Modi, Trump set new course on terrorism, border security

PM defends action on Article 370 at massive joint rally in Houston

SUHASINI HAIDAR HOUSTON

In a fierce defence of the government's actions in Jammu & Kashmir, Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Sunday said those criticising the decision to revoke Article 370 of the Constitution "promoting terrowere rism".

Mr. Modi's comments came during his address, along with U.S. President Donald Trump, at a rally of over 50,000 Indian-Americans at the NRG stadium in Houston. Both leaders announced a joint front on several key issues, but articulated an entirely new script on cooperation on terrorism.

Attack on Pakistan

In a scarcely veiled attack on Pakistan, Mr. Modi said the "whole world knows where the threads from the 9/11 terror attacks to the 26/11 Mumbai lead".

"It is time to fight a decisive battle against terrorism and all those who promote terrorism," he added, asking the crowd to give Mr. Trump a standing ovation for his commitment to fighting ter-joint rally by the two leaders.

Earlier, Mr. Trump said the two countries were committed to "combatting radical Islamic terrorism", and linked Indian and U.S. positions on security and terrorism to show that bilateral ties between both countries are closer "than ever "Both India and the U.S. understand that to keep our communities safe we must protect our borders," Mr. Trump said in comments that seemed to refer to the government's resolve to crack down on human trafficking, and also endorsed India's actions in fighting cross-border terrorism and actions on Article 370 in Jammu & Kashmir.

"Border security is vital to the United States and border security is vital to India," Mr. Trump added, vowing "unprecedented action" on the U.S.' southern borders against illegal immigration.

Speaking about the withdrawal of Article 370, Mr. Modi said the legislation had "kept the people of Jammu & Kashmir and Ladakh away from development and strengthened those promoting terrorism".

He also asked for a standing ovation for all parliamentarians in India who had passed the new legislation in both Houses with a twothirds's majority.

"India's action within its boundaries are causing discomfort to some people who are unable to manage their own country. These people put their hatred of India at the centre of their political agenda. These are people who support terrorism," he said, in another reference to Pakistan.

Kashmir Valley's IT hub gasps as Net shutdown continues

Several workers at the Rangreth facility have been laid off

VIJAITA SINGH

It's "no work, no pay" for Omar Yousuf, a computer engineer in Srinagar. He comes to office every day though.

The future of Yousuf and hundreds of others employed in the IT sector in the Kashmir Valley is in jeopardy due to the prolonged Internet shutdown. Several workers have been handed pink slips.

The sprawling Information Technology (IT) hub at Rangreth in Budgam district, on the outskirts of Srinagar, wears a deserted look.

Since Internet connectivity was snapped on August 5 following the revocation of the special status of the State under Article 370, one of the only IT hubs in the Valley is struggling for survival. There are approximately 1,200 employees who work in the Rangreth complex.

Funds crunch

Some firms that have been operating here for over a decade have had to lay off as much as 60% of their staff as they are unable to bear financial losses as a result of the shutdown. "Internet is oxygen for the IT sector; how can we survive in its absence?" said one of the founders of a firm at Rangreth. He, however, wished to remain anonymous.

The entrepreneur says the Valley has seen several disturbances in the past, including the 2016 unrest after the killing of Hizbul Mujahideen commander Burhan Wani, but the IT sector was never hit the way it has been

He said the Department Telecommunications (DoT) has stringent compliance protocols for IT service providers in the State. The service providers have to maintain a log of each Uniform Resource Locator (URL) accessed by them and their clients through the commercial leased lines and report to the authorities on a daily basis.

"We have to send people to Delhi to check e-mails. In the past one month, we lost two clients and suffered a loss of ₹8-9 crore. We are a small company... 60% employees are serving notice; we have no option but to lay them off. It feels bad - these young men and women have been associated with us for several years," he said.

"We come here, talk to each other and leave whenever we wish to. There is nothing to do, we did not receive salary for the month of August," says Khalid Bhat, who works at an IT services and software firm.

Mr. Bhat earned ₹20,000 per month.

Choose nationalistic parties, says Amit Shah

BJP kicks off Maharashtra campaign

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

Kicking off the Bharatiya Janata Party's campaign for the Maharashtra Assembly election on Sunday, party president Amit Shah asked voters to choose between nationalistic parties, such as the BJP that withdrew Article 370 from Jammu & Kashmir and family-oriented parties, such as the Congress and the Nationalist Congress Party (NCP), that opposed the decision.

"This is the first election after the decision on Article 370. Those parties that opposed the abrogation of Article 370 should be shown their place in this election. The people of Maharashtra now need to take a decision. Will they choose a nationalistic party that takes pride in serving them or a party that

Cannabis high for Manipur's start-up dream

The State government is exploring the possibility of using it for medicine

RAHUL KARMAKAR

Cannabis legalised for medicinal and industrial use may give Manipur's start-up dream a high.

The Bharatiya Janata Party-led coalition government, headed by Chief Minister Nongthombam Biren Singh, has been hard-selling its 'Start-up Manipur' campaign since August 2018. Round two of the campaign began on September 20.

On Sunday, Mr. Singh told The Hindu from Imphal that his government was planning to legalise cannabis, or marijuana, to enable units of companies using it as an ingredient for medicines or for other industrial purposes to open.

Start-ups would also be considered. "But such companies have to be capable," he said. Mr. Singh said he had taken his cue from States such as Arunachal Pradesh, Uttar Pradesh and Uttarakhand that have legalised cultivation and harvest of cannabis for medicinal purposes. "Oil extracted from cannabis is known to be useful in strengthening nerves and treating people suffering from paralysis. Also, legalising cannabis can boost the economy," he said. After the first round of

'Start-up Manipur', the State government reportedly identified 334 entrepreneurs for financial assistance. Of them, 29 were seen to have high potential.

'Best weed'

Cannabis competes with opium across large swathes of land in Arunachal Pradesh, Manipur and Nagaland. Drug enforcement officials say the cannabis grown in remote areas of Manipur is considered the "best weed" across the country. Agencies such as the Narcotics Control Bureau (NCB) destroy poppy cultivation but have a tough time checking cannabis grown on a large scale in interior areas. Moreover, many plantations are in areas controlled by extremist groups. Surveys by the NCB and some private agencies say much of the marijuana in Manipur has been cultivated for at least four decades in Churachandpur, Senapati and Ukhrul districts. Manipur is on the edge of the Golden Triangle of drug trade, comprising Thailand,

Myanmar, Laos and China.

Sealing drive in Vikas Nagar renders potters jobless

They want government to help them in switching over to cleaner fuels instead of shutting down the pottery units

NEW DELHI

Outside her asbestos-roofed two-room rented house in Vikas Nagar, 40-vear-old Sheela is worried about how to feed her six children. For many like her, pottery making is the only livelihood. But they were shattered after the South Delhi Municipal Corporation (SDMC) had sealed 22 pottery units in the area on September 11 for causing pollution.

"They [officials] came and sealed the furnace last Wednesday. I am really tensed about what we will eat. We are not educated and we don't know any other job. If there is no work, we will go hungry," she said and added, "There is no help from the government to convert to gas or electric furnace. How will we do it then?" Sheela asked.

Across Kumar Colony in Vikas Nagar, which houses around 600 potter families, people said that government should help them in moving to cleaner fuels instead of shutting them down. Most of the potters use earthen furnace to make pots and diyas.

The civic body had sealed the units for using wood and sawdust and thus causing pollution, following directions from the Delhi Pollution Control Committee (DPCC). The move came after the National Green Tribunal (NGT) asked the DPCC to file an action taken report on an ongoing case of alleged pollution due to pottery units operating in the city in April.

"We would inspect the area again and decide the future course of action," a DPCC official told The Hindu, when asked whether more such units will be sealed.

Sheela's husband, Mahaveer Prajapat, 45, from Rajasthan said his family has been making pottery for at least five generations now. "My father came to Delhi from Alwar and I have been in Delhi for the last 35 years. After a week, I have starting making pots since last Wednesday and plan to use a friend's furnace," he said, while putting a chunk of mud onto the potter's wheel. "We will have to do something to eat, right?" he said with a sigh.

"We sell one batch of about 250-300 pots for about ₹4,500," he said.

A little away from Sheela's house, Giriraj Prajapat, 50, whose furnace was also sealed demanded help from the government. "Either give us another job or move us to another place or give us subsidy or loan to buy electric or gas furnace," he said.

As a crowd gathered at Giriraj's house, other potters said they feared that their furnaces will also be sealed. "Sarkar ko humara kaam dabana nahi chahiye, uthana chahiye [Government should not destroy our work, but they should uplift it]," said Kuldeep Prajapati, 30, who works as a potter in the colony.

"Modi government talks about banning plastic and in that case people will have to use more of earthen vessels. Still, why are you destroying potters?" he asked.

Mohan Kumar, 32, another potter, was worried as he would be among the next set facing government action. "We can't just stop our work and go. What will our children eat? They will also remain illiterate like us," the father of two lamented.

While user charges are typically allowed in order to supplement the upkeep of public toilets, in the present case, the civic body will be covering the charges. The North civic body will bear the cost of operation, management and maintenance and the agency will "not be ODF certification, the civic permitted to take user lar inspections and reportcharges from users under edly built 500 extra toilets any circumstances", the document states.

The scheme is being implemented to get rid of the "menace of rampant open defecation", it states, adding that the agency which wins the contract would be expected to work towards this target.

Overall, the estimated cost of maintaining all units, which have been grouped into 13 categories, has been pegged at about ₹10 crore. The contracted agency will be responsible for cleanliness of the facility, mopping on an hourly basis, provision of security, daily repairs, prevention of encroachments, proper lighting around the toilet comprovision plexes, dustbins, including separate disposal of sanitary napkins. provision of soap and washing powder free of charge and other basic facilities. The toilets will have to be open round the clock, throughout the year.

Even after questioning over 30 people, the police are vet to find a lead in the murder of a 59-year-old woman in east Delhi's Madhu Vihar, the police said on Sunday. She was shot dead by bikeassailants Saturday.

An officer said they have obtained 20 CCTVs from the possible escape routes taken by the two assailants after the murder. "We have questioned the people who hold criminal records to get a clue in the case. CCTVs are being scanned," the officer added. The incident took place when the woman was driving her husband to Max Hospital in Vaishali for his dialysis. "In a CCTV footage near the crime spot, two men on a black bike can be seen opening fire at the woman. We are tracing the motorbike. It could be the robbers, who live in Ghaziabad and operate in Delhi," added the officer.

'Act of desperation'

The motive of murder will be clear only after the accused are nabbed, the police said, adding it could be an act of desperation after a failed robbery attempt.

The victim, Usha Gupta from Radhey Shyam Park Extension, worked as assistant manager at New India Insurance company.

A murder case has been registered and teams are probing all angles, including personal enmity, the police added.

Can Delhi dispose of its garbage hills?

The green tribunal's directive to biomine landfill sites at Okhla, Bhalswa and Ghazipur has prompted experts to question the risks involved in the process. Sidharth Ravi probes the pros and cons of the proposed exercise

CITY MATTERS

he infamous garbage hills of Delhi – at Okhla, Bhalswa and Ghazipur will soon be "biomined" in order to have them cleared.

The landfills are proposed to be dug up and the garbage, after processing, would either be recycled, or sent to fill up the abandoned Bhatti Mines on the border of south Delhi, or be used as road construction material. But without clarity on the toxicity levels of what will be dug up and sent to the mines, there remains a risk of contaminating a whole new area, especially if done without adequate safeguards.

A study by researchers at IIT-Delhi, recently published in the Journal of Hazardous, Toxic and Radioactive Waste - 'Leachate Characteristics of Aged Soil-Like Material from MSW dumps: Sustainability of Landfill Mining' - tackles exactly this question. Through multiple mined samples from three landfills in different parts of India, including the one at Okhla, the study determines the presence of dangerous levels of toxicity in the leachate (darkcoloured liquid produced when water seeps through garbage) produced from such excavated and processed landfill material.

The exercise of biomining and bioremediating the landfills was ordered by the National Green Tribunal in July. Based on the reported success of similar work carried out by the Indore Municipal Corporation at its landfill site, the tribunal instructed the three municipal corporations of Delhi to begin the project on their landfills by October 1. And finish clearing them within a year.

The cost of carrying out the work at all three sites, estimated at ₹250 crore by the court, has been set aside in an escrow account. The NGT has instructed that this amount would be forfeited if satisfactory progress is not shown within six months.

'Capping' ruled out

While passing the order, the NGT cited multiple reports of groundwater pollution, fire breakouts, festering of unhygienic conditions and an increase in air pollution caused by such landfills across the country. Taking cognisance of the hazards of such dump sites on public health and the environment, it was determined that they must be cleared at the earliest. To this end, the tribunal rejected the alternative of Board, presented to the NGT, "Capping of dump sites was not advisable as it would lead to generation of more leachate and methane gas which would further contaminate the alreaheavily contaminated groundwater." Such capping could only be allowed in the complete absence of potential of biomining and bioremediation, the NGT observed.

The Indore example The case of the Indore Municipal Corporation, which had reportedly cleared 15 lakh metric tonnes of a landfill site within one year through biomining, was cited to recommend the same. Asad Warsi, who assisted in the Indore model and presented the case to the tribunal, explained the process thus: the material after being excavated and aerated for decomposition was put through trommels (a large sieve tube) to segregate it. Construction and demolition material thus separated was sent to cement plants, while others like cloth and plastic were used as refuse-derived fuel. The remaining soil-like material was spread out over the area of the landfill.

would be only about 30%, Mr. Warsi claimed.

The project carried out in Indore was also used to recommend similar works in Ahmedabad and Gurugram. However, the scale of work to be carried out in Delhi, where the three landfills have a combined capacity of 2.8 crore metric tonnes of garbage, spread over 152 acres of land, and the plan to fill the abandoned mines to attempt afforestation would be a first of its kind, said Mr. Warsi, who has been roped in as a consultant by the Delhi civic bodies.

'Safeguards needed'

As part of the study, various tests for toxicity were performed on leachate produced in a lab from soil-like material, which was dried, mixed and screened after being from collected from landfills in Hyderabad, Delhi and Kadapa. Results of these tests were compared with water passed through regular soil, collected from 5 km around the landfill. The study showed that heavy metal concentration was up to 96% higher in the soil-like material. Other characteristics and elements such as hardness, calcium, magnesium, sulfates, chlorides, bromides, organic matter, alkalinity and ammoniacal nitrogen were all found to be in much higher concentration.

"We can expect that about 20% of the landfill will probably be toxic," Mr. Warsi conceded. It would perhaps also be laden with heavy metals given the size of the city and the age of the landfills, he added. While the oldest landfill at Ghazipur has been operational since 1984, the one at Bhalswa has been operational since 1993 and the one at Okhla since 1994.

A lot of unchecked hazardous material not supposed to be dumped at landfills may have found its way here, he explained. This would affect the toxicity of the soil-like material which would be derived from the landfills. But to make sure it doesn't contaminate the mine it is shifted to, safeguards such as sandwiching the material between layers of soil and geosynthetic clay liners would be undertaken, he said.

However, the quality of these liners, the difficulty of laying them inside a mine and the risk of leachate collecting at the bottom of the pit over time would have to be kept in mind, said ex-

Apart from this, Mr. Warsi also suggested that certain varieties of trees could be planted over the site to absorb toxic material. However, here too, the level of penetration of the roots into the soil and their ability to absorb heavy metals will have to be considered. In any case, Mr. Warsi said that the solution with the least environmentally hazardous impact had to be chosen.

While such techniques, possibly unaccounted for costs, may be deployed to safely dispose of the waste in the country's capital, similar safeguards will also have to be kept in mind while dealing with biomining exercises set to start across the country. The NGT in its order has also directed all municipal corporations in the country to carry out similar projects, starting November 1, one month after the work commences in Delhi.

INTERVIEW

'Reuse of contaminated material biggest challenge'

Study by research group at IIT-Delhi says contaminants may affect subsoil and groundwater if not treated cautiously

As Delhi's civic bodies prepare to biomine their landfill sites, a research group at IIT-Delhi –professors Manoj Datta, G.V. Ramana, T.R. Sreekrishnan and research scholars Mohit Somani and Garima Gupta - working in the areas of geo-environment and biochemical engineering, offer their view on the project in an email interview to Sidharth Ravi. Excerpts:

What are some of the difficulties that might come up during a biomining exercise and what would be their possible consequences?

■ Biomining is an appealing solution as it offers the option of progressive reduction in height of waste dumps and their eventual disappearance. A small part of the recovered material can be used for recycling or generating energy. The bulk [more than 50% to 60%] of the segregated material produced by biomining looks like soil and gravel. Unfortunately, they contain several contaminants which were present in the original waste, even though the waste has undergone biodegradation as well as washing, due to infiltration of rainwater over the years. Reuse or disposal of this 'contaminated soil-like material' is the biggest challenge. In several countries, this material, often referred to as 'secondary soil', have specific guidelines for their offsite applications.

What are the findings of your research on leachate characteristics of 'soil-like material' from Indian landfills?

Our study on four-five Indian dump sites has shown that the soillike material from mining of MSW [municipal solid waste] releases brownish leachate when rainwater percolates through it. The leachate has high soluble salts and elevated heavy metals in comparison to the local soil. These findings are supported by results of overseas researchers

If excavated material is used without further processing or use of liners what would happen?

■ If the soil-like material is spread in thin layers, say a few inches or less than 30 cm, its impact is likely to be minimal. However, if it is placed in thickness of several metres, as in filling low-lying areas or embankments, or tens of metres, as in deep-mined pits, the contaminants can affect the subsoil as well as the groundwater through colouration, increase in salinity and elevation of heavy metals. In such cases, the importance of liner systems, cover systems and leachate collection systems cannot be under emphasised.

