raised ₹1,930 crore through the qualified institutions placement (QIP) route. Moody's said the QIP would moderately improve the bank's reported common equity tier-1 ratio of 8% as of June 30, 2019, to 8.6%.

"Moody's expects the bulk of Yes Bank's operating profits will get consumed by loan loss provisions over the next 12-18 months, and thus not support internal capital generation." This would leave the bank dependent on external capital raising to improve its loss-absorbing buffers, which is becoming more challenging given the substantial decline in its share price, it added.

Yes Bank's asset quality deteriorated in the quarter ended June 2019, with its gross non-performing loan ratio rising to 5%, from 3.2% at the end of March.

"The negative outlook reflects the risk of further deterioration in the bank's solvency, funding or liquidity, as the bank continues to work through the asset quality issues and rebuilds its loss absorbing buffers," the agency added.

Shares of the bank fell 7.5% to ₹59.50 on the BSE on Wednesday.

"The board meeting, which started at noon, lasted for nearly five hours,"

Parthasarathi Mukherjee

said a person in the know of the development. "We don't know why Mr. Mukherjee resigned," the person added.

"He was taking steps to lead the bank on a recovery path. It is indeed shocking."

In April, the boards of LVB and Indiabulls Housing Finance Ltd. (IHFL) had approved the merger of the two entities.

In June, the Competition Commission of India had given its nod for the proposed scheme of amalgamation of IHFL and Indiabulls Commercial Credit Ltd. with LVB. Approval for the merger is pending with the RBI.

IBHF's shareholders will own 90.5% of the proposed amalgamated entity, while LVB shareholders will hold the remaining 9.5%. Shares of the bank lost 4.9% on Wednesday to close at ₹40.75 on the BSE.

For FY19, the lender had posted a loss of ₹894 crore against a loss of ₹585 crore for FY18 due to a large slip-page in NPAs, according to a BSE filing.

Nestle India to be included in Nifty index

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
MUMBAI

The National Stock Exchange will remove Indiabulls Housing Finance from the benchmark Nifty index and will replace it with Nestle India. The changes in the index would come into effect from September 27.

Indiabulls Housing Finance has seen a massive fall in its valuation with its stock price falling from ₹1,300-levels a year back to ₹457 on Wednesday. Incidentally, housing finance entities and non banking finance companies (NBFCs) have been in the midst of a liquidity crisis in the last few months.

Meanwhile, Nestle India, which sells milk, noodles, coffee, chocolate and breakfast cereals, among other food items, has seen its share price jump nearly 13% in the last three months. On Wednesday, Nestle India shares gained 0.33% to close at ₹12,514.70 on the BSE.

An inclusion in the indices, especially the benchmark Sensex and Nifty, typically attracts investment in the stock from passive funds who mirror the index constituents in their funds.

