Khattar to head coalition regime

To take oath of office as Haryana CM today, Dushyant Chautala to become his deputy

DC CORRESPONDENT NEW DELHI, OCT. 26

The BJP-Jannayak Janata Party coalition government will take oath on Sunday, a day after BJP president Amit Shah announced his party's alliance in Haryana with the Jat-dominated party. Interim chief minister, Manohar Lal Khattar, will be sworn-in as the next chief minister of the state, while the JJP's Dushyant Chautala will be his deputy.

After facing severe criticism over seeking support of controversial leader Gopal Kanda, the BJP was forced to clarify that it will not take the support of the Haryana Lokhit Party legislator. Kanda is facing two abetment of suicide cases, including that of a former female employee and her mother.

"I want to clarify one thing — the BJP is not going to take the support of Kanda," said Union minister Ravi Shankar Prasad on Saturday. He was in Chandigarh for the BJP's legislative meeting as a Central observer. In the just-concluded Assembly polls in the state, the BJP bagged 40 seats, six short of a simple majority. Other than the JJP's 10 MLAs, the BJP also has the support of seven Independent MLAs. Earlier in the day, the BJP legislative party met in Chandigarh and elected Mr Khattar as the legisla-

IMD rain alert for next 2 days

DC CORRESPONDENT HYDERABAD, OCT. 26

Heavy rain and thunderstorms have been forecast for the next two days, possibly making it a wet Diwali in the city and environs. The Indian Meteorological Department said there is a likelihood of thunderstorm and lightning on October 27 and 28 due to a depression in the Bay of Bengal and the impact of Cyclone Kyaar in the Arabian sea.

Weather expert, Rajani-kanth Poolla, said, "The cyclone has led to a change in the wind patterns. It has also led to moisture being pulled in from the Bay of Bengal due to which TS and AP are seeing a strong movement of clouds. There will be more thunderstorms due to the change in the wind's direction.'

AMEENPUR LAKE HAVEN FOR WINGED GUESTS

DC CORRESPONDENT HYDERABAD, OCT. 26

In a phoenix-like resurrection, the picturesque Ameenpur lake, which seemed destined to lose out to encroachers and had almost become a cesspool that had to be shunned, is gradually regaining its lost glory. Now home to over 250 species of migratory birds, it is finally justify-ing the biodimentity dor ing the biodiversity deritage tag conferred on it. This transformation is being celebrated the most by bird-watchers. Around 40-odd proba-tionary IAS and IPS officers, who visited the lake last week, had a first-hand experience of the achievement. They were told about the importance of saving and preserving biodiversity. "Not only has there been an increase in the number of winged visiwheelchair for the last 23 tors to the lake, the various species that have begun flocking it, are a feast for the eyes. MAN DUPES CUSTOMERS OF ₹13L, NABBED

A former employee of a private company which works with the SBI Credit Card division was arrested for obtaining credit cards using the identification proof of customers and purchasing a bike and jewellery.

Police said Nemalapalli Sreedhar, 25, a resident of Kukatpally, was arrested on Saturday for duping SBI Cards and Payment Services Ltd to the tune of ₹12.66 lakh.

Sreedhar, while working at Axis Securities, Bengaluru, had collected identification documents of bank customers who had not applied for a credit card and used them to get credit cards. Sreedhar fur-nished his mobile numbers in place of the contact numbers of the customers so that they are never alerted about the credit cards. In this manner, he obtained as many as seven credit cards. He used them to purchase jewellery in Bengaluru and Hyderabad, and a bike, mobile phones and watches, all worth ₹12.66 lakh. Bank officials who learned of this during internal checks, lodged a complaint with the cyber crime police, who nabbed Sreedhar Kukatpally. from

The Telugu Desam is being subject to another round of poaching of its leaders by both the BJP and the YSRC. The pressure is so severe that the party may split, according to sources. The manoeuvres of Telugu Desam supremo N. Chandrababu Naidu may not be enough to stanch the flow of leaders away from the party.