What kind of difficulties may be faced in filling a mine with excavated landfill material?

■ The base of deep pits, created by mining in the past, is close to the groundwater table. The fractures and fissures in the base rock act like small conduits interconnected to the groundwater. Placing excavated and segregated soil-like material from landfills on the base of these pits, in close proximity of the water table, without polluting it, is a daunting task. Single liners such as clay, geomembranes or geosynthetic clay liners alone would not be enough to stop leakages. Double composite liner systems, with leachate collection as well as leakage detection systems (similar to those used at the base of hazardous waste landfills) would be desirable. Placing such liners along the steep side slopes of the pits as well as along the jagged base of the pit would be complex and expensive.

Any other observation on the exercise being undertaken by the municipal corporations of Delhi...

■ Biomining is a slow process involving the use of rotating screens (trommels) to segregate the material. A critical step relates to drying of the wet excavated waste by spreading and aeration (sun-drying) prior to screening. This is a natural process which takes time. Trommel screening of dry waste is desirable for good quality of segregation, but it produces dust. If the waste is not dried adequately, it forms lumps and clods which clog the screens of trommels. A fine balance is needed to prevent dust emissions or the entire operation has to be performed under a gigantic cover. The process can be hastened by using several trommel screening plants concurrently, if adequate land area is available. But it is still likely to take several years to process the entire waste at any large dump site of 50 m height, keeping in view the fact that operations are interrupted during the monsoon season.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

A group of 13 alleged accomplices of fugitive Haryana gangster Vikram Gujjar alias Papla were handcuffed and paraded in undergarments through the roads of Alwar district's Behror town by the police on Sunday. The police, who are yet to arrest Vikram, claimed that the parade would instil faith among the public about the capability of law enforcement agencies.

Vikram, 28, had fled from the Behror police station on September 6 in a daredevil act, when more than a dozen persons stormed into the building and opened indiscriminate fire at the lockup. He was earlier detained for questioning after the police intercepted his SUV and seized ₹31.90 lakh from him during night patrolling.

Police have announced a reward of ₹1 lakh for information leading to the arrest of Vikram, who remains at large. During the raids in different towns and villages of Haryana, Uttar Pradesh and the National Capital Region in the last two weeks, the Special Operations Group of Rajasthan police has arrested about 20 alleged accomplices of Vikram.

A large police team, led by Bhiwadi Superintendent of Police Amandeep Singh Kapoor, paraded 13 of the arrested persons - handcuffed and in undergarments from the government higher secondary school grounds to the police station through the roads in Behror. Each of them carried a reward of ₹50,000 on his head.

Eyewitness accounts said

while the police officers were trying to get clues from the suspected criminals about their escape routes and hideouts, the crowd which gathered on either side of the road clapped, ridiculed the accused and took pictures and made video recordings of the parade on their mobile phones.

NDA will get three-fourth majority: Shah

BJP president does not name Shiv Sena in speech; no meeting with Uddhav

MUMBAI

Visiting Mumbai, a day after announcement of Assembly polls in Maharashtra, Bharativa Janata Party (BJP) president Amit Shah on Sunday chose not to meet Shiv Sena chief Uddhav Thackeray maintaining secrecy over whether or not both parties will contest the election as an alliance.

Addressing a public rally in Goregaon, Mr. Shah announced that Chief Minister Devendra Fadnavis would continue at the post even after the polls. The BJP president went on to say that the National Democratic Alliance (NDA) would get three-fourth majority in the Assembly of 288 seats. While his reference to the NDA has sent mix signals, Mr. Shah did not mention Shiv Sena in his speech. This is being viewed as a snub to the Sena which is projecting Aaditya Thackeray, son of party chief Uddhav Thackeray, as its nominee for the CM's post.

"The Fadnavis government worked alongside Narendra Modi government at the Centre. The Modi government out any wrinkles in their got a second term and I am clear voters have made up their minds to give Fadnavis another term," Mr. Shah

However, throughout the day Mr. Shah did not hold any political meeting either with the BJP leaders or with Mr. Thackeray, as speculated. It was widely believed that the meeting between both the leaders would iron partnership and an alliance between two parties would be finalised.

The Sena chief has already said that he is hopeful of an alliance with the BJP while Mr. Fadnavis too has said that both parties will contest as part of a coalition. Mr. Thackeray has also said that the seat-sharing formula for the Assembly polls was decided by himself, Mr. Fadnavis and Mr. Shah before

Lok Sabha polls. Sena's Rajya Sabha MP Anil Desai on Friday said that the Sena would accept the number of seats given to it by the BJP.

Intense speculation is continuing on the number of seats each part would contest, with the latest version being BJP would contest 162 seats with Sena contesting on 126. The smaller parties would be accommodated from BJP's quota.

Senior Sena leader Divakar Raote had said that party expects 50:50 seat sharing formula and failing to do so would result in the breaking of the alliance. The BJP however has retorted by saying those not part of the seatsharing talks should not get involved.

J&K homes would have had gold roofs'

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

People in Jammu & Kashmir would have had gold-roofed homes if previous governments spent all the funds released by the Centre for its, Union Home Minister Amit Shah said on Sunday. adding, "the Indian government has spent ₹ 2.27 lakh crore so far on J&K.'

Elections are in Maharashtra, not J&K: Opposition

'BJP focusing campaign on Article 370 to hide failures in State'

ALOK DESHPANDE

The Opposition on Sunday said that Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) should understand that Assembly elections have been announced in Maharashtra and not in Jammu & Kashmir.

"Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Union Home Minister Amit Shah, along with the BJP leaders are harping about the Kashmir issue. Shah came to Mumbai to give a lecture about the decision on withdrawal of Article 370. The leaders of BIP need to be reminded that the elections are for Maharashtra and not for Kashmir. Amit Shah should go to Kashmir if he wants to talk about Article 370," said Maharashtra Congress spokesperson Sachin Sawant.

"Maharashtra's debts have doubled in the last five years. Farmer suicides have tripled. The number of small and medium enterprises that closed down in the State has quadrupled. Unemployment has increased ten-fold. Corruption has increased by a hundred-fold. The lies of this government have increased a thousand times.

BIP leaders should talk about this," said Mr. Sawant.

Mumbai unit president of Nationalist Congress Party (NCP), Nawab Maik, said that the issue of Article 370 has been raised to hide BJP's failure as a ruling party in Maharashtra. "If Prime Minister Modi gave Kashmir to India, then BJP should explain where were they running the government with Mehbooba Mufti? Amit Shah says not even a single bullet has been fired in Kashmir, but he does not tell us that the area is under curfew," said Mr. Malik.

The NCP leader said that the absolute failure of the BJP to address requirements of citizens of Maharashtra and key issues such as unemployment, farmer suicides and failure in flood management has resulted in the BJP focusing its campaign on Article 370. "This is nothing but an attempt to hide failures," he said.

Shashi Tharoor slams BJP for surge in mob lynchings

'Promotion of Hindi, Hindutva and Hindustan dangerous'

SHOUMOJIT BANERJEE

Congress MP Shashi Tharoor slammed the BJP for the surge in mob-lynching deaths since the party's ascendancy following the 2014 elections and said its idea of Hinduism was a "narrow political ideology" with no connection to its beliefs.

Addressing a session organised by the All India Professional Congress (AIPC) in the city, Mr. Tharoor, criticised Union Home Minister Amit Shah for his push to impose Hindi as a common language over regional ones, saying Mr. Shah's pitch for "one nation one language" was inimical for unity.

Detailing the number of mob-lynching deaths since 2014, Mr. Tharoor said: "What have we seen in the past six years? It started with the killing of [IT professionall Mohsin Shaikh in Pune. Then Mohammad Akhlaq [in Dadri in Uttar Pradesh] was killed on suspicion of slaughtering his cow and consuming beef."

Recounting the grisly killings of Tabrez Ansari and Junaid Khan, the MP said: "Is this our Bharat? Is this what Hindu Dharma says? I am a Hindu but not of this kind... Further, victims are being forced to chant 'Jai Sri Ram'. It is an insult to the Hindu Dharma. It is an insult to Lord Rama that people are being killed using his name."

Remarking that it was appalling that one election result (BJP's 2014 Lok Sabha win) gave so much power to such elements to do anything and kill anyone, he observed that Pehlu Khan (who was killed by cow vigilantes in Alwar in Rajasthan) was lynched despite having a licence to carry cows for dairy farming.

Asked about Mr. Shah's pitch to impose Hindi as a common language, Mr. Tharoor said the three-language formula that had worked so well for the past 70 years ought not to be tinkered with

"There was a discussion in the Constituent Assembly on this issue [of Hindi as a common language]... at the time, many opposed this move owing to the wide range of languages spoken in our country. By the BJP's proposed imposition, for those whom Hindi is not their mothertongue will feel disadvantaged and national unity will suffer," he said.

He said 60% or more of the parliamentarians today speak in Hindi. "But those who cannot speak it must be made to feel that India is their country as well where they will be heard," he said, adding that English had proven useful as a "linking language" in transcending communication barriers.

In the event that Hindi was decreed as the language to be used for all administrative and bureaucratic purposes, Mr. Tharoor observed that non-Hindi speakers, especially those in the southern States, would feel like second-class compelled to master a second language just to know what their rights were.

"We have been trying to make the BJP understand these problems over the common language imposition issue both within Parliament and without, but they simply aren't willing to even listen," he said.

Asserting that the BJP's intransigence over the issue was the main reason why the party had failed to make any significant electoral gains in Kerala, Andhra Pradesh and Tamil Nadu, he said the BIP's perpetual promotion of its idea of 'Hindi, Hindutva and Hindustan' was "dangerous" for the country's unity.

Refuting suggestions of a crisis at the top, he said the Congress was gearing up for crucial State elections as the reins were now firmly in the hands of its president Sonia

Extended monsoon likely to linger till Oct.

Weather conditions not conducive over west Rajasthan for withdrawal to begin

TANVI DESHPANDE

Monsoon of 2019 has been very different. After a two-week delay in arrival, its withdrawal from Mumbai and Maharashtra is also delayed and is likely to stretch into October. Light showers are expected to continue till then even as the days are getting sunny ir Mumbai.

This year, monsoon arrived in Kerala a week late and in Mumbai two weeks later than the projected onset date. The India Meteorological Department (IMD) declared on June 25 that monsoon had arrived in Mumbai and entire Maharashtra.

So far, Mumbai has received 3603.7mm rainfall, or 143.35% of annual average. In the 24 hours leading upto 8.30 a.m. on Sunday, Mumbai received only 0.8mm rainfall. There was some scattered rain in Mumbai on Sunday. However, maximum temperatures remained on the warmer side, with Sunday recording 33.3 degrees Celsius. This is three degrees above tember 1 from west Rajasthan. However, that has not happened so far this season and the weather conditions are not conducive for it to happen in the next few days. Some of the conditions that meteorologists look at include, absence of rain for five days straight, increase in temperature, and reduction in humidity. IMD has forecast very light to light rains for Mumbai, Thane, Palghar, Raigad until Thursday and has forecast similar daytime temperatures for Mumbai.

When asked about the withdrawal of monsoon from the State, K.S. Hosalikar, deputy director general, IMD, said, "There is depression formed in Arabian Sea, so withdrawal will not happen for next couple of days."

Mahesh Palawat, vice-president (meteorology and climate change) at private forecaster Skymet Weather said, "Withdrawal of monsoon is delayed this season. Right now, the easterlies are still active and humidity has not reduced and therefore, the weather conditions have not built up yet in west Rajasthan for withdrawal. It may happen in first week of October following which it will cover entire India including Maharashtra. In 2011, withdrawal had happened in late September and in 2010, it happened

Akshay Deoras, a meteorologist and Ph.D. researcher at the University of Reading, U.K., who has been tracking the monsoon closely, said, Withdrawal from western Rajasthan is expected to commence by September 27. However, the official declaration might happen only in early October due to which monsoon's withdrawal this year will be delayed by a month from its normal date of September 1. Thereafter, we can expect a rapid withdrawal of the monsoon from parts of northwest and central India. In Maharashtra, rainfall activity will start terminating from early October and we can expect the withdrawal to start from the second week."

Meanwhile, an IMD press release issued at 11.15 a.m. on Sunday said a depression in the Arabian Sea off Gujarat coast could intensify into a deep depression in the next 12 hours, and a cyclonic storm in 24 hours. This could result in lead to light to moderate rainfall at many places with isolated heavy falls over Saurashtra and Kutch.

Govt. lost chance to strengthen economy 5 yrs back: Desarda

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA AURANGABAD

The NDA government had a chance to strengthen the economy five years back when the crude oil rates were low, but it could not take advantage of the situation, noted economist H.M. Desarda has said.

India's gross domestic product (GDP) growth slowed for the fifth consecutive quarter in April-June 2019 to 5%, the lowest in six years. This was on the back of faltering domestic demand, with both private consumption and investment proving lacklustre.

Delivering a lecture on the 'current economic downfall – causes impacts and remedies' at the Mahatma Gandhi Mission campus here in Maharashtra on Saturday, Mr. Desarda said in 2013, the crude oil rates were around $110 per barrel. "When the Modi-led government came to power, the crude oil prices dropped. That time, the government spent huge amounts on crude oil import to meet the petrol and diesel demands," he

"The government could have utilised this financial gain to strengthen the employment guarantee schemes, water resource development, curbing drought and flood control. But the government could not take advantage of that situation," said the former member of the Maharashtra State Planning Board.

Renovation on, tigers to be exchanged for a variety of birds

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA AURANGABAD

Two tigers from Aurangabad's Siddharth Zoo will be sent to Byculla Zoo in Mumbai in exchange for a variety of birds, a senior civic official said here on Sunday.

The Siddharth Garden and Zoo, run by the Aurangabad Municipal Corporation, is being renovated and the tigerbird exchange was decided upon due to excess number of big cats here, said Zoo Director BS Naikwade.

"We have decided to give two tigers to Mumbai's Veer Mata Jijabai Bhosale Udyan And Zoo (popularly known as Byculla Zoo) and get several species of birds from there. Two civic officials will be visiting Mumbai to complete formalities. We currently have 12 Mr. Naikwade tigers," Speaking about the renovation of the Siddharth Zoo, Mr. Naikwade said, "A cage that previously housed elephants will be used by two bears that are being brought in from Hemalkasa. Leopards from the Manikdoh Rescue Centre can also be brought here." He said the cost estimation process for the renovation work, to accommodate these animals, was currently underway.

Extremists were holding a meet; several members injured

STAFF REPORTER VISAKHAPATNAM

Three Maoists, including two women, were killed in an exchange of fire with security forces, comprising the elite anti-Naxal force Greyhounds and the Special Police Party, near the Madigamallu-Kondajartha forest area at GK Veedhi mandal in district, Visakhapatnam Andhra Pradesh, on Sunday. The identity of the slain Maoists is yet to be ascertained.

Several Maoists are suspected to have been injured in the incident at Gummarevula panchayat.

The security forces seized one Self-Loading Rifle (SLR), two .303 rifles, one 12 bore rifle, six kit bags and one landmine. Sources said the dead Maoist was suspected to be Gemmela Kamesh alias Hari, a Galikonda Area Committee member, but there was no confirmation from the police.

Foundation day

The exchange of fire comes at a time when the banned CPI (Maoist) is celebrating its formation week from September 21 to 27.

It was on September 23, 2018 that the then Araku Valley MLA, Kidari Sarveswara Rao, and former MLA Siveri Soma were killed by the Maoists near Livitputtu village under the Dumbriguda police station limits in the

According to sources, the extremists, led by senior woman leader Aruna, were conducting a meeting in the Madigamallu area. Based on credible information, the police forces rushed to the area. When the Maoists opened fire, the security forces retaliated. Many Maoists managed to escape into the forest. None of the policemen were injured in the gunfight.

According to Superintendent of Police (Visakhapatnam Rural) Attada Babujee, the exchange of fire took place around 2 pm.

Telangana inflating surplus: CAG

Revenue surplus overstated and fiscal deficit understated, says audit report

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

The Comptroller and Auditor-General of India (CAG) has found fault with the Telangana government for overstating its revenue surplus and understating fiscal deficit on account of misclassification, non-contribution to statutory funds and classifying subsidies as loans.

The CAG said the State's revenue surplus, pegged at ₹3,459 crore, for the year 2017-18 was overstated by ₹3,743.74 crore while the fiscal deficit of ₹26,700 crore was understated by ₹954.6 crore. "Effectively, there was a revenue deficit of ₹284.74 crore and fiscal deficit was ₹27,654 crore," the CAG said

Greater reliance on market borrowing has led to increase in liabilities in its State Finances Audit Report for the year ended March 2018

COMPTROLLER AND ALIDITOR-GENERAL

Further, the CAG said the fiscal deficit (₹26,700 crore) was 3.55% of the Gross State Domestic Product (GSDP) pegged at ₹7,52,230 crore, which marginally exceeded the 3.5% limit fixed by the 14th Finance Commission.

The outstanding public debt to GSDP was 19%, which was within the 22.82% ceiling fixed by the finance panel. The outstanding liabilities too at 22.05% of the GSDP was well within the prescribed limit of 25% as per the medium term fiscal policy statement of the State government, the report said.

According to the report, the revenue receipts (RR) and revenue expenditure (RE) had increased during the period 2015-16 to 2017-18 even after accounting for inflation. However, the RR and RE had decreased as percentage of the GSDP.

Pat for tax collection The growth of RR and RE decreased in 2017-18 in comparison to the preceding year and the capital expenditure, which increased in 2016-17, declined in 2017-18.