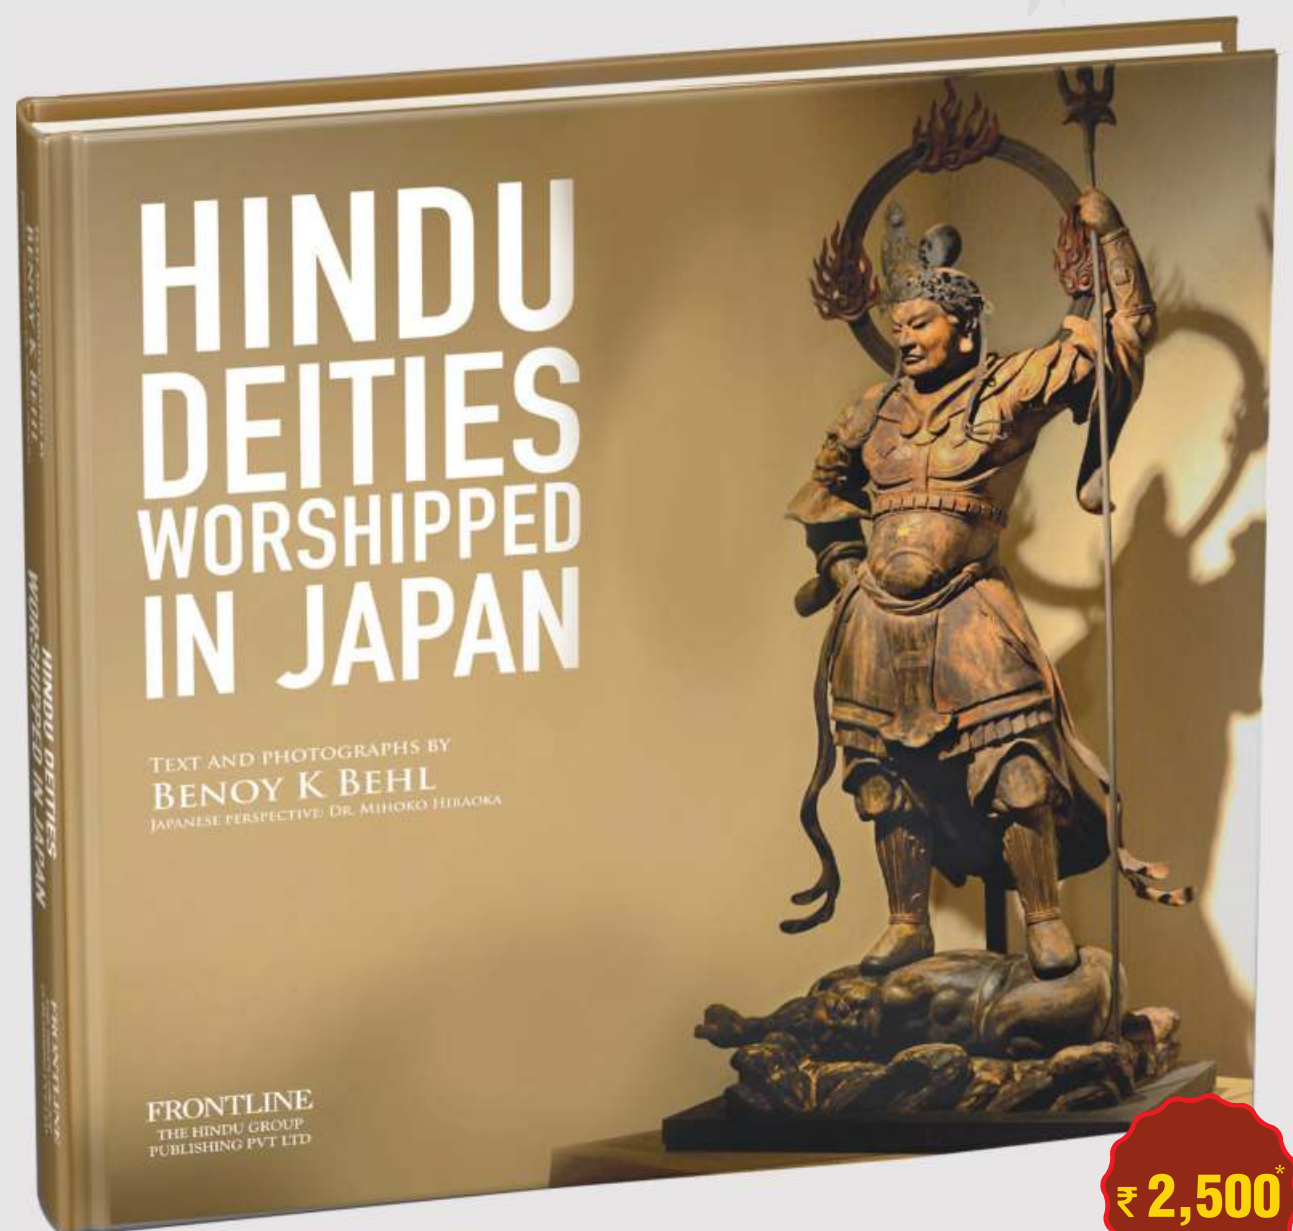

This is the first revision of the Nifty after the exchange approved the inclusion of permitted category companies — entities that are not directly listed on NSE — in the indices. Nestle India falls under the permitted category of companies on the NSE.

VASUNDHARA RATHI

Since 2000, Kaun Banega Crorepati (KBC) has been entertaining millions of Indians all over the country. The reality television show, now in its eleventh season, has had a single director behind the camera all this time. Metro-Plus spoke with Arun Sheshkumar to get a sense of what it means to call the shots on KBC, a staple in the TV viewing diet of Indian audiences. "It's a real show," says the director with evident passion for his work. "It connects with millions of Indians and gives a platform to people to come and share their stories, knowledge and make a difference to their lives."

While adapting an international format to Indian television, the biggest challenge for Sheshkumar was to make the show appeal to Indian audiences while preserving its popular format. "We had the vision of Siddhartha Basu, who is by far the best quizmaster India has ever produced," says the director.

Each season also brings something new by way of technology, use of camera techniques, lighting or set design. "We have to make it look different each year without ruining the sanctity of the show," he adds. But after all these years and over 700 episodes, Sheshkumar has yet to get used to being around host Amitabh Bachchan. "I don't see anybody else who can do what he does," he says. "A perfectionist, passionate and punctual are the three Ps that Mr. Bachchan embodies." The veteran actor's enthusiasm has been an inspiration for the show's crew to work harder than the previous season. "It becomes a bit challenging since he's expecting a certain degree of perfection. We work hard so that he has a good journey while shooting the whole season because Mr. Bachchan is KBC," the director emphasises.

Listening to and learning from each contestants' struggles and triumphs has become one of the most enriching experiences for Sheshkumar. To showcase these special stories, the show's latest season features 'Karamveer'. One such contestant has been Afroz Shah, responsible for changing the face of Versova beach in Mumbai. Bachchan was so inspired by his work that he invited the crew to go to Versova one Sunday morning to help Shah and personally contribute in any way he could.

Sound advice
KBC has always had a constant stream of celebrities who face tough questions on the hot seat for charity or when a new release is around the corner. Sheshkumar and his team often have to come up with new ideas to keep audiences intrigued. One such episode guest starred Shah Rukh Khan. "We don't get to see these two stalwarts interacting on camera so casually," remembers the director fondly adding that it was a surreal experience. "The camaraderie that they share was amazing, the stories that [Khan] had about Mr. Bachchan, and [the former] being his charming self got a lot out of Mr. Bachchan." Another time, Abhishek Bachchan came on the show and took up the role of the host asking his father some questions. "It was so much fun to see the son play the father's role," laughs Sheshkumar.

With a television career spanning 18 years, Sheshkumar has worked on most of the popular Hindi reality shows like Jhalak Dikhhla Jaa, Satyamev Jayate and India's Got Talent. When asked what his advice would be to aspiring professionals, he is quick to state that all he can share are his experiences. "One piece of advice that has helped me through my journey is to stay grounded," he says. "Success can really go to your head!" He also added that one is always learning in this industry and it should never stop. "Hard work, passion and honesty will help any aspiring director to be where someone wants to be," he concludes.