Sources said Mr Naidu had dropped hints about allying with the BJP and the Jana Sena to create a 2014-like coalition to prevent the party leaders from leaving, but it was having little success. Worse, BJP leaders have repeatedly rebuffed Mr Naidu by quoting party president Amit Shah and saying the "doors are closed" for him.

Besides, Mr Naidu called for statewide protests against the sand crisis on October 25 hut many top leaders skipped the programme.

The BJP has given Rajya Sabha member Y. Sujana Chowdary the task of bringing TD and YSRC leaders into the party fold. He has started off by meeting TD leaders including legislators Vallabhaneni Vamsi and Karanam Balaram. Interestingly, Mr Vamsi is being wooed by the YSRC as week. Ministers Kodali Venkateswara Rao and Perni Venkataramaiah contacted Mr Vamsi to strengthen the party in Krishna district and met YSRC president and Chief Minister Y.S. Jagan Mohan Reddy. Mr Vamsi is being offered the district party presidentship and a Legislative Council seat. Mr Vamsi without refuting rumours of party change said that he would announce his decision after the Diwali amavasya.

Opposition legislators and leaders are worried about protecting of their supporters and followers against the attracbein nised by the BJP and the YSRC for the next four and a half years without power. A TD leader said, "We could do something for our followers if we were the ruling party." According to reliable sources, 10 leaders including four MLAs are readying to quit the TD after Diwali. Mr Reddy has directed Assembly Speaker Tammineni Sitaram to disqualify legislators who try to join the YSRC without quitting their parent party. To circumvent this, TD legislators are planning to form a separate group and defect to avoid disqualification. This holds a bigger danger to the TD as it would split the party. A political analyst said that when YSRC and the BJP are trying to net powerful leaders of the TD, the party would be in grave peril Asked about the poaching, AP BJP president Kanna Lakshminarayana said that Mr BJP Naidu was living with the fear of corruption cases which was damaging the morale of TD leaders and cadres. He said there was no future for the TD due to its corruption and anomalies in the past five years.

The Kukatpally story has repeated in Huzurnagar for the Telugu Desam. In a constituency that has a strong presence of 'settler' voters of Andhra Pradesh origin and those of the Kamma community, its traditional supporters, the party still managed to lose the byelec-

The votcontested 17 seats in alliance with the Congress ers it was wooing overwhelmingly rejected the party. Ms Kiranmayi could get just 1,827 votes and lost but could win two. The TD leadership thought that the Kukatpally Assembly constituency was an open and shut case. This constituency is dominated by 'settlers' and Kamma community voters. To make victory certain, the party fielded N. Suhasini, granddaughter of the late N.T. to its lost glory in the state. Ironically, the TD was stronger in the Telangana region of undivided AP Rama Rao.

TD president N. Chandrababu Naidu and actor Balakrishna too carried out a strident campaign in the constituency but to no avail. The constituency went with Mr Madhavaram Krishna Rao of the TRS in the December 2017 elections. The impact of the defeat TD leaders in Telangana state started migrating to in the Assembly elections was such that the Telugu Desam in an unprecedented manner did not contest the other Lok Sabha elections in

Maharajah can rule, given a fair chance

State of the Union

Air India, has long been vilified as the poster child of what ails India's public sector undertakings. For the last 20 years, government after government has mulled over disin-vestment. The United Front Government in 1997 and then two NDA governments from 1998 to 2004 attempted to sell Air India. However, the United Progressive Alliance government for 10 long years tried to revive the airline through financial infusions and a merger between Air India and Indian Airlines that failed to get off the ground. The sell-off effort was revived again by the NDA/BJP government in 2017 but found no takers. Once again the current government is in the process of formulating an Expression of Interest to find a possible suitor. However, it is erroneous to view Air India from the prism of an ailing public sector enterprise in India. In fact, it should be seen as symptomatic of the tion sector in India that warrants institutional reform. This malaise in the aviation sector has affected public and private players alike. The irony is that over the last four years, India's aviation market has grown at a yearly average rate of 20 per cent, among the fastest in the world. Despite this, all major airline players are in dire financial straits. A product of India's "open sky" policy introduced in the early 1990s, Jet Airways, India's largest private airline at one time, is the most recent among 10 privately-promoted airlines that have collapsed in less than 30 years. Other carriers that have suspended operations include the East-West Airlines, Damania Airways, Śahara Airlines, ModiLuft, Air

The last one still has not paid its employees. Together, these airlines left unrecovered dues to the tune of ₹100,000 crores before going belly up. There is no empirical evidence that suggests that the private sector can run an airline better.