The State, however, came in for praise for tax collection, with the CAG stating that the cost of collection of major taxes had decreased during the last three years, indicating greater efficiency (measured as cost of collection of tax as a percentage of tax collection).

Telangana also fared favourably in its focus on development expenditure (₹84,006 crore) and capital expenditure (₹23,902 crore) compared to other general category States. The burden of committed expenditure as a percentage of revenue expenditure was steadily rising due to increase in interest payments (26% over 2016-17) and pension payment (32% over 2016-17).

Endosulfan victims send notice to Kerala

They are yet to get the SC-ordered relief of ₹5 lakh

KRISHNADAS RAJAGOPAL

A legal notice was sent to the Kerala Chief Secretary on behalf of four minor Endosulfan victims to whom the Supreme Court had ordered the State to pay ₹5 lakh compensation

A Bench of Justices D.Y. Chandrachud and Indira Banerjee had in July first week ordered the Kerala government to pay the compensation in two months to the victims, suffering the effects of the pesticide which was aerially sprayed on cashew plantations adjoining their leeswaram Raj, who represented the victims in the apex court, told the Chief Secretary that it was "totally unfortunate" on the part of the State to "wilfully refuse" to pay the compensation. Non-payment of the money would lead to contempt of the Supreme Court, it said. In fact, the July order of the apex court had given the lawyer liberty to revive the contempt action against the Kerala government. The July order had come on a contempt petition filed by the four children – Archana, Afsal, Nisha and M. Badhavi – through their natural guardians for the non-disbursement of the ₹5 lakh by the Kerala government to Endosulfan victims in violation of an order passed by the Supreme Court on January 10, 2017. The victims said that even a list prepared by the State government of victims entitled to get ₹5 lakh compensation comes to around 6,000 persons.

The State cannot limit disbursement of the amount only to the persons included in the list maintained by it, the contempt petition which had arraigned Chief Secretary K.M. Abraham said.

In January, the Kerala government claimed it earmarked over ₹180 crore for payment of compensation.

Responding to the contempt petition by the children, the State through Mr. Abraham said the four victims were classified in the 'Other' category list and not eligible for the ₹5 lakh compensation.

SC hearing today to decide fate of disqualified MLAs

'BJP will protect their interests whatever the verdict'

B.S. SATISH KUMAR

The Bharatiya Janata Party leadership is waiting for clarity to emerge on the issue of the disqualified MLAs contesting the Assembly bypolls as the Supreme Court takes up their petitions for hearing on Monday.

According to highly placed sources in the BJP, the central leadership has taken a stand to honour its commitment. "There is no question of ignoring them [the former MLAs] even if the Supreme Court decision is not in their favour. The party will field them as candidates if they get a favourable verdict. Otherwise, we will give preference to candidates suggested by them," a prominent BJP leader said.

If the court does not take

any decision sooner or if its verdict goes against them, then they are most likely to suggest the names of their family members. Some of them are likely to seek party ticket for their wives, sources said.

However, there is a feeling among a section of the leaders managing the bypolls that the family members are politically not a match for the disqualified MLAs themselves as most of them (family members) are not active in public life. But there is no choice for the party as it cannot choose its own candidates in the constituencies.

Senior BJP leaders also pointed out that a couple of disqualified MLAs have made it clear that they or their family members would not contest the bypolls. In such constituencies, the party would make its own choice of candidates in consultation with the disqualified MLAs, they said.

Chief Minister B.S. Yediyurappa met party national president and Union Home Minister Amit Shah on Sunday and held consultations with him. Mr. Shah reportedly asked him to wait for Monday's hearing.

Minor raped by 30 men, two arrested

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA MALAPPURAM

A minor girl has been sexually assaulted allegedly by a group of around 30 people for over two years in Malappuram district of Kerala, the police said on Sunday.

Two persons were arrested and remanded in judicial custody for raping the 12-year-old.

The police were alerted by the child helpline. "We registered a case and arrested the duo," the investigating officer told PTI without giving further details.

Investigation revealed that the group of men had sexually assaulted the girl over a period of two years. The police are also probing the role of her father.

The girl has given her statement to a magistrate and has been shifted to a home, the police said.

Acquitted by law, shunned by relatives

Several mentally ill persons remain 'imprisoned' as kin refuse to take them back

K.S. SUDHI

Law might have taken a lenient view of Purushothaman, but life has not.

Locked up in a cell in Kerala two decades ago in a criminal case, he was acquitted by a court in 2009, but the Koodaranji native has not been able to walk to freedom yet. He has been forced to spend his life in the special cell at the Government Medical College, Kozhikode, as his relatives have been reluctant to take him back to their fold. Medical records say Purushothaman is suffering paranoid schizophrenia.

centres in Thiruvananthapuram, Kozhikode and Thrissur. They could not stand trial as they were found to be of unsound mind.

Section 84 of the Indian Penal Code deals with such situations. "Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, by reason of unsoundness of mind, is incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law," reads the Code.

Wait continues

Though 14 persons have been acquitted by courts, they are still remaining in prison-like cells as their relatives are reluctant to take them back.

Kurumban has been in confinement for a quarter century. Though the Judicial First Class Magistrate, Mannarkad, discharged him of all charges way back in 1996, continues to be imprisoned.

Muhammad Sherief, a murder accused, was admitted to the rehabilitation facility in Kozhikode in 2012. Last year, he was acquitted by the Special Judge (for the trial of offences against women and children), Thalassery. But the court ordered his continued custody as the judge was convinced that he was suffering from mental illness and had to be properly taken care of and prevented from injuring himself or any other

Safe custody

Two decades have passed since Shanmughan of Kasaragod was acquitted of murder charge by Sessions Court, Kasaragod, and ordered his safe custody. He too was found "not fit for rehabilitation." It may require an intervention from the higher judiciary to bring justice to them, pointed out a judicial officer involved in the welfare of these prisoners.

Asian elephants perceive distress and also respond to it, say researchers

Free-rangers were seen to inspect and support dying calves in the wild

SHIV SAHAY SINGH

Even though there are a few anecdotal accounts about Asian elephants' reaction to death in connection with members of their herd, scientists have for the first time observed and recorded the behavior of free-ranging Asian elephants towards dying and dead elephants.

The paper titled Behavioural responses of freeranging Asian elephants (elephas maximus) towards dying or dead conspecifics, (conspecifics refers to member of same species) was published in the Springer group of publications earlier this year.

In the publication researchers observed that the elephants showed behaviours like exploratory (sniffing and inspecting) and epimeletic (supporting the distressed animals) or physically helping supporting dying calves.

"We also recorded high frequency vocalisation (trumpets) by an adult female in the case of dying calves. Our observations indicate that, like their African counterparts, Asian elephants might experience distress in response to death of conspecifics and may have some awareness of death," the paper authored by Nachiketha Sharma, Sanjeeta Sharma Pokharel, Shiro Kohshima and Raman Sukumar states.

Through the publication scientists have observed and recorded three specific cases of elephants responding to injured, dying or dead conspecifics.

"Two of the three cases involved adult female calf pair and involved epimeletic or helping behavior towards the injured and dying calves. In all three cases, exploratory and approach/visit behaviours towards the dying and dead individuals were observed," the scientists record in the paper.

ecologist Well-known from the Indian Institute of Science and elephant expert Raman Sukumar who has contributed to the paper said that from the evolutionary biology perspective these behaviours of elephants appear as an adaptive feature. "We are just beginning to understand this, especially the calf deaths because those are not easy to observe in the wild. The whole social cognitive makeup of the elephant, these kinds of significant emotions are a part of this framework," he said.

Prof. Sukumar said that in the case of African elephants a behaviour was observed which involves taking interest in the bones of other elephants. "But that kind of behavior has not been observed in Asian elephants so far," the scientist

In the nine-page long publication, the first example which the scientists cite in this context is of a reaction to a dying calf from an adult female elephant Sita and her two daughters (S1 10-15 years and S2 5-10 years) from Mudumalai National

"The three females surrounded the calf with their legs. S1 sniffed the calf, while Sita gently kicked with her forelegs in an attempt to make it stand. S1 and S2 ioined Sita to help," the scientists observed. During the entire period of observations of 506 minutes which included the subsequent day when the calf died, no signs of agitation or aggression were observed from Sita and her daughters and no vocalisations were heard. The scientists observed very little movement from Sita when she was with her calf.

The Forest Department also provided drinking water to the elephants in a large steel container but only Sita drank. She also showed no signs of aggression when the scientists approached the calf. The death of the new born calf was possibly due to dehydration malnourishment.

In the case of another adult elephant F1 (15 to 20 years old) the reaction to an injured and dying calf appeared to be somewhat different. These observations were recorded in March 2017 when a lone male calf less than a year old rested against the trunk of a dead tree. "The calf stayed in the same position after falling, while F1 touched and sniffed the calf's genital region. F1 blew saliva on herself through her trunk and stood next to the calf, touching it repeatedly. She used her forelegs to encourage the calf to stand on its feet but without much success," Mr. Shar-

Doctors issue warning against heartburn drug

BINDU SHAJAN PERAPPADAN

Days after drugmakers and global public health regulators claim to have taken steps to remove supplies of a popular heartburn medication currently under invesigation the by U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for the presence of human carcinogen called NDMA, or N-Nitrosodimethylamine in Zantac and its generic forms, doctors in India too have cautioned the general public about this popular drug and asked for an urgent advisory by the Indian drug regulator.

Novartis AG's Sandoz unit said earlier this week that it was halting worldwide distribution of generic versions of the stomach drug Zantac after regulators in the U.S. and Europe began investigating the drug.

"In India Ranitidine (some versions of Zantac is is also known by the generic name ranitidine) is used for treating gastrointestinal disorders and discomfort. The news regarding the presence of NDMA in Ranitidine is disturbing. Ranitidine remains the most commonly pre-

peptic disorders and has generally been considered safer than many other medicines," said Dr. Shanti Swaroop Dhar, principal consul-Gastroentorology, tant, Panchsheel Park.

Awaiting findings

He said that doctors need to know whether NDMA is present as an additive and if it is possible to make Ranitidine which is NDMA-free.

"Further we also need more information as to whether the amount of NDMA present is above the threshold and a genuine risk as small amounts of NDMA is present in many common foods. Two parties spar over chairing the committee of a club celebrating the occasion

With less than two weeks left for Durga Puja, Bengal's biggest religious festival, the Trinamool Congress and the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) have locked horns to control as many of the puja arrangements as possible.

Over the last decade, the Trinamool has controlled local clubs that conduct the Pujas, while the BJP has been stepping up its activities for the same in 2019. This has resulted in clashes at multiple levels, such as the one at Sanghashree, a prominent south Kolkata club, recently.

Odisha Lokayukta seeks report from police on 2014 land deal

Property of tribals was acquired and sold to politicians

STAFF REPORTER

The Odisha Lokayukta has directed the State Crime Branch to submit a detailed report about the inquiry the agency had conducted pertaining to alleged irregularity in land transactions involving high profile politicians of the State.

The inquiry pertains to the purchase and sale of high value lease land at Ghangapatna area on the outskirts of Bhubaneswar in 2014.

The crime branch has been asked to submit its report by October 17 while next hearing in the case has been fixed on October 21.

Pradip Pradhan, an RTI activist, had filed a complaint with the Lokayukts alleging the land irregularities were suppressed under instructions from top government authorities.

"In August, 2014, local people and media had exposed that vast stretches of leased land belonging to tribal people had been illegally acquired by late Kalpataru Das, who was then an influential BJD minister, and his son, and the daughter of a BJP MLA," alleged Mr.

Pradhan. After concerns were expressed over land deals, Chief Minister Naveen Patnaik on August 28, 2014 had directed the crime branch to conduct a probe into the scam and submit its report within two months.

"Local tahsildar, in his report to the revenue department, had also pointed out large-scale irregularities in the sale and purchase of land and how middlemen, in connivance with officials, had fraudulently sold land in the area to several persons,"

said Mr. Pradhan. He said during the course of Crime Branch inquiry, a series of arrests of poor tribal lease holders were made and it was claimed that 76 acres of illegally acquired land had been brought back to government record. According to the activist, though Crime Branch arrested poor tribals and few government officials, no action was taken against influential politicians.

Based on an acupuncture theory, the recipe developed by a Naga practitioner has received the approval of Ministry of AYUSH

RAHUL KARMAKAR PASIGHAT

A mainstream Ayurvedic pain therapy has been given a north-eastern twist with betel leaf and Naga Chilli, one of the hottest on earth.

The hot experiment based on an acupuncture theory by Imlikumba Jamir, the sole Naga panchakarma specialist in India, has been approved by the Ministry of Panchakarma, entailing five procedures, is the purification therapy used in Ayurvedic medicine while AYUSH expands to Ayurveda, Yoga and Naturopathy, Unani, Siddha, Sowa Rigpa and Homoeopathy.

Local matters

Issues of livelihood, governance should shape poll campaigns in Maharashtra and Haryana

olitics is set to take the centre stage in national debates with the announcement of Assembly elections in Maharashtra and Haryana, though there was hardly a lull after the Parliament election earlier this year. The BJP is in power in both States currently, in Maharashtra with its oldest and most combative ally, the Shiv Sena. In 2014, the BJP got its first Chief Ministers in both the States, reaping the reward for some audacious political moves. In Maharashtra it gambled away its alliance with the Shiv Sena and contested separately to win 122 seats compared to Sena's 63. The Sena lost its position as the alliance leader in the post-poll alliance, and that reality will now be formalised in a pre-poll alliance. In Haryana, the BJP dramatically rose, assembling a non-Jat social coalition and later reinforcing it by appointing a non-Jat CM in Manohar Lal Khattar. In Maharashtra too, the party's political strategy involved the appointment of a non-Maratha as CM – Devendra Fadnavis. In both States, the Prime Minister's popularity provided further momentum to the BJP's rise, which continued into 2019. The track records of the State governments can be debated but the party's advantage over its political rivals is evident.

The disarray in the opposition ranks, which is partly a reflection of the underlying social factors including deep communalisation of the polity in both States, is the biggest advantage for the BJP. In Maharashtra, the Congress-NCP alliance had long become a bastion of dynastic politics and vested interests. The BIP's strongarm tactics has contributed to furthering the existing vulnerabilities of the alliance. In Haryana, the Opposition is split into three – the Congress, the Indian National Lok Dal and another breakaway faction of the party. These groups are in the grip of the dominant Jat community, which gives a tremendous starting advantage to the BJP. The Congress, under pressure from former CM Bhupinder Singh Hooda, replaced its State Chief Ashok Tanwar, a Dalit, just ahead of the poll announcement. Altogether, the Congress's messaging has been uninspiring for its crucial social base of disadvantaged groups. Despite these remarkable advantages, the BJP has shown a tendency in recent weeks to stir up controversial issues. In Haryana, the CM wants to implement the NRC; in Maharashtra the government is, unlinked to the NRC, planning detention centres for undocumented people suspected to be immigrants. The BJP has also sought to bring issues such as the hollowing out of Article 370 into the campaigns. As two industrialised States, Haryana and Maharashtra must be at the centre of any effort to infuse fresh momentum in the country's sagging economy. Not surprisingly, these States are also hosts to migrant communities. A sharp focus on governance and economy at the State level in the forthcoming campaign will be helpful not only for Maharashtra and Haryana but for the entire country too.

The move to link Aadhaar with GST registration is a tentative step in the right direction

Tver since the Centre and the States passed the d landmark legislation in 2016 adopting a single ✓ countrywide Goods and Services Tax (GST), the federal council that is tasked with overseeing all the regulatory aspects of the indirect tax has had its hands full. From recommending the rates that could apply to various products and services, to deciding on what could be tax exempted, the GST Council has had the onerous task of laying out the policy framework for administering the tax in a manner that benefits all stakeholders the governments, the consumers and the suppliers along the value chain. Given the complexity of the legacy taxes that GST subsumed and replaced and the teething troubles of operating a new tax system, ensuring optimal outcomes has proved an abiding challenge. A significant concern relates to the loopholes that unscrupulous operators have sought to exploit, whereby revenue that ought to have accrued to the Centre and the States has leaked while allowing these elements to derive illicit profits. And the scale of some has been breathtaking. Earlier this month, the Directorate General of GST Intelligence and the Directorate General of Revenue Intelligence conducted a pan-India joint operation, which saw about 1,200 officers simultaneously conducting searches at 336 different locations. In the process they unearthed a network of exporters and their suppliers who had connived to claim fraudulent refunds of Integrated GST, with more than ₹470 crore of input tax credit availed being based on non-existent entities or suppliers with fictitious addresses. A further ₹450 crore of IGST refund is also under review.

It is against the backdrop of such cases, and the fact that frauds totalling up to a staggering ₹45,682 crore have been detected since the roll-out of the tax in July 2017, that the GST Council has decided "in principle" to recommend linking Aadhaar with registration of taxpayers. In its 37th meeting in Goa on Friday, the council also agreed to appraise the possibility of making the biometrics-based unique identifier mandatory for claiming refunds. Already the GST Network - the information technology backbone on which the whole tax system runs – has made it mandatory for new dealers registering under the composition scheme for small businesses to either authenticate their Aadhaar or submit to physical verification of their business, starting January 2020. The council too needs to follow the network's lead and move swiftly to recommend mandatory linking for refunds, especially since that has proved to be the main source of most frauds. In a becalmed economy, neither the Centre nor States can afford to forego even a rupee of revenue that is due to the public coffers.