Balvenie, the Speyside single malt Scotch distillery, is recording the stories of the people behind its whiskies

Stories are the new luxury. They have been, for a while now, and that narrative is getting richer. From couture to whisky, tales of tradition, of process, of the brand's smallness or largeness build 'engagement'. There's interest in making people feel like they're a part of something with heart, something bigger than 'just a product'.

In June, Balvenie, the single malt whisky distillery in Dufftown, Scotland, formally started one such campaign, called The Balvenie Stories. The effort involves a book of original short stories, Pursuit: The Balvenie Stories Collection (available on pre-order) and a podcast called The Balvenie Stories series (on Apple Music and Spotify), by Gemma Paterson, one of their global brand ambassadors.

Paterson talks to the people involved in the processes at their distillery — this includes the likes of Ian McDonald, the brand's head cooper, who recently marked fifty years of making casks and barrels for them. She also speaks to younger people, like Kelsey McKechnie, who in her early 20s is an Apprentice Malt Master for the brand.

In India this week, Paterson tells us about taking the endeavour offline. Edited excerpts from an interview:

Why did the idea to document stories even come up?

At the distillery we have so many craftsmen who have amazing stories to tell. These are people who've dedicated their lives and careers to making the whisky. One of the stories we're telling is about Ian, our head cooper, who started in 1969 with us, when he was only 15. We've worked out that he's made a quarter of a million barrels [over this time]. That's 75 millions bottles on average, coming from barrels he's made with his own hands!

He's trained and mentored so many apprentices through his career. He's come up with ideas, to make new whisky. Our 14 Caribbean Cask — that's the one that's very popular in India — wouldn't exist if it wasn't for Ian having the idea to start to experiment with bringing in rum casks.

A big part of what we're doing is taking these stories, documenting them, so future generations have access to them. We're a fifth generation family-run company...and if we don't do it now, it will all be lost.

You're telling these stories in different countries. This is beyond internal record-keeping...

For sure. It's important for the industry in general too. In Scotland we have what's called ceilidh, meaning an evening of drinking, storytelling, socialising, and dancing. They're all linked. So it's important to have these stories to share, over a whisky.

What are you doing with the stories in India?

I work with a storytelling group in the UK called The Empress Collective, and they have a guitarist who plays music to storytelling, so we've been working together to develop that for Balvenie. [In India], we have a flautist [Nikhil Kumar], who handcrafts his own flutes.

This season, she's introducing new elements on her lehenga sets, saris and anarkalis: tiny, precision-cut Japanese glass beads, Swarovski, baby pearls and other delicate accents that go with traditional designs. This year, the Lucknow-based designer has introduced a new motif: chinar leaves, along with traditional designs.

The Chikankari artisans are mostly men, while Kamdani employs mainly women. While the former was traditionally done with white cotton thread, today, silk thread is also employed. Kamdani, also called badla or mukaish, is a metal embroidery: Thin metal strips are sewn on to the fabric and fashioned into small sparkling dots to give Chikankari a little sparkle. On her saris, she also has ek and do taar (single and double metal wire) embroidery. Colours are pastel: ivory, white, hydro, bluish pink, old rose, baby blue, mint and sage green.

There's a unwritten rule if you're wandering in nature: The brighter, more conspicuous the animal, the more toxic it usually will be. Blister Beetles exhibit aposematism, one of nature's cues to alert predators to the toxicity of their prey. Aposematism refers to the appearance, sound, or odour of an animal that warns other animals seeking food that it is distasteful or dangerous. The Blister Beetle signals are primarily visual: Their bright colours and high-contrast patterns such as dots or stripes, warn potential predators that they have certain defences that make them unpalatable or poisonous. Such a signal is beneficial for both predator and prey, since both avoid potential harm in the process.

This beetle has the ability to produce blisters on contact with human skin by secreting a blistering agent called cantharidin, an odourless, colourless substance that's a burn agent and that can be very poisonous in large doses. At the same time, small doses of this substance have been used medically in treating certain skin conditions and in the removal of warts.

The rainy season gives us a peep into the fascinating world of insects. Blister Beetles found in Delhi-NCR are often brightly coloured with a black body displaying vibrant red spots. However, thanks to their defence mechanism, the need for them to camouflage in nature is eliminated. This helps them move freely without fear, and they are diurnal, moving around in loose groups. They are soft-bodied, narrow-necked, belonging to the plant-eating family of Meloidae. They're often found feeding on flowers around our gardens, especially the Lantana. The females lay numerous eggs on or in the ground and sometimes near bee hives. The larvae are insectivores and grow through several larval stages, the first of which are specialised predators who either travel to the feeding grounds on their own or sometimes cling to bees that transport them into the hives, where they feed on immature bees. They also tend to feed on grasshopper eggs, thereby controlling their population, important for crop safety and health.

On-field observations suggest that they are slow fliers, considering the body weight on the wings. They make a buzzing sound on flight, like

Legend has it that the Blister Beetle played a significant role in helping Mithridates, the king of Anatolia, become the Roman Empire's most formidable enemy. He ingested small amounts of cantharidin, with a mix of antidotes, so he could develop a resistance towards most types of poisons. In our context though, it's best not to make a meal out of Blister Beetles. The best way to enjoy the antics of these creatures is from a comfortable distance.

charge of the food waste programme. "This means that we collect all the surplus food at the festival (last year, it was 20 tonnes), sort it, cook some of it and distribute all the surplus food to social organisations around Denmark. It's an effort that's based on a partnership with the Danish Food Bank, who are experts at distributing surplus food to social organisations," Abrahamsen writes.