One of the key determinants of an airline's success or failure is the price of aviation turbine fuel. Its cost accounts for roughly 40 per cent of an airline's operating costs. Airlife's operating costs. High taxes on aviation turbine fuel in India — one of the highest in the world — make Indian car-riers less competitive against global players.

charges to airport operators, both private airports and Airport Authority of India-operated airports, for landing, parking, route navigation and royalty. Other than these charges, airlines have to send their planes abroad due to lack of repair, maintenance, and overhaul facilities in India, but get no input credit for taxes paid abroad. The regulatory work in the aviation sector is hurting competitiveness of Indian carriers. Till 2016, the government had a self-defeating rule of 5/20, which meant an airline had to operate for five years in India and have 20 aircraft to be able to fly overseas. This constrained airlines revenue generation capacity. Airlines now need to operate only 20 aircraft on local routes to start flying abroad. Further, the Centre allows 100 per cent Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) in airlines, but has strangely has capped it at 49 per cent if foreign carriers wants to invest in an Indian aviation company. Since aviation is a highly capital-intensive business, FDI curbs prevent it from acquiring new technology and best practices. The Indian market expanded rapidly in the Deccan and Kingfisher.

With proper policy support from the government, the Maha-rajah is capable of emergsimilar error with Air India. Therefore, the government must rethink its decision to sell the Maharajah. A wiser deci-sion would be to appropri-ately value Air India, restructure the airline, ing as India's number one carrier again within the next five years. If Air India is shuttered,

If the government wants to reduce its equity stake in Air India to even 26 per cent or less, a better way would be to divest the equity in the market and make it a shareholder-owned company driven by an independent board and liberated from the clutches of the civil aviation ministry completely. This is the new norm globally. The minister concerned has spent a lifetime in government service as a distinguished diplomat, probably flying Air India around the world. SHINE TRAGEDY

The authorities wake up only after a tragedy and lives are lost. The Shine hospital case is the latest. The boat tragedy in Godavari was another recent incident. Earlier when City Light hotel collapsed the Greater Hyderabad Municipal Corporation swung into action and notices were served on many dilapidated buildings. After the fire accident in a coaching cen-tre in Surat the authorities sealed around 300 coaching centres in the twin cities. In most of the cases, owners are arrested or penalised and a few offi-cials down the line are made scapegoats. But the higher officials relaxing in air-conditioned chambers, who are supposed to implement the guidelines on the ground, go scot-free.

NEW REVENUE ACT

During general elections, Chief Minister K. It's more than 10 months now but the new Act has not yet been taken up. Mr Subhani's cartoon (DC, Oct. 19) correctly depicts the state of the banking system in India. Though the present dispensation at the Centre has l n nower een than five years, it still blames the UPA government for every malady in the financial sector, ignoring the ill effects of demonetisation on the economy. A spurt in deposits (due to demonetisation) had shrunk the profitability of banks as lending cannot increase overnight. This directly affects the profitability of banks and in turn their shareholders. Instead of strengthening the loan recovery system with provision for punitive action against defaulters, we are writing off bad loans to project a better balance sheet and this will send wrong signals to honest borrowers. Depositors also feel unsafe.

Me: Neither. I just told you I'm a writer. And why would Devaki move to Patna? Don't get ideas, okay?

AG: Then why the f@#k are you having this conversation, you moron? Me: Hey, listen, Mr Gupta. No need to be rude, okay. I was interested. So I contacted you.