The nationalist hindrance to climate actions

The UN Climate Action Summit is likely to hand out hard lessons about climate politics in an era of nationalism

NAVROZ K. DUBASH

an global diplomatic jawboning backed by an upsurge of popular youth mobilisation shift the hard economic and political calculus of nations? Today's global Climate Action Summit, convened and energetically backed by the United Nations Secretary General, seeks to pull off just this feat. It seeks to spur national pledges and action to address climate change in the face of mounting information that the community of nations is doing too little, and too late. How likely is this effort to be successful? And what are India's stakes in this

Visible signs and science

The summit occurs amid a steady drumroll of scientific alarm. The scientific advisory group to the summit (of which I am a member), reports that the five years since 2015 is set to be the warmest of any equivalent recorded period, sea level rise is accelerating, and oceans have become 26% more acidic since the dawn of the Industrial era. Recent weather events bring into focus the likely implications of a warming world. This summer saw Delhi-like temperatures across southern Europe; Hurricane Dorian rendered large parts of the Bahamas unliveable; and witnessed simultaneous raging fires in the Amazon, central Africa and even Siberia.

Scientists are increasingly able to link these individual events with climate change – the heat wave in France and Germany was made eight to 10 times more likely by climate change. Yet, concentrations of carbon dioxide continue to rise, and current country pledges would not stem this increase even by 2030.

The growing evidence of climate change - scientific and experiential - has spurred an upwelling of social action, notably among the youth. While more noticeable in the global North, young people are also mobilising in India and other countries in the global South, with The New York Times reporting that organisers estimate four million vouth turned out in protest (on Friday) against inaction on climate change around the

A political disconnect

If science, experience and public alarm are increasingly on the side of action, unfortunately, national politics in country after country is trending in the wrong direction. A turn toward nationalism in multiple countries has created a shortterm, look-out-for-our-own mentality that is inimical to the global collective action needed to address climate change. Thus, in the United States, President Donald Trump not only refuses to enhance actions, he has actively rolled back measures in the electricity sector and actions to limit methane emissions in the name of competitiveness, In Brazil, President Jair Bolsonaro has made it clear he sees environmental protections as limiting Brazilian business. And nationalism in some countries makes it much harder to pursue aggressive action even in countries where the politics is more conducive.

Backed by popular mobilisation and scientific evidence, can the UN Summit swing the tide toward enhanced action? The Secretary-General is pinning hopes on a twotrack approach.

First, in an exercise of diplomatic pressure, countries have been urged to enhance their pledges for action made as part of the Paris Agreement, committing to lower future emissions. The intention is to provide a platform for climate champions to step up and claim leadership of an important global agenda.

So far, the response is underwhelming. A number of small and mid-sized countries, including the United Kingdom, have already committed to achieving the objective of making their economies net carbon neutral by 2050 (that is, the sum of emissions and uptake of carbon through 'sinks' such as forests is zero). By contrast, several large countries, notably the United States, Brazil, Australia, Canada, Japan and Mexico are reportedly not even going to participate in the event at a high level. China and India have issued statements hinting that they are doing quite enough, and India has highlighted the need for enhanced finance if it is to do more. While there may be last minute surprises, the UN Summit does not look like shifting any entrenched positions – those willing to act are known, and those unwilling are unmoved. International suasion, even backed by science and popular mobilisation, seems unlikely to shift entrenched national politics.

The second track operates less in the realm of diplomacy and seeks instead to induce changes in real economies around a set of 'action portfolios'. These include, for example, furthering and accelerating an energy transition toward low-carbon energy, making cities more climate friendly and more resilient to climate disruption, and starting the process of turning energy intensive sectors such as steel and cement more carbon friendly. Notably, domestic objectives are central to these conversations: promoting solar energy for energy security reasons; making cities more liveable; and making industries more efficient and therefore competitive. These initiatives serve as a focal point for broader conversations including coalitions of business and researchers. If the UN Summit is to result in enhanced action, this may well be the more fruitful

A path for India

What does this canvas of global climate politics mean for India? First, that the prospects of effective global action required to address climate change are so weak is extremely bad news for India. We are a deeply vulnerable country to climate impacts. It would behave India not to be a status quo player in this context, but to argue for enhanced global collective action.

Second, India has the potential to show the pathway to accelerating action on climate change even while pursuing its development interests. A notable example is its energy efficiency track record, which helps limit greenhouse gases even while saving the nation energy. However, there are inconsistencies in India's story as a climate champion. India is justifiably recognised for promoting renewable energy, yet also muddies the waters by sending mixed signals on future coal use. The choice of Houston – the U.S. oil capital – for the Indian Prime Minister's recent public event, risks signalling that dence as tied to enhanced fossil fuel use. While some increase in fossil fuel is inevitable for India, the messaging is incoherent at best. India needs domestic energy policies that are more clearly and coherently tuned to a future low carbon world.

Third, such a domestic message would position India to be a true global climate leader, rather than a leader only among climate laggards. Could an India, firmly committed to a low-carbon future that brings development benefits. strike common cause with other powers? Could, for example, India and China, both jostling for influence in African nations but also both losers from climate impacts, jointly help ensure that Africa's development is powered by renewable energy rather than fossil fuels and based on an energy efficient future? Such an agenda could bring together economic, environmental and political gains.

The UN Summit is likely to teach us hard lessons about climate politics in an era of nationalism. The pathway to enhanced action is unlikely to override entrenched national politics, powered by international suasion. Instead, the aim should be to make accelerated climate action congruent with an enlightened notion of national interest by focusing on key actions in rapidly changing areas such as energy and urbanisation. Such a pathway holds enticing prospects for India. But it requires that India can build a diplomatic approach on a firm domestic foundation that takes seriously climate change as a factor in its future development pathway.

Punjab's pain, India's agony, Britain's unrepentance

The U.K. needs to build on the Archbishop of Canterbury's repentant gesture at Jallianwala Bagh

Gesture of atonement

His presence in Jallianwala Bagh, on September 10, as we remember the 100 years of the massacre this year, is momentous. What he did inside the premises of the Bagh was even more dramatic. He lay down flat to pray in front of the memorial and said he was "personally very sorry". This was no publicity stunt. It requires courage to

The Archbishop further added. "I have no status to apologise on behalf of the UK, its government or its history. But I am personally very sorry for this terrible atrocity." He said, "Coming here arouses a sense of profound shame at what happened in this place. It is one of a number of deep stains on British history. The pain and grief that has transcended the generations since must never be dismissed or denied." No words could be more appropriate, well-timed and consol-

As head of the Anglican Church of the world, the Archbishop, Justin Welby, commands a worldwide status. But he also has a special place in Britain. A post granted by the Queen, he crowns the British position in the hierarchy of the British state. In his statement on the Amritsar massacre, he said he was not speaking for his country, but the Anglican Church. As the senior most churchman in a Christian country, his words do matter.

In the light of the descendants of the victims appealing for an apology from the Archbishop to assuage their "hurt feelings against the British atrocities", the Archbishop's repentant gesture seeks to lend a healing touch to the echoes of the dead. The Jallianwala Bagh massacre is one of the most horrific acts of violence in modern history. The impact of General Dyer's cold-blooded, rational shooting of hundreds of innocent lives, on April 13, 1919, with 1.650 gunshots continues to torment. We still have not got over it. Many may never. Not just confined to Punjab, the pain of the carnage forms the collective agony of entire India. The Archbishop did more than what anybody in his position could possibly do. Predictaagain the age-old hyper-sensitive question of the U.K. taking responsibility for its own imperial past and violence. This is the unresolved and controversial historical issue of colonial injustice and apology. The Queen did not apologise. Prince Philip did not. Former British Prime Minister David Cameron on a visit to India in 2013 did not. The current British High Commissioner in 2019 did not. The list goes on and each time a British dignitary comes to Amritsar, it feels like scratching a scab on the wound. A perpetual wound. The city of Amritsar continues to grapple with the legacy of Dyer's savagery. The ensuing military violence echoed across the Punjab.

Contours of imperial violence Dyer's monstrous act was principally a racially motivated onslaught, which formed the core of imperial violence. He ordered the troops to fire without warning and continued even when he could see that people were running for their lives. In his evidence to the Hunter Committee, he persisted, "... I had committed a just and merciful act." Dyer regretted nothing, and made no attempt to conceal anything. After the firing, there was no provision for the relief of the wounded. When questioned, the unrepentant Dyer said, "It was not my job." Dyer's brutality was justified in the racial climate of those times. He was celebrated as a hero in certain British circles. The Dyer Fund was set up for his survival back in England. What is appalling is that the colonial monstrosity continued even after April 13, 1919 in Punjab. Martial law was imposed from April 15. The British held summary trials, tortured prisoners and executed Indians. Punjab, which provided the largest number of recruits during World War I, was rewarded with such type of terrible punishment and brought under a rule of terror. Punjab could never be the same again.

On April 19, Dyer promulgated the "crawling order" on a street in Amritsar where a lady missionary, Miss Sherwood, had been attacked. The order instructed people to crawl on all fours through the lane. They were tied to flogging posts and flogged with several stripes. Dyer's excessive use of racial force was designed to, in his own words, create a "wide impression" and "moral effect". He had the backing of Michael O'Dwyer, the Lieutenant Governor of Punjab and Lord Chelmsford, the Vicerov of India.

The shrieks of the victims of the massacre continue to hound the legacy of the British empire. They echo as haunting cries of a victimised generation of a community whose trauma has not been fully turned into a seething rage. This is not just a matter of apportioning blame and instilling guilt on the British Empire and its after-effects and holding it culpable for its unwarranted monopoly on violence against the colonised. It is also about introspection, acknowledgment and responsibility that would facilitate healing and restitution. The Archbishop of Canterbury's compassionate gesture is certainly a symbolic sign of reconciliation and empathy. The people of India demand that the British government takes the "historic step" towards tendering an apology. Is it not time for Britain to acknowledge the inconvenient truth and trauma of colonial and racial violence? Perhaps, the Archbishop's initiative marks a new

Children for change

It has been heartening to read about and see visuals of the protests staged by millions of school students across the world last Friday over inaction on climate change. These protests and strikes offer many valuable lessons. The first is that students' lives are not confined to the four walls of the classroom but transcend beyond that. Since they are also social beings, they too must have deep awareness of burning social issues. What is the logic of filling their minds with information about global warming and climate change if they have no role in bringing about changes in the world? The student community across the world must take a leaf out of the youth climate movement's book and learn to protest over substantive issues rather than trivial ones. It is delightful that the vouth climate movement launched by the young Swede, Greta Thunberg, has been able to invigorate and mobilise e youth across the world against environmental degradation. VENU G.S., Kalluvathukkal, Kollam, Kerala

Hardly united

The column, 'Letter from a Concerned Reader' (Magazine, "Tea and Parle-G", September 22, sums up in its own humorous way how a single man's "wave" is unwittingly having a huge impact on relations among family and friends. Three years ago, after shifting to Chennai from Mumbai, I created a WhatsApp Group of school friends, now scattered across. It was a major online reunion after nearly 30 vears. It led to even invitations being extended to each other to visit home and attend family functions.

Fake versions of politics had a free run. As a group administrator, my requests to stop posting political content went unheeded. The innocence of schooldays had vanished. After a while, some friends left the group in a huff while relations with others soured. It was ironical that while we were united on a social platform, we suddenly found ourselves divided. It is disturbing that when it comes to making a choice between political affiliation and personal relationships, there are many who prefer the first. V. SUBRAMANIAN,

When the pedestal feels like a cage

Public spaces need to be made more accessible to the disabled, but not through gratuitous gestures

RAHUL BAJAJ

Recently, while I was returning from Mumbai to my hometown Nagpur after meeting my best friend from school, a security officer at the Mumbai airport expressed a desire to examine the belt I was wearing. The airport staffer assisting me tried to dissuade the officer from putting me through this inconvenience, whispering loud enough for me to be able to hear, "He is a blind passenger."

As someone born blind, I have often been confronted with offers of what I would call 'untoward assistance' – support that is apparently based on my disability but actually in no way correlated to it. From people who bend over backwards to exclusively offer me a chair whenever they see me standing even though my blindness has nothing to do with my ability to stand for long periods of time, to airport officers who exhibit the willingness to allow me to carry more luggage than the prescribed ceiling; from security officers at bars who ask me not to pay the entry fee to taxi drivers who insist that they will not charge me for the ride, many have made such gestures.

Perhaps the type of behaviour I am referring to is typified by an incident from an economics class when I was in Class XI. Our teacher had asked all students to stand on one side of a classroom for committing an infraction. Soon after making me stand along with the other erring students, she asked me to go back and sit in my assigned location. I soon realised that the reason I was singled out for this benevolence was my blindness though my infraction was, objectively speaking, no less serious than that of my peers. I stood up and requested her to let me continue standing, arguing that my blindness bore no relationship with the relaxation I was offered.

Social interactions

This pattern of behaviour, premised on placing the disabled on a pedestal, also extends to social interactions. When I was in school, classmates would often address me with the pronoun aap, a Hindi term connoting a high degree of formality usually used to refer to elders. They would refer to all my other classmates with the more informal and casual tu or tum.

My experience is not an aberration. In his New York Times bestseller Eyes Wide Open, blind lawyerturned-businessman Isaac Lidsky writes: "While my blindness has never helped me win a trial, it often helps me get a table in a crowded restaurant. I am usually treated as a long-time regular by my second visit to a business."

Why, it may be reasonably asked, should we be concerned about what are benign gestures of kindness aimed at mitigating the hardship of those perceived as having been dealt a bad hand? Personally, I think this is because these actions are often rooted in stereotypes about the capabilities of blind people.

A security officer who thinks that a blind person cannot be dangerous in any circumstance essentially equates a visual impairment with an inability to commit violence. Someone who thinks a blind person always needs to be seated operates on the unstated premise that visual impairment necessarily results in reduced stamina. Someone who refuses to let a blind person pay in an economic transac-

free when our sighted peers must pay an entry fee, we lessen our moral authority to complain about being unduly prevented from enjoying the clubbing experience because the same bar is then found to be inaccessible. If we do not question an airport staffer's decision to allow us to carry more luggage than the ceiling just because we are blind when the relaxation has nothing to do with our blindness, on what basis can we then take the same airport staffer to task when she does not provide us the sighted assistance we need to navigate the crowded airport?

an undue benefit of entering a bar for

Reasonable accommodation

There may, of course, be circumstances when one's blindness is coupled with other disabilities, making the type of support I characterise as untoward assistance a reasonable accommodation. It may also be the case that one's blindness results in a denial of opportunities to be economically self-reliant, making fee concessions and waivers an appropriate course of action. What I am against, however, is simple-minded pigeonholing of the disabled into objects perpetually in need of favourable treatment that betrays a profoundly impoverished understanding of what it means to be disabled an understanding rooted ble treatment that betrays a profoundly impoverished understanding of what it means to be disabled – an understanding rooted in nothing but stereotypes and a sense of pity.

As Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg

has explained in the context of the fight for gender justice, the pedestal on which women are made to stand is often a cage. To put it another way, what is considered a measure to protect a certain group from harm or to advance its interests often, in fact, has the unintended consequence of substantially undercutting those very interests. This is because it prevents members of that group from fully participating in all societal institutions on equal terms and thereby circumscribes the scope of their aspirations. Therefore, it is high time that those of us truly invested in the welfare of the disabled recognised that the pedestal on which disabled people are often placed is a cage, for only then can we begin to free ourselves from its shackles.

The importance of labelling hate crimes

Such crimes impact the social fabric of the country

A.S. PANNEERSELVAN

The office of the Readers' Editor (RE) is a visible institutional framework "to improve accuracy, verification, and standards in the newspaper; and to strengthen bonds between the newspaper and its millions of print platform and online readers."

This means the RE has to be an effective interlocutor between the newspaper and its readers and ensure a two-way communication. One of the tasks I have been performing is also to explain the rationale that governs the news judgment and the ethical framework that governs the editorial judgment of this newspaper on various contentious issues.

Last week, there was a front-page story headlined "Four of Muslim family injured in attack at Aligarh railway station". Dushyant Kumar, a reader from Baraut, Uttar Pradesh, who gets the Mohali edition of the newspaper, felt that the headline was both misleading and communal. Oruganti Srinivas, an advocate from Visakhapatnam, discovered a design not just in the headline but also in the tone of the report. His argument was that the report cast a doubt as if the violence was instigated by the majority community in a communally sensitive city and felt that the report promoted enmity between two religious communities. K.R.A. Narasiah, who has often written in this newspaper, saw an anti-Modi streak in the story and its headline.

Conceptual frameworks

I would like to share some of the conceptual frameworks that define the daily practice of a newsroom, for, the overall ethos of the newspaper organisation informs its choices and its editorial judgment. That is the reason we find a multitude of methods in both reporting and in news processing among different news organisations. The content of a newspaper is organised by a principle called news hierarchy, which varies from publication to publication.

Some media scholars have argued that five different types of proximities determine news hierarchy: geographical proximity, temporal proximity, affective proximity, practical proximity, and utilitarian proximity. These often contending and contesting ideas are mediated to arrive at a consensus in news meetings where the final decision is taken about any story. This involves a few critical questions: Where should a news item be placed? Is it a front-page story or can it be in inside pages? What should be its length? Whether a story requires an explainer or not? Does it warrant an editorial?

The editorial team told me that they make a distinction between common crime and hate crime, and that common crime is covered in the inside pages while hate crime is elevated to the front page given its enormity and its impact on the social fabric of the country. The U.K. police have come up with an accessible definition of hate crime: "A hate crime is when someone commits a crime against you because of your disability, gender identity, race, sexual orientation, religion, or any other perceived difference."

Realising the difference between crime in general and the toxic nature of hate crimes, the U.S. passed a special law called "The Matthew Shepard and James Byrd, Jr., Hate Crimes Prevention Act of 2009". In a country where the First Amendment has given latitude to hate speech and offensive rhetoric, for instance to the utterances of the members of the Ku Klux Klan, the courts and the legislature in the form of both the Congress and the Senate have carved out notable, carefully drafted narrow exceptions to free speech which authorises prosecution for language deemed to fall out of bounds.