Then, there's the Refood label that restaurants and food companies can sign up for by pledging to focus on upcycling. For the trust-based certification, companies must choose three food-saving initiatives from Refood's recommendations and have a system for recycling food waste. It's a project championed by Stop Spild Af Mad – which translates to Stop Wasting Food – a non-profit organisation that's doing important work to combat Denmark's food waste (its partners include Too Good to Go, YourLocal and WeFood).

UN statistics suggest that the global population will reach 9.8 billion by 2050, which means food production will have to increase drastically to meet that demand. For organisations like Stop Spild Af Mad, reducing food waste lands among the main focus areas. It can seem overwhelming, but Abrahamsen recommends starting small: "Make an effort in planning your meals and shopping. Make sure you know and remember what you have in the fridge, and make the content the defining factor of what to cook and eat."

FABIOLA MONTEIRO

In Copenhagen, solar-powered GoBoats chug along the canals. Locals paddle green kayaks, picking up bucketfuls of waste from the waters in exchange for free rides. At a café in the hip Nørrebro neighbourhood, I eat silky-smooth coffee ice-cream that's made from excess steamed milk. During my time in Denmark's capital city, I become acutely aware of how much the Danes care about sustainability.

For one, it's seamlessly integrated into their lives. It's palpable on the streets, thanks to the city's cycling culture – in some neighbourhoods, pedestrians and bikers get priority; cars get only single-lane access. On rooftops too, green roofs with terrace gardens are common. At Grø Spiseri, an organic community-style rooftop restaurant, I walk along beds of sunflowers and other colourful blooms. There's also Amager Bakke (or Copenhill), a one-of-a-kind waste-to-energy plant that opened in 2017, with designs for a ski slope and recreation centre. Copenhagen has plans to be the first carbon-neutral capital by 2025 – and undoubtedly, it's well on its way.

While an increasing number of European countries are looking at ways to reduce food excess, here, some lessons from Copenhagen on how to eat sustainably

Bringing this sustainability-driven living together with Copenhagen's spot on the global food map – it's well known as a leading culinary destination – and, apart from eating sustainably, it's obvious that the Danes would also be making major headway with combating food waste.

The first time I hear about this is when I chance upon Too Good to Go in Copenhagen (www.toogoodtogo.dk). A Danish start-up, the app launched in January 2016 and is available across Europe. It's an incredibly nifty source, helping food stores, bakeries and restaurants sell their excess food.

Consumers get to order leftovers at reduced prices, often at least 50% below the original price. It's a win-win sustainable situation for your conscience, your pocket, and the businesses. Similarly, there's also YourLocal (www.yourlocal.org), another app that connects local shops with consumers.

If tech is too much, there's the WeFood supermarket, Denmark's first surplus-goods supermarket. The city has two outposts – one in Amager, one in Nørrebro – which stock goods that regular supermarkets can't sell due to overdue 'best before' dates or damaged packaging. These are products that are safe to consume by Danish food-law standards. Instead of tossing them, partner supermarkets donate these products to WeFood, where they're sold at rates that are often 30 to 50% below market price. (A good way to keep track of what's in stock is by checking an outpost's Facebook page.)

Nadal up and running in quick time

Thiem and Tsitsipas' campaigns cut short; Nishikori and Pliskova make the third round

NEW YORK

Rafael Nadal launched his tilt at a fourth U.S. Open title on Tuesday with a swift defeat of John Millman as other leading seeds in his half of the draw tumbled out in the first round.

Four players in the world's top 10 — Dominic Thiem, Stefanos Tsitsipas, Karen Khachanov and Roberto Bautista Agut — lost to ease Nadal's potential path to the final.

The Spanish second seed — champion in 2010, 2013 and 2017 — needed barely two hours to see Millman off 6-3, 6-2, 6-2 at Arthur Ashe Stadium with the World No. 60 from Australia unable to reproduce the magic that saw him stun Roger Federer here a year ago.

"The beginning, the first match, is always a little bit new even if I've played here plenty of times," said Nadal. "I think I played well and in general am very happy with the way I started."

Two-time French Open runner-up Thiem was upset by Italian giant-killer Thomas Fabbiano 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, the Austrian fourth seed slumping to another first-round exit, having lost at the same stage at Wimbledon.

Finding fault

Greek eighth seed Tsitsipas struggled with cramps and accused umpires of having "preferences" after he fell to a 6-4, 6-7(5), 7-6(7), 7-5 defeat by Next Gen rival Andrey Rublev in a gruelling four-hour slog.

Tsitsipas, for whom it was also a second successive Grand Slam opening-round defeat, was hit with a point penalty for a time violation in the final set.

Russian ninth seed Khachanov lost to Canada's Vasek Pospisil in five sets, with 10th seed Bautista Agut of Spain succumbing in similar fashion to Mikhail Kukushkin of Kazakhstan to leave that quarter of the draw wide open for Nick Kyrgios.

The volatile Australian eased past American Steve Johnson 6-3, 7-6(1), 6-4 in a match that finished at 1:12 a.m. local time.

Alexander Zverev, seeded sixth, outlasted Moldova's Radu Albot 6-1, 6-3, 3-6, 4-6, 6-2, while Marin Cilic, the 2014 champion, advanced in straight sets over Slovakia's Martin Klizan.

Wimbledon champion Simona Halep, ousted in the opening round the past two years at Flushing Meadows, beat US lucky loser Nicole Gibbs 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

Sloane Stephens, the 2017 champion, slid to a 6-3, 6-4 loss to Russian qualifier Anna Kalinskaya.