Long-term damage

The rise of hate crimes may be a product of our current polarised polity. As it has been pointed out in many learned articles and pieces of legislation, hate crimes inflict long-term emotional and societal damage, create additional fault lines, fracture communities, depress individuals to the point of self-harm and cannibalise the space for reconciliation and coexistence.

The editorial team and the reporter decided to go ahead with the story on the front page because they did manage to ascertain that the attack on the family of four in Aligarh railway station was indeed a hate crime. It is the duty of a newspaper not only to unambiguously distinguish hate crimes from other forms of breaking the law but also label them accurately. I would like to draw the attention of the readers to the July 17, 2018, observation of the Supreme Court of India, which came down heavily against the recurring hate violence, which it warned should not become the new normal.

India's opportunity at the UN

The Modi govt. has a chance to regain its footing in the court of international public opinion

MICHAEL KUGELMAN

When Prime Minister Narendra Modi addresses the UN General Assembly on September 27, his country will find itself in an unfamiliar position.

For the first time in some years, India is in the cross hairs of some segments of the international community, thanks to its recent actions in Jammu and Kashmir. While governments around the world have largely remained quiet, some influential voices have lambasted New Delhi's decision to dilute Article 370 and criticised the country over the effects of its ongoing lockdown in Kashmir.

In the U.S., members of Congress, the State Department, and even Bernie Sanders, a front-line 2020 presidential candidate, have registered their concern. It has been a long time since there was so much negative noise about India in Washington, where for quite a few years there has been – and rightly remains – a strong bipartisan consensus in favour of a close partnership.

Here, the annual UN-GA meetings offer the government an opportunity to regain its footing in the court of international public opinion.

On Kashmir lockdown

To achieve that outcome, the most reasonable, and realistic, expectation is for a speech that features two core components: a clear acknowledgement of the international community's concerns about human rights in Kashmir, and a focus on India's robust efforts to tackle the global development challenges that attract considerable concern in the UN and beyond, issues such as health, sanitation, and climate change.

Yes, it will be asking for too much from Mr. Modi if one expects him to mention, much less acknowledge concerns about, a sensitive issue that New Delhi regards as internal and does not want to get further internationalised. Still, Mr. Modi, by stating that he recognises the world's worries about the lockdown and its effects, can push back against global perceptions that his government is wholly dismissive of a real and serious problem. And by striking a note of humility, he could undercut the narrative of Pakistan Prime Minister Imran Khan who, at the same forum, will in all likelihood come out with guns blazing on Kashmir.

Underscoring the bona fides

What would also resonate well is a speech that underscores India's bona fides as a rising and responsible global power, in contrast to what are perceived by some overseas observers as irresponsible actions in Kashmir. Here, Mr. Modi can pick up where the late Sushma Swaraj, former Indian External Affairs Minister who delivered India's UNGA speech last year, left off. She highlighted India's progress in meeting the UN's Sustainable Development Goals, particularly through increasing people's access to safe sanitation, and she spoke of India's efforts to mitigate the climate change threat. By homing in on India's track record in tackling challenges that affect nearly every nation, Mr. Modi can project his country as a willing and able global partner. This isn't to oversell the influence of the UNGA speeches. Outside of India, Mr. Modi's address won't exactly be must-see TV. Further, anti-Modi protests are planned during his time in New York, and media coverage of these protests could undercut the messages articulated in his speech.

Indeed, one UNGA speech won't eliminate the critical global narratives about India that have emerged since August 5. So long as the Kashmir lockdown remains in place, and likely after it's lifted as well, and so long as New Delhi carries out a divisive social agenda, those narratives will be present. Still, for a government and a Prime Minister who place a premium on branding, the UNGA offers a useful opportunity to push back against growing threats to India's image. It's an opportunity that would be a pity to squander.

DATA POINT

Home and the world

As of 2019, 17.5 million people of Indian origin are staying in other countries as immigrants. They form 6.4% of all international immigrants - the largest share among all nations. ## FIFTY YEARS AGO SEPTEMBER 23, 1969 Army takes charge of Ahmedabad

The Army to-day [September 22] took over complete control of Ahmedabad City and suburbs to tackle the riot situation. Troops took up positions at all strategic points. The local police, Armed Reserve Police and Home Guards will help the Army personnel to create conditions for return to normalcy. The Governor of Gujarat, Mr. Shriman Narayan, the Chief Minister, Mr. Hitendra Desai and other leaders went round the city and appealed to the local leaders to help the authorities bring back order. An official spokesman said tonight [September 22] that the situation in the disturbed areas was fast improving. Stray incidents of looting and arson were reported earlier in the riot torn city. Except for the patrolling vehicles the city presented a deserted appearance. The local station of All India Radio has been repeatedly appealing to the citizens for blood donations for treatment of the injured. The police opened fire twice. The incidents of firing were at Jagdish Park and at Gujarat Vidyapeeth where Mr. Morarji Desai had gone on a fast. An emergency meeting of the Gujarat Cabinet this evening [September 22] took stock of the violent situation. Unofficial sources placed the casualty figures at 350.

LONDON The industrial situation in England is showing symptoms of grave unrest. Meantime, Mr. Montagu is very anxious that the Bill [on bringing political reforms in India] should go through Parliament before the end of the year. On the other hand, I heard from a good source that the prospects of that are not very encouraging. And, as I sit there listening to the taking of evidence by the Joint Committee, I cannot help feeling that there are at least some members of the Committee who are not overanxious to bring the Bill through. Lord Selborne announced some time ago as the Chairman of the Committee that his function was to see that evidence was not repeated. But sometimes he seems to forget his function. Under these circumstances, I should not be surprised, if the report of the Committee is delayed till the beginning of December. That seems to be the Chairman's anticipation – although Mr. Montagu is, I am told, rather anxious to have it by the beginning of November. Personally I do not mind what happens, for the failure of the Bill in its present form may, in many ways, be a blessing to India.

Modi, Trump set new course on terrorism

Mr. Modi's comments came even as Mr. Trump listened in the audience. On Monday, Mr. Trump is due to meet with Pakistani Prime Minister Imran Khan, and Sunday's rally appeared to have set the tone for a fairly tough line the U.S. President is likely to take during that meet.

"On India's concerns over cross-border terrorism, I think Mr. Trump went beyond the script, and certainly the expectations of the government," said senior analyst at the ORF, Ashok Mallik.

Both leaders made separate pitches to their respective domestic constituencies as well, and while PM Modi dwelt on rural sanitation, connectivity and easing business regulations, President Trump spoke of strengthening American manufacturing, rising employment figures, as well as becoming a major world energy exporter.

While neither leader referred to the trade issues between the countries, they raised optimism that they would resolve differences during their bilateral talks on Tuesday, and Mr. Trump said he looked forward to "major defence purchases" by India in the near future. He also announced that in November this year, Indian and U.S. forces will hold evtri-services er-joint exercises.

In their speeches to the audience, where Mr. Trump spoke for about 25 minutes, and Mr. Modi for about double that time, both made several warm references to each other and their friendship.

While Mr. Modi referred to Mr. Trump's warmth and wit, Mr. Trump called PM Modi a "loyal friend of the U.S." and "full of wisdom". Hinting at a possible visit to India in November, Mr. Trump said he might like to come and watch the first match by the U.S. basketball league NBA in Mumbai.

Valley's IT hub gasps as Net shutdown continues

According to another person working in the complex, the trouble started when former J&K Chief Minister Mehbooba Mufti put out a series of tweets on August 5 afternoon criticising the government though Internet connections had been shutdown from the night of August 4.

"The authorities were puzzled when they saw Mehbooba Mufti tweeting amid the Internet shutdown while in detention. Till then the Internet connection was functional here. The authorities bizarrely assumed that we provided her the connection through some means.... it is not possible. Security officials visited the hub and snapped all communications saying they don't trust anyone anymore," he said.

The IT employee said the system used by them has enough safeguards and no social media sites could be accessed from any computer due to firewalls. "We have nothing to do with social media – why would we destroy our prospects? We are operating in this conflict zone for 20 years. Is it necessary to drag everyone in the same negative narrative?" he asked

Representatives from the IT companies have held several meetings with the police and civil authorities but to no avail.

"We were promised that Internet will be restored in a few days but it has not happened. This has severely impacted our business," he

Choose nationalistic parties, says Amit Shah

Mr. Shah urged party workers to reach out to every household explaining the decision on Article 370. "We abrogated Article 370 because until it was active, J&K wasn't an integral part of India," he said.

Targeting former Congress president Rahul Gandhi over his opposition to the manner in which the decision on Article 370 was taken, Mr. Shah said, "Congress leader Rahul Gandhi says Article 370 is a political matter. He has just arrived in politics. We have been giving our lives for the last three generations for Kashmir. It could be a political matter for the Congress even today. For us, it was a matter of uniting the nation, a dream that Prime Minister Modi has made true."

Rajnath warns Pakistan not to repeat mistakes

Mr. Singh blamed Article 370, and Article 35A, which arose out of it, for Jammu and Kashmir being in the throes of terrorism. "J&K will now be transformed within five years. In fact, more than three-fourths of its population wanted this provision to go. Our intentions were good and it is no surprise that our move was supported wholeheartedly by our alliance partners."

Cautioning against promoting crossborder terrorism, in the wake of the recent developments in Kashmir, the Defence Minister said, "Talks with Pakistan will henceforth resume only after it stops promoting terrorism. And it must also keep in mind that J&K is an integral part of India. All discussions will only take place about Pak-occupied Kashmir."

₹37,000 crore tax savings for top firms

Oil and gas, financial services and consumer-facing businesses will benefit the most from the tax cuts, while export-oriented sectors including IT and pharmaceuticals may not gain much as their effective tax rates are already low thanks to tax incentives and exemptions. The average effective tax rate for the 1,000 listed firms had crept up from 27% in 2013-14 to 33% in 2018-19, said Crisil.

"Companies in the highest bracket account for a large proportion of taxes and would also benefit more given the higher tax rates... Nearly 40% of these (1,000) companies had an effective tax rate of over 30%," it said.

The effective tax rate for domestic corporates, inclusive of surcharges, will fall from 34.94% to 25.17%.

Slump to be key Cong. theme

Party identifies Haryana clusters, which saw scaling down of businesses, job losses

SANDEEP PHUKAN NEW DELHI

The Congress is yet to officially come up with a campaign theme for the upcoming Haryana Assembly election but it will focus on mandi aur taalabandi (slowdown and shutdown) mode of the economy.

The Congress has identified specific industrial clusters where slowdown has had a direct impact in terms of scaling down of businesses and job losses.

Several sectors

Among the industrial belt and sectors identified are the plywood industry in Yamuna Nagar, cooking utensil manufacturing industry in Jagadhri, scientific equipment manufacturing clusters in Ambala, agricultural equipment factories in Karnal, textile units in Panipat, apparel export units in Gurugram Small jobs are created by micro enterprises and traders. These sections have got nothing. So, how can they create additional jobs? RANDEEP SURJEWALA and the automobile plants in

"I have been using mandi and taalabandi wherever I am campaigning as all these areas have seen shutdowns. But the party is in the process of crystallising the issues," said Randeep Surjewala, chief spokesperson of the party and Kaithal MLA. The Congress said the cut in corporate taxes, announced by the Centre on Thursday, would not help as it neither created jobs nor would increase demand. "Small jobs are created by micro enterprises and traders. These sections have got nothing. So, how can they create additional jobs," Mr. Surjewala asked. "In the rest of India, unemployment is 6%, but for us, it is as high as 29%," After being decimated in the Lok Sabha election – BJP won all the 10 seats – the Congress is fighting a battle for its survival in a State that it ruled for 10 years since

Tobacco Board official opts out of U.S. event

Appearance would have violated norms

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT NEW DELHI

The Executive Director of the Tobacco Board of India cancelled her appearance at the last minute at a U.S. conference aimed at promoting tobacco, avoiding embarrassment to the government because it would have violated not only Indian laws but also World Health Organization (WHO) rules.

The issue arose when anti-tobacco and public heath activists brought to the notice of the Health Ministry that an official of the Tobacco Board was going to take part in the conference. They said this was in contravention of the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control (FCTC) and the Cigarettes and Other Tobacco Products (Prohibition of Advertisement and Regulation of Trade and Commerce, Production, Supply and Distribution) Act, 2003.

Sunitha Kolaventy, Executive Director of the Tobacco Board under the Commerce Ministry, was to speak on Tuesday at the Global Tobacco and Nicotine Forum 2019 in Washington, DC. However, Health Secretary Preeti Sudan told The Hindu on Saturday that Ms. Kolaventy would not attend the event. As on Sunday, the event website had her listed as a speaker.

Under Article 5.3 of the WHO FCTC, of which India is a signatory, "in setting and implementing their public health policies with respect to tobacco control, Parties shall act to protect these policies from commercial and other vested interests of the tobacco industry in accordance with national law.'

tobacco industry-supported and -organised event aimed at the promotion of the tobacco industry globally and as such, Ms. Kolaventy's appearance as a speaker at the event would be in violation of the WHO FCTC.

This is not the first time the Tobacco Board has been prevented from associating itself with the Global Tobacco and Nicotine Forum. The 2010 edition was to have been held in Bangalore with the sponsorship of the Tobacco Board. In response to a public interest litigation petition by the Institute of Public Health, the Karnataka High Court ordered the Board to desist from sponsoring the event as it violated the Cigarettes and Other Tobacco Products (Prohibition of Advertisement and Regulation of Trade and Production, Commerce, Supply and Distribution)

The law says: "No person shall take part in any advertisement which directly or indirectly suggests or promotes the use or consumption of cigarettes or any other tobacco products."

The government has run into criticism for helping the tobacco and cigarette industry by banning e-cigarettes, which were emerging as a safer alternative to conven-

Vice-President Michael Ashwin Adhin for talks between India and Pakistan to resolve tension

KALLOL BHATTACHERJEE

Ahead of Prime Minister Na rendra Modi's meeting with the 15-member Caribbean block in New York, the Vice-President of Suriname has voiced support for India's actions in Kashmir.

Speaking in response to a question, Vice-President Michael Ashwin Adhin said his country had respect for India's Kashmir action since Suriname follows the UN Charter and therefore won't interfere in the internal affairs of India

Delhi, Dhaka to boost maritime ties

Plan on to retrace historic voyage of Mukti Jodha

DINAKAR PERI NEW DELHI

India will join Bangladesh to commemorate 100 years of 'Bangabandhu', the founding father Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, in 2020, and an International Fleet Review in 2021 to mark 50 years of the Liberation of Bangladesh, official sources said. Navy chief Admiral Karambir Singh is on a visit to Dhaka where these issues would be discussed along with other maritime and security issues.

"Both sides are working on a proposal for a joint boat expedition with veterans from both sides to retrace the voyage of the Mukti Jodha from Khulna to Hoshangabad during the Liberation War of Bangladesh in 1971," defence and diplomatic sources told The Hindu. The modalities are being worked out. Earlier the proposal was

The government will not revise the fiscal deficit target immediately and is not planning any spending cuts at this stage, Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman said on Sunday.

The government cut corporate tax rates on Friday, which will reduce revenue by ₹1.45 trillion in the cur-

Ahead of 'Howdy, Modi!', India struck big-ticket LNG deal

Updating an MoU signed in February, Petronet to invest $2.5 billion in Tellurian Inc., giving India access to up to 5 million tonnes of gas a year

SUHASINI HAIDAR

Petronet, an Indian liquefied natural gas (LNG) importer, has decided to invest $2.5 billion in American company Tellurian Inc., in an agreement that will give India access to up to five million tonnes of LNG a year.

The MoU, an updated version of the one signed in February, was exchanged here by officials in the presence of Prime Minister Narendra Modi in his first engagement after landing here. Under the agreement, the finalised deal is due to be completed by March 31, 2020.

Symbolic value

"Increasing natural gas use will enable India to fuel its impressive economic growth to achieve Mr. Modi's goal of a $5-trillion economy while contributing to a cleaner environment," said Tellurian Inc. president and CEO Meg Gentle in a statement after signing the new MoU.

Officials said that while the MoU still needed to be negotiated, the announcement had symbolic value at the start of the Prime Minister's visit to the U.S., showing India's intent to become a major energy buyer for American companies.

Ahead of Sunday's rally with U.S. President Donald Trump, the Prime Minister met heads of 17 energy companies to speak about the potential of the Indian market and listened to their views on the challenges of supplying oil and also investing in

Among the issues raised by the businessmen, who included the top leadership of berger, Cheniere, Total and other big energy companies, were problems with arbitration and the dispute resolution mechanism in India.

Some asked Mr. Modi to consider a unified Ministry for all energy issues instead of separate Ministries for Petroleum and Natural Gas, coal and renewable energy to streamline processes.

Upbeat on economy

"The CEOs lauded the government's efforts towards ease of doing business, steps taken towards deregulation in the [energy] sector ... and were upbeat on the Indian economy," External Affairs Ministry spokesperson Raveesh Kumar said.

Government officials said the massive investment from India in Tellurian's $29 billion Driftwood project would "create 50,000 direct and indirect jobs" in the U.S., and would support manufacturing in 18 U.S. States.

However, senior officials who were present at the meeting refused to comment on how soon India would be able to consume the amount of LNG the MoU insulated, in to justify order investment

In 2011, GAIL (India) Ltd., a stakeholder in Petronet, had already entered into a 20-year contract to buy 5.8 million tonnes a year of U.S. LNG, split between Dominion Energy and Cheniere Energy, but India has had to resell much of its American intake due to lower demand.

The announcement of the Tellurian MoU, which was reported by The Hindu on Friday, was anticipated as a "big-ticket" investment announcement during the Prime Minister's U.S. visit.

Meanwhile, Commerce Ministry officials are still negotiating with the U.S. Trade Representative's office in Washington in the hope of announcing a limited trade deal next week, which is expected to be announced after the bilateral meeting between Mr. Modi and Mr. Trump on Tuesday. Officials are discussing lifting of tariffs, and a possible restoration of export subsidies for India under the Generalised System of Preferences, which the Trump administration withdrew in June.

After Houston, it's a busy New York week

Modi will attend 40 meetings, culminating in the UN General Assembly address

SRIRAM LAKSHMAN

After a weekend in Houston, Texas, focused mainly on the diaspora, Prime Minister Narendra Modi's week begins in New York City with the 74th session of the United Nations General Assembly (UNGA).

The highlight of Mr. Modi's packed schedule will be the India-U.S. bilateral interaction, carrying forward the weekend engagement of President Donald Trump's participation at the "Howdy, Modi!" diaspora rally.

Plurilateral meetings

India is pushing for greater plurilateral engagement this year - forums with large groups of countries, India's UN envoy Syed Akbaruddin told reporters in New York. The two scheduled plurilaterals are the India-Pacific Island Leaders' Meeting and India-CARICOM meeting (includes island nations such as

Mr Jaishankar will lead the Indian side in meetings of the Quadrilateral Dialogue, BRICS and SAARC on

Mr. Modi will start his

Mr. Modi will announce that India has surpassed the solar power targets from the Paris Climate Agreement.

Consistent with a green theme, he will inaugurate, on Tuesday, the Gandhi Solar Park, an installation of solar panels and a 'green roof' at the UN headquarters with a projected annual output of 86,244 kWh/year as per India's UN Mission.

Meet on health

Mr. Modi will also participate in a high level meeting on Universal health coverage and in a leaders' dialogue on strategic responses to extremist and terrorist narratives. `On Tuesday Mr. Modi will hold a bilateral with President Trump, after the latter has delivered his UNGA address. The tone for this meeting was set over the weekend with the joint participation of both leaders in the Houston rally and the exchanging of an (updated) MoU between Indian LNG company Petronet and U.S. energy company Tellurain Inc. Petronet intends to invest $2.5 billion in Tellurian Inc.'s in return for rights to up to 5 million tonnes of LNG per year over 40 years.

Mr. Modi's week will end with his UNGA address on Friday morning.

'Deafening silence on Kashmir'

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

U.S. Senator and Democratic presidential contender Bernie Sanders said on Sunday in a newspaper article that the Modi-Trump rally is happening at a time when Kashmir remains under lockdown. "We will hear much about the friendshir between the American and Indian peoples," the 77vear-old leader said in an opinion piece in Houston Chronicle.

"However, there will be a deafening silence" on the "human rights crisis" in Kashmir, he added.

The PM met teams of the Dawoodi Bohra community.

Rouhani warns West to stay out of Gulf

Iranian President promises to unveil a regional peace plan at this week's high-level meetings at the UN

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Iran's President called on Sunday on Western powers to leave the security of the Persian Gulf to regional nations led by Tehran, criticising a new U.S.-led coalition patrolling the region's waterways as nationwide parades showcased the Islamic Republic's military arsenal.

President Hassan Rouhani separately promised to unveil a regional peace plan at this week's upcoming highlevel meetings at the United Nations, which comes amid heightened Mideast tensions following a series of attacks, including a missile-anddrone assault on Saudi Arabia's oil industry.

The U.S. alleges Iran carried out the September 14 attack on Saudi Arabia's oil facilities, which caused oil prices to spike by the biggest percentage since the 1991

Mr. Rouhani said Iran was willing to "extend the hand of friendship and brotherhood" to Persian Gulf nations and was "even ready to forgive their past mistakes."

"Those who want to link the region's incidents to the Islamic Republic of Iran are lving like their past lies that have been revealed," the President said. "If they are truthful and seek security in the region, they must not send weapons, fighter jets, bombs and dangerous arms to the region." He added that the U.S. and Western nations should "distance" themselves from the region.

"Your presence has always been a calamity for this region and the farther you go from our region, the more security would come for our region," he said.

Iran to release British-flagged tanker

REUTERS

Stena Impero, the Britishflagged tanker detained by Iran on July 19, may be released within hours, the head of the Swedish firm that owns the vessel said on Sunday.

The Stena Impero was detained by Iran's Revolutionary Guards in the Strait of Hormuz waterway for alleged marine violations, two weeks after Britain seized an Iranian tanker off Gibraltar. That vessel was released in August.

Swedish public broadcaster SVT quoted Stena Bulk chief executive Erik Hanell as saying: "We have received information this morning that it seems like they will release Stena Impero within a few hours. So we understand that the political decision to release the ship has been taken."

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE HONG KONG

Pro-democracy protesters clashed with riot police outside a mall on Sunday, with some activists vandalising a nearby subway station and defacing a Chinese flag, but plans to disrupt the airport did not materialise.

Police fired brief volleys of tear gas and rubber bullets in the northern town of Sha Tin late Sunday afternoon, capping a day which saw thousands rally peacefully inside a mall before the mood soured.

Authorities reduced rail and bus links to the city's airport while police stepped up security checks in a successful bid to stop a crowd from massing at the bustling transport hub.

The airport – the world's eighth busiest - has become a frequent target for demonstrators pushing for greater democratic rights and police accountability.

'Stress test'

Online forums used by the largely leaderless movement had called for a "stress test" of the airport on Sunday, code for disrupting travel links or occupying

Instead thousands gathered inside a mall in the northern town of Sha Tin to sing protest songs and make origami cranes, the latest rally in what has now been 16 consecutive weekends of protests and clashes.

Many shops inside the complex shuttered but the unsanctioned rally remained civil for much of the afternoon.

"Even if we are very tired, we can't give up on our rights," a teacher at the rally, who have her surname as Ching, told AFP.

"If it (the movement) stretches to 100 days, 200 days or even 1,000 days and we still don't get what we want, we will continue to come out."

Tensions rose later in the afternoon.

Masked activists paraded a Chinese flag through the mall that had been torn down from a nearby government building. It was later thrown into a nearby river.

Groups of masked protesters then vandalised ticket machines in Sha Tin's subway before riot police rushed in to close the station down.

Travel firm Thomas Cook battles to keep afloat

The British government has plans in place to bring home stranded holidaymakers if Thomas Cook goes out of business, an event that would likely spark chaotic scenes at resorts and airports around the world.

The bosses of the world's oldest travel company were still meeting lenders and creditors in London on Sunday to try to thrash out a last-ditch deal to keep the company afloat.

The company's board will then meet in the early evening to decide the company's fate, with it potentially going into administration in the early hours of Monday.

Running hotels, resorts, airlines and cruises. Thomas Cook has 600,000 customers on holiday, meaning governments and insurance companies could be forced to step in and bring them home if the company goes out of business. The government and the aviation regulator have drawn up a plan to step in and use other airlines to bring Britons home if needed.

It needs to find another £200 million to see it through the winter months when it needs to pay hotels for their summer services.

Sirisena forms panel to probe Easter attacks

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE COLOMBO

Sri Lanka's President Maithripala Sirisena on Sunday ordered a fresh inquiry into the Easter suicide bombings that hit Sri Lanka killing at least 258 people.

Mr. Sirisena said the commission has wide judicial powers to gather evidence on those responsible for the attack, and to probe security and intelligence lapses. The five-member panel is to report back with recommendations within three months.

The inquiry launched amid fears voiced by the Catholic Church that a parliamentary probe and police investigation into the attacks are not independent.

Trump says Biden was subject of his call to Ukraine President

He pressed Zelensky for damaging information on his rival's son

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE

U.S. President Donald Trump on Sunday confirmed he did discuss former Vice-President Joe Biden and corruption allegations in a phone call with Ukraine's leader, as Mr. Trump's opponents called for his impeachment.

A whistleblower's complaint sparked off accusations that Mr. Trump had sought to persuade President Volodymyr Zelensky to provide damaging information on Mr. Biden, Mr. Trump's possible 2020 election challenger.

Mr. Trump confirmed that the conversation, held in July, had addressed alleged corruption involving Mr. Biden and his son Hunter, and he floated the possibility that a transcript could be released.

"We had a very great conversation, very straight, very honest conversation. I hope they can put it out," Mr. Trump said, repeating that he had done nothing wrong. The Wall Street Journal reported that Mr. Trump pressed Mr. Zelensky about eight times on the call to investigate possible corruption involving Mr. Hunter, who worked with a Ukrainian natural gas company while his father was

Vice-President.

Mr. Biden said that Mr. Trump's actions appeared "to be an overwhelming abuse of power."

A bus crash in northern Pakistan killed 26 people on Sunday after its brakes failed on a winding mountain road, police said.

Another 20 passengers were injured when the bus smashed head-on into a dirt embankment.

Such road accidents are common in Pakistan, where motorists largely disregard traffic rules and safety standards on wornout roads. Last month, a speeding bus fell off a road into a river in the northwest, killing 24 passengers. Rescue efforts were hampered by the remote terrain near the town of Chilas on the route between the cities of Rawalpindi and Skardu.

FAITH

Bhakti for emancipation

Devotion is an overwhelming experience felt in one's inner being when the human soul longs to reach the Lotus feet of the Lord. The restless human mind is given to fear and all kinds of phobias when it is involved in worldly affairs. All this only makes one further rooted in the cycle of birth. Akrura exemplifies the truth that true devotion and jnana are complementary and not antithetical, pointed out Sri B. Damodhara Dikshitar in a discourse.

Kamsa entrusts Akrura with the mission of bringing Krishna and Balarama to Mathura. In all humility, Akrura understands that though he is worldly minded and engaged in the service of Kamsa, he is now most lucky and fortunate to be able to see Krishna in person. He sets forth to Gokula, with his mind fully engrossed in Krishna. Akrura ruminates on the greatness of the Lord and His incarnations that provide a chance for ordinary people to know about the Highest Truth. His mind revolves around his hopes and expectations about the Lord. He also wishes for the removal of all obstacles. So much takes place in his mind about the forthcoming meeting with Krishna. As he enters Gokula, he feels the vibrations of the place sanctified by the Lord's presence. He sees the footprints of the Lord on the ground and he rolls on the sands to savour the divine contact with His Lotus feet. He is caught in the river of spiritual joy. Adi Sankara, the famous exponent of Advaita Siddhanta, extols bhakti as the state of mind that finds solace in God even as the rivers find their refuge in the ocean. He asserts that bhakti is the best path for emancipation of the human soul. The mind gets attracted to the Lord even as iron filings gets drawn to the magnet or when the creeper reaches out to the tree for support.

ASK US

VIDYA BALA

Q. My wife is a senior citizen (under 80 years) and I am a super senior citizen (80 plus). We have limited income and that too, only from interest. So, we would like to plan for getting the maximum amount by investing in very safe avenues. The limit of investment in Senior Citizens Saving Scheme is ₹15 lakh. Can you please let me know whether both of us can individually invest in this, having the other as nominee? Is this legally permissible? Is there any other safe scheme which would give a return of more than 8%?

SUBRAMANIAN V

A. Yes, you can individually invest ₹15 lakh each in Post Office Senior Citizens' Scheme. So, you can effectively invest up to ₹30 lakh. Since the entire amount invested is attributed to the first account holder, you can also hold it jointly with each of you being the first holder in two different accounts and the other a joint holder.

One other good scheme for senior citizens is LIC's Pradhan Mantri Vaya Vandana Yojana for citizens aged 60 years, introduced by the Government of India. It has an 8% p.a interest payable monthly (effectively 8.3% p.a). It is also available as quarterly, half yearly and annual payouts. The policy term is 10 years and the maximum amount that can be invested is ₹15 lakh. The purchase price will be refunded to the nominee/legal heir on the passing away of the policy holder. On survival of the pensioner over the policy term too, the purchase price shall be paid back with the final pension instalment.

Q. I am shortly due for a VRS in view of some health issues. I hope to invest most of the funds into totally secure and guaranteed returns but I am aware that unless I invest a little bit in mutual funds. NCDs or other market-linked schemes, my family and I may not be able to cope with the increasing cost of inflation in the future. Kindly advise. In one of your recent replies you talked about SEBI advisers. How do I choose a suitable

A. You are right in recognising that you will need market-linked products like mutual funds to ensure that your corpus lasts longer. It is a good idea to seek a registered investment adviser's help to aid in drawing up a plan as follows: your monthly cash flow plan, your requirement for medical expenses and any amount for emergencies and any financial goals for your family.

You must then identify how much you need to invest in low-risk fixed income products, to meet your monthly expenses for the next 3-5 years. The remaining corpus is what should be used to grow, until such time you need to tap it for your monthly requirements. You can visit https://www.sebi.gov.in/ sebiweb/other/

OtherAction.do?doRecognisedFpi =yes&intmId=13 to find a RIA near your place, in the city you live in. Look for a person who has understanding across personal finance products and not just mutual funds and insurance. Understand if the fee the adviser charges includes not just a planning fee but to also regularly monitor your investments.

O. I am 24 and I earn ₹35.000 per month. My expenditure is ₹5.000 per month. How can I invest the remaining ₹30,000 to get maximum returns in 5 to 6 years? BHAWNA KHATRI

A.You are starting with a good sum. Given your age, you should invest in market-linked investments such as mutual funds and stocks. To start with, consider consistently performing multi-cap equity funds with some low-risk debt fund, using the systematic investment plan (SIP). Do not stop SIPs if you see the market going down.

How side-pocketing affects you

If debt mutual funds create side-pockets and offer investors an exit window without load, should you sell?

AARATI KRISHNAN

If you're an investor in debt mutual funds, you're probably puzzling over reports on 'sidepocketing' of bonds that figure in fund portfolios. Last week, UTI Credit Risk Fund and Reliance Ultra Short Duration Fund announced their intent to side-pocket bonds issued by Altico Capital after it as rated default grade by an agency. Previously, Sundaram Mutual Fund announced, and then backtracked on, its decision to side-pocket bonds from the troubled DHFL. If you're confused by what all this means to you, here are a few answers:

When debt funds face a downgrade or default on a bond they own, they write down its value in the NAV. Why is side-pocketing needed?

When debt funds write down the value of a bond, they usually aren't sure if the bond is a complete dud or will realise some value later. But in the interests of conservatism, SEBI rules require funds to write down the value of such bonds by 25, 50, 75 or even 100% in their portfolios, based on their credit ratings. When a fund takes such write-downs, the NAV takes an immediate blow. But if the issuer of the bond later pays up his dues, the fund will then have to increase its NAV to account for the repayment. In such cases, investors in the scheme who exit early taking NAV losses would fail to benefit from the recovery.

On the other hand, new investors who entered the scheme after the write-down would stand to pocket unfair gains on a bond they never owned. Segregating down-in a fund's portfolio into a 'side-pocket' avoids such unfair treatment. When scheme side-pockets a doubtful

graded bonds

bond, any recovery from the bond is distributed to all investors who were invested in the scheme when the downgrade happened. Investors who got into a scheme after the downgrade, get to buy only into the main portfolio excluding the doubtful bond.

When and what kind of bonds are debt funds supposed to segregate?

SEBI rules allow debt funds to side-pocket only those bonds that are downgraded below investment grade by rating agencies. When a bond rated BBB or above is pegged down, it turns from an investment grade bond to a non-investment grade one. Fund houses are required to pockets while others don't? SEBI has not made sidepocketing compulsory for all bonds that turn non-investment grade. This decision is left to the discretion of the AMC and its trustees. So, when a bond slips into non-investment grade, some AMCs may write down its value and hang on, while others may side-pocket it.

What happens when a side-pocket is created?

The scheme separates its portfolio into the good portion, consisting of investment grade bonds, and the bad portion comprising the downgraded bond. The NAV of the scheme will be carved out to the extent of the value (after write down) of the bad bond. All existing investors in the scheme will receive one new unit in the sidepocketed portfolio in addition to existing units in the scheme.

No transactions are allowed in these new units. So, if you redeem the fund after side-pocketing, you will only receive the NAV of the main portfolio. But if the scheme eventually recovers money from the bond, they will get automatically redeemed and you will receive a payout. The trustees of the AMC are supposed to monitor the recovery of proceeds in the side-pocketed bonds.

AMCs have put out newspaper ads about side-pocketing, offering a one-month exit window. Does this mean the scheme will take a hit from a bad bond? Do I need to exit it?

No, you shouldn't. The ad is only an enabling provision that tells you that the scheme may, in future, use side-pocketing for some of its debt schemes if they take a hit on their > bonds. When make MFs changes to their fundamental attributes, SEBI rules require them to give their investors a onemonth exit window (without load). Given that SEBI's sidepocketing rules are recent and most AMCs are introducing this feature into their debt funds for the first time, they have been advertising and offering investors a one-month exit window. Once all fund houses incorporate these enabling provisions into their scheme attributes, they can go ahead with sidepocketing in future without seeking the okay of their

If I don't check MF websites or newspaper ads, how will I know if a debt scheme creating side-pockets?

On the day a scheme decides to side-pocket a bond, it is required to issue a press release and send an SMS as well as email to all its investors. It must also inform investors as soon as it secures trustee approval for this. On the day the announcement is made, all new purchases or sales of units in the scheme are frozen

TAX-FREE BONDS: HUDCO

Bonding with safety

HUDCO's instruments come with high rating; returns are higher than bank FDs'

DHURAIVEL GUNASEKARAN

Over the past 12-15 months, a spate of corporate bond downgrades and defaults has made fixed-income investors jittery. Bonds issued by IL&FS, DHFL, Essel Group and Reliance ADA Group were all downgraded sharply. Such downgrades led to a sharp erosion in the value of the investment products that held these distressed assets in their portfolio. Mutual funds, insurance schemes, NPS and EPFO were among those that took a hit.