Meanwhile on Wednesday, past U.S. Open runners-up Kei Nishikori and Karolina Pliskova advanced to the third round when most matches were delayed by showers.

Japanese seventh seed Nishikori, the 2014 runner-up and a semifinalist in 2016 and 2018, defeated American Bradley Klahn 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5 after two hours and 44 minutes.

Czech third seed Pliskova, seeking her first Grand Slam title and the top ranking, ousted 202nd-ranked Georgian qualifier Mariam Bolkvadze 6-1, 6-4.

Giant-killer: Thomas Fabbiano produced one of the big upsets by taking out fourth seed Dominic Thiem on Tuesday. • AP

Uninspired Tsitsipas lashes out at umpire
Stefanos Tsitsipas called an umpire a "weirdo" after being told to hurry back onto court during his first-round loss to Andrey Rublev on Tuesday and later said he was struggling for inspiration in his game. Nadal offers boat to Murray for Mallorca stay
Rafael Nadal revealed on Tuesday he had offered to provide Andy Murray with his boat in Mallorca, where the Scot is playing in a second-tier Challenger event as part of his comeback following hip surgery. Riske's Bollywood dance moves, a superhit
Alison Riske has made her name in tennis, but her biggest claim to fame might be the Bollywood dance moves from her wedding last month that became an internet sensation. Riske, playing in her first Grand Slam after getting married to Stephen Amritraj, the son of former India tennis player Anand Amritraj, said: "The whole weekend was awesome, just to have everyone that we love together — it was really special. There were so many highlights. I think my Bollywood dance went off well."

After blow on neck, Smith thought of Hughes

THE ASHES

LONDON

Australian batting mainstay Steve Smith thought about his late teammate Phil Hughes right after being hit on the neck by England pacer Jofra Archer in the second Ashes Test.

Bit of past

"I had a few things running through my head, particularly where I got hit, just a bit of past came up, if you know what I mean, from a few years ago. That was probably the first thing I thought about," Smith told reporters in Derby referring to Hughes who passed away after being hit by a bouncer in a 2014 Sheffield Shield match.

Smith was found to have delayed concussion.

"It wasn't until later that evening that it hit me. When the doc asked me what did it feel like I said it felt like I had six beers last night and felt a little bit under the weather, without the six beers unfortunately."

"That was the sort of feeling I got, that groggy feeling and that stuck around for a couple of days. Not a nice place to be in but these things happen and unfortunately missed what was a pretty amazing Test match," he said.

With Ben Stokes playing one of the best Test match innings, England pulled off a one wicket win in Leeds, levelling the five-match series at 1-1.

'Not going to change'

LONDON

Steve Smith is expecting a lot of short balls to be directed at him in the fourth Test, but said he will not change the way he bats against Archer.

"If they're bowling up there it means they can't nick me off, or hit me on the pad or hit the stumps. With the Dukes ball, I don't know, that's an interesting play. I'm not changing anything."

India-A takes on South Africa-A in the first unofficial one-dayer today

THIRUVANANTHAPURAM

South Africa-A's tour of India holds significant interest for fringe players from both countries to be on their selectors' radar as the series kicks off with the first 'unofficial' one-dayer at the Sports Hub, Kariyavattom, on Thursday.

South Africa-A is essentially a recee party with a handful of experienced internationals who will be testing the conditions in the subcontinent before the series against India in October.

After the retirement of stalwarts Hashim Amla and J.P. Duminy and post the World Cup, South African cricket finds itself in transition. The selectors will be looking keenly at this tour — which comprises five one-dayers and two four-day Tests — to find out players for the future.

Captain Temba Bavuma said the tour will be important for his players to get used to alien conditions. He added there was no better place than India at the moment to test the skills and ability.

A few players like Heinrich Klassen, who was a last-minute replacement in the South African Test squad to India, Reeza Hendricks and Beuran Hendricks will want to use this opportunity to put their stuttering international career on the right track.

Firepower

Bavuma believes his side has enough firepower to stand up to the collective experience of India internationals.

India-A captain Manish Pandey said his team was keen to continue the winning habit after the triumphant series in the West Indies.

Though, on paper, India-A has more internationals in its ranks, Pandey is expecting a tough challenge.

"We have been playing well as a team in the last two years. We have won the last series against the West Indies and are keen to continue the momentum. The 'A' series against South Africa will be a good platform for all of us to impress the selectors. It will be a tough series," he said.

The Indian selectors will be keenly watching the performances of a few players before they pick the T20 squad for the South Africa series.

Vijay Shankar, who is making a comeback after injuring his toe during the World Cup, will be keen to impress and so will be Yuzvendra Chahal, who had an underwhelming World Cup.

The teams (from):

India-A: Manish Pandey (Capt.), Ruturaj Gaikwad, Shubman Gill, Anmolpreet Singh, Ricky Bhui, Ishan Kishan (wk), Vijay Shankar, Shivam Dube, Krunal Pandya, Axar Patel, Yuzvendra Chahal, Shardul Thakur, Deepak Chahar, Khaleel Ahmed, and Nitish Rana.

South Africa-A: Temba Bavuma (Capt.), Matthew Breetzke, Kyle Verryne, Junior Dala, Theunis de Bruyn, Bjorn Fortuin, Beuran Hendricks, Reeza Hendricks, Heinrich Klaassen (wk), George Linde, Janneman Malan, Marco Jansen, Anrich Nortje, Sinethemba Qeshile, and Lutho Sipamla.

EB, Bagan post wins

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT KOLKATA

East Bengal and Mohun Bagan registered contrasting wins in the Calcutta Football League premier division-A fixtures on Wednesday.