Capital safety has now become a prime concern for retail investors.

Investors looking for debt instruments that provide capital safety and decent returns can consider tax-free bonds available in the secondary market. Since these entities are backed by the government, investments in their tax-free bonds enjoy capital safety.

Further, the bonds issued by most of these companies are rated with the highest grade of AAA.

Tax-free bonds

Conservative investors, including retirees, looking for capital safety can consider buying the tax-free bonds issued by the Housing and Urban Development Corporation (HUDCO) that are available in the secondary market.

HUDCO issued 32 series of tax-free bonds totally, with varying maturities of 10, 15 and 20 years in FY12, FY13, FY14 and FY16.

Many series are actively traded on the BSE and the NSE with relatively higher yield-to-maturity (YTM) and liquidity.

According to data compiled by HDFC Securities' retail research, five series of HUDCO tax-free bonds, with 5.4-5.9%, are actively traded on both the exchanges. For instance, the HUDCO N3 series (ISIN INEO31A07832), with a coupon rate of 8.1% and residual maturity of 2.5 years, trades with a YTM of 5.6% on the NSE.

The daily average traded volume in the series over the past one month has been 1.120 units.

Since the interest paid by tax-free bonds are exempt from income tax, the current vield of 5.8% translates to 8% of pre-tax yield for investors in the 30% bracket. This rate is relatively higher than the rates offered by bank fixed deposits currently.

About the company

HUDCO is a wholly government-owned entity, providing loans for housing and urban infrastructure projects in India.

It has been conferred the status of Miniratna (catego-YTM (yield-to-maturity) of ry-I public sector enterprise) by the Centre. The company focusses on funding the housing needs of economically weaker sections (EWS) and low-income group category, along with funding non-commercial urban intrastructure projects.

Since its inception, HUD-CO has funded 19.34 million dwelling units, about 86% of which belong to the economically weaker sections.

The Centre supports HUD-CO by way of allowing access to low-cost funds, extending guarantees, easing various norms and guiding its broad policies and contours.

HUDCO's gross non-performing loans stood at 4.5% in FY19. The company's net NPA stood at 0.5% in FY19. In July 2019, India Ratings and Research affirmed HUDCO's long-term issuer rating at 'IND AAA' with a stable outlook. AAA rated bonds offer high degree creditworthiness

BLACKBOARD: EXPENSE RATIO

Taking care of expenditure

ASHISH RUKHAIYAR

What is expense ratio?

Expense ratio, as the name suggests, is that part of a mutual fund scheme that takes care of expenses related to managing the fund. It is used to meet the administrative, management and other operating expenses of the scheme. Fund houses have to pay salaries to fund managers, commissions to distributors and other marketing costs. As per Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) regulations, all the expenses incurred while managing a particular scheme have to be borne out of the scheme only.

How much is the expense ratio?

■ As part of its measures to ensure that fund nouses do not charge exorbitant amount or percentage as expense ratio, the capital markets regulator has capped expense ratio

Last year, the board of the regulator capped the maximum total expense ratio or TER at 2.25% for open-ended equity schemes, some of which were earlier charging

Though the cut looked marginal in terms of overall cap, the benefits are believed to be significant as the regulator has also laid down various slabs based on the assets of the scheme with the TER going down as the assets rise.

For instance, if the assets under management (AUM) of a particular scheme is in excess of ₹50,000 crore then the TER has been capped at 1.05%. Earlier, any scheme with an AUM of more than ₹300 crore could charge 1.75%. So, for large schemes, the expense ratio was brought down by almost 70 basis points. According to SEBI's own estimates, the reduction in TER would lead to investors saving around ₹1,300-1,500 crore in commissions.

Is the expense ratio standardised?

No. As a fund house has to put in more efforts and money to increase the overall penetration level of mutual funds to the far corners of the country, the regulator has allowed a higher TER for garnering flows from beyond the top cities of the While lowering the cap for maximum TER, the SEBI allowed for an extra 30 basis points for retail flows from beyond the top 30 cities.

More importantly, it has been mandated that the additional expense will not be allowed for flows from corporates and institutions and will be limited only to retail

Incidentally, all mutual fund houses, industry body Association of Mutual Funds in India (AMFI), along with SEBI have been putting in a lot of effort to channelise more household savings from far-flung towns into the stock markets through the mutual funds' route.

SHONALI MUTHALALY

Kalia the crow hits the Big Four-Oh next year. He's become more complex over the years, expanding his social circles as he moved from the little forest he was born in, to colourful Big Baan.

He is not the only character from the well loved Tinkle universe who is suddenly all grown up. Earlier this year Tantri the Mantri, the prime minister who was as incompetent as he was ambitious, has finally become king, after just four decades of devious plotting.

Suppandi, who made his debut in 1983 as a village simpleton inspired by a character called Chappandi, from a Tamil folk tale, is now much slicker. He has lost his shoulder towel and gained both a girlfriend as well as a Twitter account boasting more than 11,000 followers. As for Shikari Shambu? He's now a politically correct, if ly, conservationist. This month Amar Chitra Katha (ACK) celebrates the birthday of Anant Pai, fondly known as Uncle Pai, who started ACK in 1967 to encourage Indian children to learn about India's epics, literature, folk lore and more. In 1980, he launched Tinkle, a magazine for children, with 35,000 copies that sold out. Next year, Tinkle, which now has a circulation of 3 lakh per issue, turns 40.

Over the past four decades, audiences have still rather coward-

changed. "The fact is, we can't have the same characters we did in the 1980s," says Rajani Thindiath, Editor-in-Chief of Tinkle. "The kid of the 1980s was watching Doordarshan," she says. "Each child is a product of their time. And today's chidren are much more aware of the world, but also more demand-

Given that this is also the age of outrage, a lot of the tropes that worked for the comics in the 1970s and '80s would be unacceptable now. Cautiously agreeing that writers need to tread more carefully, Rajani says "Because we are writing for children, it makes it easier. We will not show blood and gore, violence or murder. Sex is anyway out... I know that kids can see a lot of this on TV anyway, but I will not show it to them in the magazine." She adds, "We do push boundaries though. We push for gender equality. We show fathers cooking. We have women superheroes, as well as female villains."

There is also an effort to push back against stereotypes. Shikari Shambu's wife, Shanti, for example, is more than just a crochety spouse, now, with a strong, brave personality.

Shambu also has a less controversial job these days. "He is a conservationist," says Reena I Puri, Executive Editor, Amar Chitra Katha. "I also felt that putting animals in the zoo was wrong, so now he releases them into a reserve." She adds, "If he must use a gun, he's only given a tranquiliser gun... We got a PETA award after that!"

Reena worked with Pai from 1991, when she joined as Associate Editor of Tinkle. She helped develop a slew of new characters, including spin-offs from the old favourites: Little Shambu, Junior Tantri, and Little Suppandi. (So far, Tinkle has created about 140 characters for readers.)

"I was there till 2005, after which I moved to ACK," says Reena, adding that Pai always insisted that 70% of the stories came from their readers. "The children would write to us with ideas, sometimes on little scraps of paper," she says. "Once, during summer holidays, we got 10,000 in a month. We were inundated, but we still read and responded to each one."

Rajani says a lot of their ideas still come from children. "They wanted superheroes, but I did not want another Superman. So we introduced a wonky superhero, with SuperWeirdos. Aisha wants to be a superhero, but her only power is to giggle..." When children asked for horror, Tinkle created Dental Diaries, starring a cowardly vampire who has lost his fangs. "We realise that every child struggles with being different, so we want to make the 'odd' special."

Despite Tinkle's new, nuanced characters, Suppandi still reigns supreme. Reena is thoughtful when asked why. "Mr Pai used to say most of these characters are not very bright. They make mistakes. When they make mistakes, the child reading allows himself to make mistakes. They realise there are no perfect superheroes out there. They need to rely on the one within, get up and walk on."

Savio Mascarenhas will not remove Shikari Shambu's hat, no matter how many times you ask. Currently Group Director at Amar Chitra Katha, Savio has been with Tinkle comics since 1994, and has been drawing the popular Shikari Shambu character for 20 years.

for 20 years. "Shambu was created in 1983, and Vasant Halbe, the artist who first drew him, created this very quirky, funny character," says Savio, adding that one of Vasant's ideas, was to draw Shambu's helmet covering his eyes. "Children keep writing to me to ask if he ever takes off his helmet. They want to know how he can see. So I say he has strong instincts. Or he's afraid of the animals," Savio chuckles. However, given how Shambu has started traipsing around the world on his adventures, it does become challenging. "It's tough when he goes on vacation," sighs Savvio. When Shambu went into the desert, Savio put him in a keffieh. "When he was underwater, I put on a diving helmet," he says. "Once the writers were making fun of me, and said they will force his hat to fly off in the next story. I said go ahead. When the scene came, I drew his hat falling off. ## DOWN MEMORY LANE

Tulsi tales

Gossip and true stories all have their place where storytelling in concerned

R.V. SMITH

Before the ubiquitous TV invaded the homes of the rich and poor alike, people passed the long evenings before dinner by telling tales while sitting in the courtyard, or on the balcony or terrace. There was Rafael Baba who was never tired of relating the incident of when a porcupine ravaged the vegetable field of St. Stephen's College where he served as a gardener. The predator was finally trapped and taken away by the sweepers who were fond of Sehi Gosht (as porcupine meat is called).

Ramzani, the ex-cook of the Baptist Mission School in Ludlow Castle Road (now Raj Niwas Marg), liked talking about the time when he prepared Jal Farezi (a spicy mutton dish) for the principal, who was tired of eating the "bland" English dinner of Roast Meat, Fried Potatoes and Bread Pudding. After the 'Sahib' tasted his preparation, he began to sweat because of the abundance of chillies, but nevertheless acquired a liking for it and always had Jal Farezi on his dining table.

At Thakur Nahar Singh's house on Probyn Road (now Deshbandhu Gupta Road) the stories were about the First War of Independence in 1857, when his grandfather defied the British during the attack on Flagstaff Tower on the Ridge. As for the family of Elias Sahib, the incident at the house of a lady doctor (Dr Ulrick) was the subject of much mirth. Once there was a riot in Pipal Mandi area near the Agra Fort and a detachment of 'Gora Tommies' (British mercenaries, as they were deprecatingly called) was sent to quell it. Pleased with their efforts to save her dispensary, Dr Ulrick invited them for lunch and served Besani rotis (made of gram flour) and pumpkin sabzi. She left them to their meal and when she returned she was dumbfounded to find the rotis all lined up against the dining room wall while the sabzi had been eaten. The soldiers had taken the rotis for a kind of Indian dinning plates and so did not eat them.

Mrs Rawat of Wazirpura used to talk of the time when her husband was away on World War II duty and she was left alone with her three children. To keep them amused she would tell a bedtime story every day, invoking the tulsi plant in her courtyard as a silent witness to yarns of rajas and princesses of Rajput states.

It was C.A. Kincaid, an ICS officer, who wrote his Tales of the Tulsi Plant. Later, after nearly a hundred years, Prof Saros Cowasjee has come out with his version of 'new tales of the tulsi plant': The Oxford Anthology of Raj Stories. The taletellers are mostly British Civil Servants: Philip Mason and Leonard Woolf (who married the writer Virginia), for instance. There are others like Rudyard Kipling, John Lang, Flora Annie Steel, Bithia Mary Croker, Alice Perrin, Maud Diver, Christine Weston, Edmund Candler, Otto Rothfield Candler, Otto Rothfield.

Lang was an Australian poet who made India his home before the 'Mutiny' and lies buried in Mussoorie. His tomb was discovered by Ruskin Bond in 1960. Lang was the one who went all the way to England to plead the case of the Rani of Jhansi before she revolted against the East India Company. A good lawyer, he however lost the case and felt greatly disheartened.

Saros carried his love for Raj tales from Agra to Canada, where he taught English as Professor Emertius at the University of Regina. Born in Bombay, Kipling entered the very soul of India and churned out tale after tale with great flourish and conviction. In spite of his love for imperialism he did like India in his own way for he owed his popularity to it.

The generation that lived during the Raj is fading out, along with faithful cooks, barbers, dhobis, bearers and khansamas. But the bitter-sweet memory of those times refuses to fade away thanks to Raj fiction and the aura it imparts to the land where the tulsi grows.

D.N. Raghavendra Rao owns a treasure trove of cricket memorabilia: letters, photos and 1,300 articles autographed by legends like Don Bradman, Sunil Gavaskar and more

VIJAY LOKAPALLY

It is an enviable world for a cricket-crazy fan. A collection of 1,300 articles, all bearing signatures of the subjects. Twenty-five albums of 50 pages each, storing autographed photos of some of the greatest names the game has known. Letters from the likes of Don Bradman and Sunil Gavaskar, all arranged in chronological order. For D.N. Raghavendra Rao, a Bengaluru-based collector of cricket memorabilia, this has been a 69-year-old journey of love.

Rao was 11 when he wrote his first letter to a cricketer – CR Rangachari. His father, DR Narasinga Rao, a District Judge, told him to be "polite" when writing to the cricketers. His request for an autograph would be accompanied with a self-addressed stamped envelope. "I have never been disappointed," says Rao, even though sometimes the responses came late. Recently, the West Indian great Brian Lara wrote back to him. "After six months," Rao chuckles. His first West Indian "prey", however, was the great Sir Frank Worrell.

What a "thrill" it was for the now 80year-old when Bradman responded to his request promptly. His letter arrived in September 1982 and Rao considers it a "rare treasure." Bradman's reply triggered his love for seeking autographs from cricketers all over the world. Gradually, he added Len Hutton, Denis Compton, Keith Miller, Neil Harvey, Richie Benaud to his list of "conquests." Indian greats – Lala Amarnath, CK Nayudu, Vijay Hazare, Vijay Merchant, Vijay Manrekar, GR Viswanath – also embellish his collections.

Of all these, Rao remembers how difficult a feat reaching out to Harold Larwood was. The address he put was Harold Larwood, former England cricketer, residing in Radwick, suburb of Sydney.... And yet somehow, "I got a reply from him," he says. Cricketers have been an integral part of his life. "I have passion for the game and respect for those who play it. I love them because they take the time and trouble to sign the articles and photos and post

Having started this wonderful association with cricket in 1950, Rao has some fascinating tales to share. "I got the group picture of Bradman's 1948 Invincibles from All Sport (now Getty Images) with just one request. I got the address from an autographed photo that Merv Hughes sent me as a bonus. It was so kind of them (Hughes and Getty)." And then he collected the autographs of some Invincible team members: Bill Brown, Arthur Morris, Neil Harvey, Sam Loxton and Keith Miller, by writing to them individually.

He also values the replies from Kapil Dev, Sachin Tendulkar, Rahul Dravid and Anil Kumble. Sadly, the current crop of cricketers is not high on his list. "I do seek their autographs but through friends. Where do they have time to respond to letter?"

His prize possession is a reply from Australian leg-spinner Bill O'Reilly, who wrote back, "Your sugar-coated pen should be put to use in diplomatic affairs of state." He has been assisted in preserving these priceless assets by wife Vidyullata, son Amar and daughter Roopa. Needless to say, he is extremely "possessive" of his treasures and keeps them away from prying eyes. "In an almirah," he signs off, laughing.

Anuranjita Kumar, author of Colour Matters?, talks about the unconscious biases we face in our everyday lives

RANJANI RAJENDRA

She was on a flight from Dubai to Mumbai and had a headache. She needed a glass of water and requested the steward to bring her one. He ignored her. A short while later, she requested him to bring her some water again. He ignored her again. Undeterred she once again called the steward, a white man, and requested that she be given some water. He ignored her once again. A short while later, a woman seated next to her requested a blanket. He brought it to her in the blink of an eye and a wide smile. The other woman was white.

Does the incident spark a sense of outrage? It did in Anuranjita Kumar, who was at the receiving end of this incident. The senior HR professional had been travelling on work. Not one to take it lying down, she escalated the matter to the cabin manager.

"I was on a full fare ticket; a glass of water is not too much to ask. We've all faced biases of some sort... at the workplace, while travelling overseas, while shopping. What would worry me was why we didn't do anything about it. We tend to let things slide to avoid confrontation," she says during an interview while launching her book Colour Matters?: The Truth That No One Wants to

"By escalating the issue, I made sure the steward wouldn't do it again." Her book deals with the various biases people face on an everyday basis. It explores cross cultural dynamics, highlights the difficulties of being a minority in different geographies, and offers perspectives of different ethnicities.

Inspired by the world

Filled with stories from around the globe, spanning ethnicities and professional backgrounds, the book offers personal encounters. "It deals with stories that I came across during my research for the book - white and black dilemma, brown and black, brown and white, Chinese, Japanese and all kinds of biases people face across the world by virtue of being a minority," says the author, who is also the MD and head, HR at Royal Bank of Scotland.

"The stories essentially point toward the fact that people who have a privilege don't see that privilege... The book touches upon all kinds of codes: how black parents who tried to adopt a white child were treated; a white person's experience in India; an Indian's experience in China and so much more," she says. Colour Matters?, she says, is an attempt to bring these issues to the fore and talk about it constructively.

"It is basically a minority's perspective on colour and ethnicity whilst they're dealing with a situation where the majority may be brown, white or black," says Anuranjita, adding that there was quite a bit of push back when she first wanted to write this book.