East Bengal blanked Aryan Club 3-0 at home for its second win, while defending champion Bagan had to work hard to down BSS Sporting Club 2-1 in the other match at Kalyani Stadium.

East Bengal found the lead three minutes before the interval when seasoned midfielder Lalrindika Ralte made the most of a cross from Brandon Vanlalremdika.

Striker Jaime Santos Colorado doubled the lead just after the hour-mark when his 1-2 with Ralte created an opening in the Aryan box and he finished the move beating Kadir.

Santos made it 3-0 in the 89th minute to help East Bengal reach six points from three outings.

In the other contest, Salva Chamorro nodded home the lead for Bagan in the 31st minute, cashing in on a cross from Nongdomba Naorem.

Bagan's lead was soon neutralised by William Opoku, who got the equaliser for BSS Sporting in the 32nd minute. Nongdomba put Bagan ahead in the 47th minute and the side held on to the advantage to notch up its maiden win.

Arpinder wins but falls short of Doha qualifying mark

Official, whose goof-up affected the triple jumper's performance, suspended for a year

UTHRA GANESAN LUCKNOW

He was the biggest hope to qualify for the World Championships from the 59th Inter-State athletics meet here but triple jumper Arpinder Singh fell short of the mark by 12 centimetres, a combination of factors not helping his cause.

Arpinder still managed 16.83 metres – his best this season and 4th best overall – but it wasn't enough for Doha (16.95m).

"It is disappointing. The hot, humid weather was not ideal but I was prepared for it. I was not prepared for seven jumps, though," he admitted.

Surprise second
 Karnataka's Karthik U was the surprise runner-up with a massive 16.80m jump, followed by Mohd. Salahuddin, who managed 16.79m for his personal best.

The seven jumps were courtesy a goof-up by the technical officials during the event who abruptly changed the order of participation for the final round. Initially the last participant to complete a round, Arpinder was asked to be the first to complete his sixth and final jump. "I kept telling them I was to go last but they refused to listen. I had no time to even consult my coaches," Arpinder shrugged.

His final jump went for 16.80m before his coaches – Antony Yaich of JSW and National coach Bibhu Mathews – confronted the officials who accepted their mistake and cancelled the jump allowing him to go again. By then, though, he was completely drained.

Emergency meeting
 The AFI, meanwhile, held an emergency meeting late in the evening and decided to take strict action against the erring officials.

Nupur, the technical official responsible for the goof-up has been suspended for one year from all meets by the AFI's technical committee that met to decide on the issue under the chairmanship of Ravinder Chaudhary. After a long period of constantly changing coaches and training style, Arpinder has been training at JSW's Inspire Institute of Sports for the past four months and the difference was visible in both his technique and physique.

Ordinary display
 It was also the only event where the medallists pushed each other to give their best on a day that saw another round of ordinary performances and below-par achievements.

Dharun Ayyasamy and Mohan Raja, the two federation entries in the 400m, had ordinary outings. The only other high point was Iranian Mahdi Pirjahan clocking 49.33s in the 400m hurdles, narrowly missing the Worlds mark (49.00) but managing to set a new meet record.

The results:
Men: 200m: Nithin (TN, 20.91s), 2. Akshay Nain (Del, 21.39), 3. Abhinav Panwar (Del, 21.47); 400m: 1. Alex Antony (46.17), 2. Harsh Singh (Har, 46.64), 3. Sachin Roby (Kar, 46.96); 800m: 1. India Green would strive to make it to the summit clash

India Red has already assured itself of a final spot

SHREEDUTTA CHIDANANDA BENGALURU

India Green will look to earn a spot in the final of the Duleep Trophy when it takes on India Red in the third and final league game at the Alur grounds from Thursday.

Frustrating time
 Faiz Fazal's India Green endured a frustrating time in the tournament's opening encounter at the Just Cricket ground earlier this month, when rain played spoiler.

Only 49 overs of play were possible in total, with days two, three and four washed out.

In the little action that did unfold, Ishan Porel managed to take three for 26 as Green reduced Blue to 112 for six. Both sides left the venue with a single point.

Twelve days later, Fazal's men will take the field again, hoping to earn the three points that will guarantee them a spot in the final.

The likes of Priyam Garg, who earlier this month captained India U-19 to victory in the Tri-Nation tournament in England, and Rahul Chahar, fresh from an India debut in the West Indies T20 series, will be eager to make an impression.

India Red, on the other hand, has already firmed up its berth in the day-night title clash after claiming three points against India Blue earlier this week.

Karun Nair and Ankit Kalsi starred with the bat as Red took the first-innings lead before the game meandered to a draw.

Nair made 99 and 166 n.o. in the first and second innings respectively, in the process recording a first-class century after a gap of nearly two years.

Able support
 He was ably supported by Himachal Pradesh's Ankit Kalsi, who scored 106 and 64 in the two innings.

Jaydev Unadkat, Avesh Khan and Vidarbha spinner Akshay Wakhare all enjoyed good outings with the ball for India Red in that game and will hope to maintain that form.

A decent contest may be expected from Saturday, as long as both sets of players remain interested.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT LUCKNOW

The Hindu's repeated attempts to highlight the absence of anti-doping officials here seem to have had the desired impact with NADA finally deposing a 5-member team for the remaining two days of the meet.

An official mail to the organisers late on Wednesday afternoon seeking technical support finally confirmed the visit. The mail names technical official Yogesh Sharma and Dope Control Officer Yashpreet Kaur from Delhi along with three local male scientists for collecting the samples. However, those who won medals across 19 disciplines on the first two days are unlikely to be available for the same.