"I had friends advising me against it. Some of the leading publishers in the country asked me if bias on the basis of colour was actually an issue in today's time. Luckily, my organisation was supportive and asked me to go ahead with the book."

While the topic had been on Anuraniita's mind for a while, she says she started working on it last September. She undertook public research and had several people writing in to her with their experiences. "It was then about filtering the repetitive stories and clustering them. I used the word Colour as an acronym (C= connect, O= openness, L= love, O= objectivity, U= unbiasedness, R= resilience) and bunched up stories under these themes so there were takeaways for the readers."

Anuranjita's books are an offshoot of her personal experiences. "My first book Can I Have It All? is about being a mother and the dilemmas and choices a woman faces. Writing for me is about leaving a legacy for my children... about leaving the world better than the one we inherited," she says.

■ Unlike weight, there's no set formula to predict your adult height. Near the end of puberty, somewhere between ages 14 and 19, hormonal changes in boys cause the growth plates to harden or close and the lengthening of bones to stop. However, the final spurt can be seen even later in your teen years. To support proper growth, you must focus on eating wholesome meals spread throughout the day, comprising: wholegrains: 5-6 servings; lentils, beans: 3-4 cups; eggs: 1-2; milk and yoghurt: 2-3 cups; vegetables: 5 and more servings; fruits: 2 and more servings; lean meat or paneer: an approximately 100g

Beuran Hendricks' incisive bowling and the home team's insipid display hand the visitors a resounding nine-wicket victory

SA IN INDIA

SHREEDUTTA CHIDANANDA BENGALURU

An insipid batting display saw India sink to a resounding nine-wicket defeat in the third and final T20 international here on Sunday. Some questionable shot-making saw Virat Kohli's men scramble together a modest 134 in 20 overs after winning the toss at the M. Chinnaswamy Stadium.

On the rampage

Quinton de Kock then went on the rampage, smashing an unbeaten 79, as South Africa raced home with 19 balls to spare to level the series.

De Kock's 52-ball effort contained five sixes, all executed in his trademark style over the leg-side boundary. India's bowlers failed to make an early breakthrough as de Kock and Reeza Hendricks put on 76 for the open-

Kohli will be frustrated by a number of things. Primary among them will be his use of the review. India wasted its only review on a frivolous appeal against Hendricks in the sixth over, when Deepak Chahar's delivery was sliding way down leg.

In the next over, de Kock was trapped in front by Washington Sundar for 28. Umpire Nitin Menon ruled him not out. A little later, replays showed the ball would have crashed into the stumps. de Kock carried on unflustered as South Africa wrapped things up in style.

India won the toss and opted to bat first, Kohli believing his team needed practice in defending totals ahead of the T20 World Cup. But what followed was a poor, chaotic effort that frittered away a bright start. From 62 for one in seven overs, India slumped to 99 for six in 15, and never really recovered.

The home team was unchanged from the second T20 while South Africa brought in the left-arm pacer Beuran Hendricks. The move paid off at once.

In his first over, Hendricks angled a delivery across Rohit Sharma (9) that the batsman pushed at half-heartedly. The resulting edge flew to first slip. Hendricks would eventually finish with excellent figures of two for 14 from his four overs.

Early momentum India's early momentum was supplied by Shikhar Dhawan, who picked up from where he had left off in Mohali. He drove Andile Phehlukwayo down the ground, and welcomed Tabraiz Shamsi with a pair of tall sixes. But Dhawan fell to Shamsi for 36, reaching for the ball and lofting it high. Temba Bavuma settled under the catch at extra-cover.

That was the start of India's troubles. Kohli went for 9, caught within an inch of the deep mid-wicket boundary by Phehlukwayo, Rishabh Pant made a start, getting to 19, before he holed out to long-off against the leftarm spin of Bjorn Fortuin.

Shreyas Iyer unwisely charged down the pitch two balls later. Fortuin dragged it down the leg-side, and Shreyas was comfortably stumped.

The stadium crackled with anticipation when Hardik Pandya arrived at the crease. But he failed to produce the fireworks the crowd craved. Ravindra Jadeja managed just the solitary six as South Africa's death-overs

Not great decision-making cost us, says Kohli

ASHWIN ACHAL

India skipper Virat Kohli stated that his team should have taken a more cautious batting approach on the slow M. Chinnaswamy Stadium pitch, in the third and final T20 against South Africa.

"We wanted to go for a big score. In the past, while batting first in T20Is, we have been 20-30 runs short on certain occasions, and that has cost us the game. But quickly into our innings today, we realised that the pitch would not allow us to go for a big score.

"After the start we got, we could have reassessed and set our target to 170, instead of looking for 200. But take nothing away from South Africa – they bowled very well, hit the right areas, and understood the pitch. A combination of good bowling and not great decisionmaking from us cost us the game," Kohli said.

Pant or Shreyas?

There was a moment of confusion during the Indian innings, when both Rishabh Pant and Shreyas Iyer walked into the ground at the fall of the second wicket. It was Pant who eventually batted at two-drop.

"There was some miscommunication there. That is what I understood afterwards. The batting coach had a word with both of them, and there was a misunderstanding as to who had to go in at what stage. It was funny afterwards, as both wanted to walk in. It would have been funny had both batsmen reached the pitch - three batsmen on the field," Kohli said.

South Africa captain Quinton de Kock praised his bowlers Tabraiz Shamsi and Bjorn Fortuin.

Good display

"Shamsi is always pretty consistent. But I'm more impressed with Fortuin. He is an up-and-coming young spinner – for him to come into conditions where the Indian team is very good at playing spin and bowl the way he did was great. He was very clever as he mixed up his pace, and the areas where he bowled," de Kock said. Batsman Rassie van der Dussen added that he was surprised that India chose to

WORLD WRESTLING

NUR-SULTAN (KAZAKHSTAN) Rahul Aware bagged a bronze to ensure India's best-ever medal haul at the World wrestling championships here on Sunday after Deepak Punia finished with a silver, having pulled out of the final due to injury.

Aware outclassed Tyler Lee Graff, the 2017 Pan-America champion, 11-4 in the 61kg bronze play-off to take India's tally to five medals - one silver and four bronze.

Aware was in complete control of the bout and jumped in joy at the end, having won the biggest medal of his career.

Graff surprised Aware with a double leg attack the moment the bout started and earned two points with a takedown.

However, he became alert and twice wriggled out of Graff's single leg attacks. He also scored consecutive takedown points to lead 4-2 at the break.

In the second period too, Graff got hold of Aware's right leg but the Indian got himself out of trouble in an impressive manner.

He then turned things in his favour with quick moves – the takedowns and expose - and took a commanding 10-2 lead.

Eventually he won 11-4.

Alexander Zverev sealed Europe a dramatic Laver Cup hat-trick over Team World on Sunday, as the German beat Milos Raonic in the deciding singles match.

The holders trailed 11-7 midway through the final day but Zverev, after Roger Federer had edged past John Isner 6-4, 7-6(3), downed Raonic 6-4, 3-6, 10-4 to deny John McEnroe's visitors their maiden triumph in the third edition of the event.

After Rafael Nadal withdrew from Sunday's play with a hand injury, Isner and Jack Sock beat Federer and Stefanos Tsitsipas in the opening doubles encounter, before Taylor Fritz saw off Dominic Thiem to leave Team World one win from the trophy.

World No. 6 Zverev took the first set courtesy of a break in game seven, with big-serving Canadian Raonic hitting back to force a super tie-break, saving four break points to serve out the second set.

But the 22-year-old Zverev, selected by Borg ahead of Tsitsipas and Fabio Fognini for the first-ever decider, raced to victory as Raonic's

Her finest performance after being away for over 15 months

WOMEN'S CHESS

KOZHIKODE Koneru Humpy is back.

She is back to playing the kind of solid, ruthless, uncompromising chess that made her one of the strongest women in the history of the game. On Sunday, at the Russian village of Skolkovo, she won the first leg of the FIDE Women's Grand Prix series after finishing her campaign unbeaten.

All she needed was a draw in the final round from the reigning World champion and top seed Ju Wenjun of China. She got that without too much trouble, in 35 moves.

Humpy, meanwhile, reminds that she held the World No. 2 spot for the longest tenure (more than a decade) before her marriage in 2014 and the subsequent break saw her lose that spot.

"This tournament was a double challenge for me as I had to leave my two-year-old daughter Ahana for the first time and also travel alone in my career for the first time,"

Union Sports Ministry directive to AICF

Seeks action on Barua's complaint against Lahiri

Y.B. SARANGI KOLKATA

The Union Sports Ministry has directed the All India Chess Federation (AICF) to take necessary action on the complaint filed by Grandmaster Dibyendu Barua against Bengal Chess Association (BCA) secretary Atanu Lahiri and file an actiontaken report. This directive, issued on September 18, takes cognizance of Barua's detailed complaint made on September 6 to Sports Minister Kiren Rijiju.

Barua had alleged numerous acts of misuse of power and misappropriation of State Government funds by Lahiri, who is also a joint secretary in the AICF.

On August 30, AICF secretary Bharat Singh Chauhan issued a press statement condemning Lahiri's attitude and announcing that the AICF would initiate a "thorough enquiry of BCA and its secretary on the charges levelled by Barua."

The same day, an emergency meeting of the BCA was unanimous in questioning Lahiri's conduct that was "unbecoming of a secretary." A two-member disciplinary committee was formed and Lahiri was given 21 days to respond to a show-cause

The deadline ends on Monday and so far Lahiri has not responded to the notice. Further, he has sought judicial recourse and the case is likely to come up for hearing on Tuesday.

On September 9, AICF president P.R. Venkatarama Raja had written to all officebearers and State associations that the press release (signed by Bharat Singh Chauhan) on August 30 "went beyond the brief given by me and has created unnecessary emotions giving the impression that AICF has made up its mind."

Raja nominated a threemember committee comprising Messrs A. Narasimha Reddy (chairman), D.V. Sundar (AICF vice-presidents) and Kishor Bandekar (AICF treasurer) to oversee BCA's long-overdue elections and enquire into Barua's complaints. Strikingly, Chauhan was kept out of the committee. As is the norm in most National Sports Federations, the secretary remains a demember of facto committees

On September 16, Reddy issued a letter, addressed to Lahiri, directing the BCA to hold elections in early October. It was silent on the enquiry. The BCA officials were baffled how the AICF committee could address a letter to Lahiri, who was facing serious charges and was yet to get a 'clean chit'.

FIR filed by the elder son of the deceased

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

Arjuna awardee Gaurav Gill and another driver were booked on Sunday in connection with an accident during a National Rally Championship race here in which a couple and their young son were killed, police said.

A police official said companies involved in the event Maxperienace, Mahindra, JK Tyres, MRF Tyres and the Federation of Motor Sports Club of India – have also been named in the FIR.

Additional Superintendent of Police Khinv Singh said the FIR was lodged at Samdari police station at 2

I believe I can become World champion: Panghal

Reigning Asian title holder has now set his sights on the 2020 Tokyo Olympics

BOXING

V.S. ARAVIND

It was a historic day for Indian boxing as Amit Panghal entered the record books by becoming the first men's pugilist to bag a silver medal at the World Championships, held at Ekaterinburg (Russia) on Saturday.

The journey has been far from easy. From Rohtak to Russia, boxing against odds, the pint-sized boxer has come a long way.

"It was a surreal moment when I entered the ring. I knew it was going to be tough, but I gave it all I had. Gold is what I dreamt of, but I am happy with the silver," Panghal told Sportstar from Russia.

Though his signature salute after winning a bout has become a big hit, it's the kiss on the India jersey before entering the ring that Panghal prides himself on.

"India, Bharat" he pauses as a flood of emotions choke him. "It's a dream to wear this (India) jersey. To represent my nation is an honour

Traditionally, tall boxers enjoy an advantage as they have greater reach when throwing punches and can also defend effectively. The final proved that as Panghal went down to Olympic champion Shakhobidin Zoirov of Uzbekistan in an intense 52kg bout.

Against the 5'7" ft tall Uzbek, the 5'2" Panghal failed to land his punches accurately and when counter-attacked opened up his defence jacket.

Height factor

"I can't help with my height but I am trying to work how to tame the taller boxers. It was not the first time I was facing the taller guys.

"I discussed it with my coaches and there was a Plan B. But, unfortunately, I couldn't pull it off today," said Panghal, who had beaten Kazakhstan's Saken Bibossinov (5'6") in the semifi-

Nimble feet, speed, ducking and swaying and, most importantly, the sideways movement to disable the opponent's reach, make Panghal a tough opponent. "That's my game and I need to evolve further. Inside the ring, I am myself and the trick is to maintain my composure when the opponent is attacking. I know I have a good defence and I can understand what the opponent is thinking. I like to keep moving around the ring," he said.

The reigning Asian champion has now set his sights 2020 Tokyo on the Olympics.

"Bagging a silver at the Worlds is an achievement but to win an Olympic medal is a dream for every athlete. The training has to be right and, more importantly, the process. It's important to train in a specific manner and it involves a lot of dedication, determination and effort. Technique-wise nothing is going to change drastically, but I need to develop in certain areas. I will definitely come out a better boxer," said Panghal.

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE SINGAPORE

Ferrari's Sebastian Vettel ended his year-long drought without a win at the Singapore Grand Prix on Sunday, mastering a hazy circuit to claim a record fifth triumph in the city-state.

The German was chased home by teammate Charles Leclerc, who started on pole but lost the lead to the fourtime world champion after making his pit stop, and Red Bull's Max Verstappen, who finished third.

"It was a very late call on the pit stop and I just gave it everything on the out lap. I was surprised to come out ahead and it was difficult to manage the tyres but we controlled it to the end," Vettel told reporters pressure on second-placed Hamilton in the opening lap.

While a few drivers were shifting position further down the field, the frontrunners were maintaining a onesecond gap between each other as Leclerc set a slow pace to make his soft tyres last as long as possible.

Ferrari and Red Bull were the first of the big teams to bring their cars in for pit stops as Vettel and Verstap pen were fitted with the more durable hard tyres on lap 20, with Leclerc following suit on the next lap.

Leclerc, however, was dismayed to leave the pits behind Vettel. Hamilton stayed out on track in the lead to set about forging a big enough gap to retain the lead when it was his turn to come in.

But Vettel, Leclerc and Verstappen were lapping much quicker than Hamilton and when the Briton finally stopped seven laps after his rivals, he emerged in a distant fourth place.

Triple World champion Carolina Marin retained her China Open title on Sunday, eight months after suffering a career-threatening injury.

The Spaniard recovered from a game down to defeat Taiwan's second-seeded Tai Tzu-ying 14-21, 21-17, 21-18 in Changzhou.

A tearful Marin collapsed to the court floor and buried her head in her hands after powering to victory in 65 minutes.

"There was some frustration with myself in the first game. I tried to keep calm. I had to be patient and find the good length on the shuttle. But the most important thing is I could fight until the end.

"I just waited until she made mistakes. I just wanted to play some long rallies because I knew this match was going to be really tough," said the Spaniard Kento Momota cemented his place as the top men's player with a 19-21, 21-17, 21-19 win over Indonesia's seventh seed Anthony Sinisuka Ginting in their final.

TNCA AGM to be held on September 26

EC MEETING

S. DINAKAR

The Tamil Nadu Cricket Association (TNCA) annual general meeting will be held on September 26. This was decided at the State body's executive committee meeting here on Sunday.

Nominations for the various posts may be filed till September 25 (5 p.m.). As of now, none from the group opposing the ruling dispensation has come forward to stake a claim.

Meanwhile, the group owing allegiance to N. Srinivasan has been acting fast, deciding on its nominees at the EC meeting. R.S. Ramaswamy from Salem has been named candidate for secretary, and K.A. Shankar for joint secretary. Both have previous experience as administrators in the TNCA

And J. Parthasarathy, son of the late S.R. Jagannathan, a popular figure in the TNCA, is the ruling group's nominee for the treasurer's Dindigul Venkataraman has been nominated for the iob of assistant secretary-districts. Srinivasa Raju and Ashok Sigamani are the ruling faction's choice as vicepresidents. Srinivasan's daughter Ru-pa Gurunath's name for president is expected to be announced on the floor of the house on the day of the election, as is the norm. Those contesting for the president's job do not have to file nominations.

In the absence of a viable opposition, all the above names should sail through in the election.

Some disappointment There was a tinge of disappointment, though, in some quarters on no former cricketer being in the mix. Although there are some experienced administrators in those nominated, there seems to be a certain lack of dynamism.

With a young president in Rupa - she has been quietly groomed for the role by Srinivasan - likely to be running the show, a younger and a more enterprising team could have taken the TNCA into the future with its changing dynamics. And, a couple of former cricketers would have fitted the bill.

Meanwhile, the TNCA district secretaries will meet on Monday to pick three candidates from the districts for the executive committee.

The ProKabaddi League (PKL) has changed the world for all those involved with the sport. Players now pay attention to fitness, diet, endurance and technique, given that they are under the scrutiny of television cameras.

Arjuna awardee Anup Kumar - member of the India team which won the kabaddi World Cup in 2016 and now Puneri Paltan coach - says: "I started playing kabaddi on mud, hence have to keep upgrading and updating in order to explain my techniques. Coaching and playing are two completely different

Earlier a raid lasted 40-45 seconds, now it is 30 seconds

On how technical the sport has become, U Mumba vice-captain Sandeep Narwal says, "I started playing on mud where a player can easily run out of your grasp. On the contrary, it is easier to trap a player on the mat now."

The game has been speeded up with the inclusion of the super raid, super tackle and do-or-die, keeping viewers guessing till the last minute on the match result.

Puneri Paltan defender Girish Maruti Ernak, who has represented India in the last