Interestingly, perhaps for the first time ever there was a public announcement of NADA officials arriving at a meet! The announcer even asked the medallists of the 19 disciplines, "to stay back in the city and give their samples on Thursday".

It now remains to be seen how many samples NADA is able to manage in the next days even though some of the big names in the fray – including triple jumper Arpinder Singh and quartermiler Dharun Ayyasamy – have already finished their events here.

Barua accuses BCA official of 'misdeeds'

CONTROVERSY

Y.B. SARANGI KOLKATA

Grandmaster Dibyendu Barua on Tuesday accused Bengal Chess Association (BCA) secretary Atanu Lahiri of committing several 'misdeeds', including 'financial embezzlement', and stopping his 12-year-old tournament – Chess for Youth – because of 'personal' grudge.

Addressing a press conference Barua said, as the State's representative in the All India Chess Federation (AICF), Lahiri did not recommend his tournament – a formality to get permission – for a go-ahead from the national body even after 'verbally' granting permission.

Blocking permission
 Barua said Lahiri blocked permission to the event, which was scheduled to be held on Nov. 2 and 3, as the former pointed out to the West Bengal Government Tribal Development department that a large amount of fund was being paid to Global Chess Foundation (Lahiri's 'own company') for promotion of chess among tribal communities and suggested that the funds instead should go to the BCA.

Accordingly, the minister (Rajib Banerjee) "instructed the department to hand over the project to BCA instead of GCF".

Other charges
 Among Barua's allegations, Lahiri not holding the BCA elections even though his tenure was over in Dec. 2018, not letting two players participate in events and instructing BCA members not to invite GMS Surya Sekhar Ganguly and Deep Sengupta for tournaments were prominent.

Lahiri's response
 In his response, Lahiri said since a FIDE-rated event scheduled in Durgapur had to get preference as per BCA regulations, Barua was asked to only change the dates of his event.

According to Lahiri, player Dilip Das was denied entry to some events as he was not registered with BCA, while Sneha Halder was denied entry by the organiser of an event on disciplinary ground.

The decision not to invite Ganguly and Sengupta was "unanimously" taken by the BCA, Lahiri said.

Lahiri said as per his agreement with the Tribal Development department he was to be remunerated for his services. "I strongly deny all the allegations against me as [they are] baseless," said Lahiri in a statement.

Take a sip: can global matcha craze save Japan's tea industry?

FUJIEDA

From matcha ice cream to cake and chocolate, producers of traditional Japanese green tea are capitalising on growing global interest in its flavour – even as demand for the drink declines at home.

At Shigehiko Suzuki's tea shop in central Japan, adorned with a traditional "noren" drape, the customers are flooding in but more to scoop up gelato or cake than to sip the bright-green tea.

In 1998, Suzuki's company Marushichi Seicha started making powdered matcha green tea – traditionally made using a bamboo whisk in a tiny room. The firm now exports 30 tonnes of green tea to the U.S., Europe, Africa, Asia and the Middle East. "The demand for matcha is rapidly growing in the world... There's demand for ice cream, desserts and coffee," Mr. Suzuki said.

But in Japan, the consumption of green tea leaves for drinking dropped from 1,174 gm per household in 2001 to 844 gm in 2015, according to the latest government data – a trend Mr. Suzuki puts down to a more westernised diet.

Sensing the shift, Mr. Suzuki branched into matchaflavoured ice cream nine years ago, opening a shop where customers can choose gelato from seven levels of bitterness.

It became so popular, he opened two stores in Tokyo and one in Kyoto, matcha's traditional home.

Tea growers like 67-year-old Yoshio Shoji are also jumping on the bandwagon to grow matcha leaves.

But Shoji said tea fields are shrinking as farmers get too old for the physically demanding work.

Tea leaves were first brought from China to Japan in the early ninth century and the tea was treated more as a medicine at that time.

Traditional ceremony
Matcha developed in 16th-century Kyoto when tea master Sen no Rikyū established the traditional tea ceremony known as "chanoyu".

"It is mainly the over-60s who drink tea. The younger people are, the more they drink coffee... Tea is no longer attractive to customers. Our priority is to boost its appeal," Mr. Suzuki said.

Some tea rooms are trying to modernise the traditional drink to pull in younger punters.

At Tokyo Saryo, a stark-white zen-style space in a quiet neighbourhood, "barista" Yuka Ihara brews Japanese tea in special glass cups.

"There's the cultural tea ceremony and practical bottled tea. But something in-between, like a cafe where customers can enjoy tea in comfortable surroundings, didn't really exist before," Mr. Ihara said.

"It's important to come up with new ways to present and taste tea, as well as new recipes to let people rediscover the value of Japanese tea."

J&K cricket association hopes to reach players through TV

Mentor Irfan Pathan wants the team to get back to practice

NEW DELHI

Jammu and Kashmir's cricket team mentor Irfan Pathan says he is dealing with the most unique challenge of his long crickering career as he tries to keep the State's preparations for the upcoming domestic season on track amid a communication clampdown.

The Jammu and Kashmir Cricket Association (JKCA) has put out advertisements on local TV channels to get in touch with their players from the valley who have been incommunicado.

Communication in the valley has been restricted by the government after the abrogation of the provisions of Article 370, which gave the State special status. Jammu and Kashmir is now a Union Territory.

"The biggest challenge for us is that we are not able to contact players in Kashmir and its districts. We are in touch with the Jammu players," Mr. Pathan, who has played 29 Tests and 120 ODIs for India, said.

The pacer said the current situation in Kashmir has undone the massive gains made by the team in a fitness camp supervised by former Indian team trainer Sudarshan V.P. in June. The domestic season gets under way anything like this before," said the 34-year-old.

Mr. Pathan was appointed as player-cum-mentor in March 2018. He feels sad that the team is back to the drawing board after a successful fitness camp in Kashmir.

Preparations hit

"Preparation has been big hit time. In the training camp held in June, we put a lot of emphasis on fitness as we felt that our biggest weakness was agility. The J&K players have the lungs but they lack in agility so I arranged a qualified trainer like Sudarshan to work on the players.

"The players were supposed to peak by now but it is all back to zero in the current scenario. Even if the situation becomes normal, there is no time for training, it is just about playing matches," he said.

It has been a life-changing stint for Mr. Pathan and he said that he is glad that he has been able to do his bit for the players in the region.

"So many players were about to leave the game but when some of them heard of me taking charge, they found new hope. There is massive talent in the region and I hope I can help as many as I can, during my time there," he added.

Star tortoise, otters get higher protection at CITES

A complete international ban will be enforced on their trade as part of efforts to boost numbers

SHIV SAHAY SINGH
KOLKATA

India's proposal to upgrade the protection of star tortoises (Geochelone elegans), the smooth-coated otter (Lutrogale perspicillata) and small-clawed otters (Aonyx cinereus) in CITES (Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species on Wild Fauna and Flora) have been approved.

These species have been listed under Appendix I of CITES and will now enjoy the highest degree of protection as there will be a complete international ban enforced on their trade.

A star tortoise and, right, a smooth-coated otter.

The upgradation was approved at the Conference of the Parties (COP18) held at Geneva.

Appendix I of CITES lists species that are the most endangered among CITES-listed animals and plants. "They are threatened with extinction and CITES prohibits international trade in specimens of these species except when the purpose of the import is not commercial, for instance for scientific research," the CITES website states.

"It's very encouraging to see that India's proposals received overwhelming support from other parties as well and got approved," Saket Badola, head of TRAFFIC India told The Hindu. TRAFFIC is an international wildlife trade monitoring network.

For fur and as pets

Agni Mitra, deputy director, Wildlife Crime Control Bureau, Eastern Region, said that 90% of trade of star tortoises occurs as part of the international pet market.

The species is categorized as "vulnerable" by the International Union of Conservation of Nature and a decline greater than 30% was predicted by 2025 if the exploitation continued or expanded.

In case of the small-clawed otter and smooth-coated otter, which are traded for their fur in the international market, numbers are also declining due to habitat loss.

Mr. Mitra welcomed the inclusion of Tokay geckos in Appendix II of CITES. "Tokay geckos are sold in the open in some south Asian countries. Its inclusion in CITES Appendix II will bring some restriction on the sale," he said.

Renovation halts rides at French museum

PARIS

Art and architecture fans hoping to experience the glass-enclosed escalators hugging the facade of the Pompidou Centre in Paris will have to wait until next year, as extensive renovation work is carried out on the groundbreaking four-decade-old structure.

The museum has said that the "caterpillar" escalator as well as the sloping stone plaza in front of the iconic structure were closed to the public for work expected to last until September 2020.

As a result, the centre's three million annual visitors will have to use an entrance around back, usually reserved for the vast public library that forms part of the inside-out complex.

While a hit with visitors, the escalator can get unbearably hot under the summer sun, whose rays have taken their toll on the corridors since the Pompidou opened in 1977.

The glass panels in particular, which offer pristine views of the heart of Paris, will be replaced to offer better insulation. The main entry underneath will also be enlarged and equipped with revolving doors.

Teen activist Greta Thunberg reaches New York

NEW YORK

Swedish climate activist Greta Thunberg reached New York on Wednesday, after a 15-day journey crossing the Atlantic in a zero-carbon yacht.

"Land!! The lights of Long Island and New York City ahead," the 16-year-old tweeted, alongside a dark, blurry photo of lights in the distance.

She later wrote on Twitter that her yacht had anchored off the entertainment district of Coney Island in Brooklyn to clear customs and immigration.

Ms. Thunberg is sailing to New York to attend a UN summit on zero emissions next month after refusing to fly there because of the carbon emissions caused by planes.

She was offered a ride on

the Malizia II racing yacht skippered by Pierre Casiraghi, the son of Monaco's Princess Caroline, and German round-the-world sailor Boris Herrmann.

The yacht left Plymouth in southern England on August 14, and the teenager marked the first anniversary of the start of her school strike on August 20.

The 18-metre yacht features state-of-the-art solar panels on its deck and sides, and two hydro-generators provide the vessel's electricity. It can travel at speeds of around 35 knots (70 kmph). Ms. Thunberg, who was diagnosed with Asperger syndrome at the age of 12, began sitting outside the Swedish parliament in August 2018 to get members of parliament to act on climate change.

She was quickly joined by other students around the world, as word of her strike spread through the media, and the "Fridays for future" movement was born.

Spanish kids get 'werewolf syndrome'

MADRID

At least 17 children developed the so-called "werewolf syndrome" in a major medicine mix-up in Spain, the Health Ministry said on Wednesday.

They are suffering from the rare condition known as hypertrichosis that causes abnormal hair growth.

The alert was given in June after parents started noticing their children – some of them babies – were growing hair all over their body after taking what they thought was omeprazole, a drug that helps with gastric reflux.

After investigating, authorities discovered the drugs they took actually contained minoxidil, a medication used for the treatment of hair loss.

The laboratory that sold the medicine has been closed.