AG: Saalaa ... whathef@%&k are you interested in? Tell me, man!

Me: I'm interested that you are in Patna and want a Mughlai cook. I want the backstory. What happened to your previous cook? Did you have a previous cook at all? Or is this your first brush with Mughlai? When did you start your business? What are the challenges of making Mughlai food in Patna? Do you think you are better off setting up a Chinese restaurant? Are you lonely? Are you a dog person or a cat person? Who do you think suited Dev Anand better? Kishore Kumar or Rafi? That kind of thing.

AG: Give me your phone number. I'll call and explain in detail, you #$% ... Me: Bfn. Someone is at the door.

I tell you, people can be so rude.

Exit Nadda, enter Baluni?

Prime Minister Narendra Modi is likely to opt for a Cabinet reshuffle soon. The BJP is set to have J.P Nadda as its full-time party chief before the year-end. In the process some leaders from the party are set to join the government while there is a possibility of few leaving the government and opting for party work. Mr Nadda, for instance, is himself a Union minister. Anil Baluni, a young Rajya Sabha member and BJP functionary from Uttarakhand, is likely to join the goverment as he is seen as a challenger to Uttarakhand chief minister Trivendra Singh Rawat.

A millennial's perspective on annihilating caste overcome social prejudices of

CASTE MATTERS by Suraj Yengde Penguin. ₹599

Yengde's Caste Matters is a remarkable book providing a millennial perspective and compelling proof for the continued prevalence of casteism in modern India. It has by now received raving reviews, and also a few brickbats, the latter, paradoxically, from his own brethren. Seven students of Jawaharlal Nehru University accused Yengde to be opposed to Ambedkarism. It is not the content of their accusation, which may be easily trashed by any reasonable reader, that matters but the very fact that it comes from a collective of the millennial dalits, indicating the hope-less disorientation of the dalits at a time when they face the worst crisis in modern times. Autobiographical accounts of dalit lives generally evoke prurient interest among non-dalit readers. From the earliest autobiography, Baluta, by Daya Pawar, to Juthan by Omprakash Walmiki to the recent one, Interrogating My Chandal Life by Manoranjan Byapari, an important addition to the galaxy of dalit writers from the unlikely state of West Bengal, the story has been much the same. The vivid description of abject poverty, squalid surroundings and the uninhibited lives of the subjects make captivating reading for the non-dalits and to most dalits it reminds of their own past. Caste Matters is not exactly an autobiography but it might be mistaken as one as it launches itself from the very personal memoir of the author in the introduction. The scathing exposure of pervasiveness of caste is what makes the book stand out. Yengde describes it as "an ethnography of the sociality of caste in the dalits: 'Ambedkar has become a fairytale hero who has solution to every problem.' He laments that the iconoclast Ambedkar being cast into the godhead and worshipped in Hindu style.

The book is divided into six chapters. The first chapter 'Being Dalit" juxtaposes dalits against the non-dalits, particularly the Brahmins, and illuminates the difference between them along such dimensions as love, humour and universalism. Its narrative is replete with profound observations such as, "Dalit love is a juxtaposition of possibilities and deep pain" (p. 49), "the situation that Dalits live under is akin to an open prison" (p. 52), "the idea of contemporary India is a Brahminical project designed by Brahmins"(63), and so on. The main argument of the chapter is that Dalı́ts are culturally distinct. The self-pride with which dalits are depicted smacks firstly of treating them as a homoge-nous people, which they are not, as he himself explains in the third chapter and secondly, they are made of some different stuff. The compartmentalised lives of different castes and communities in India are bound to reflect some cultural specificities but within the overarching caste culture. The second chapter "Neo-Dalit Rising" is an exposition of the ways caste operates in India.

Yengde characterises the Indian state-society as an entity of brahmin supremacy." (p. 71) and faults the constitutionality of the state for not "explicitly talking about the unequal stakes inherited by the traditional power brokers..." The Indian Constitution is fraught with high-sounding dictums but lacks in basic accountability of the power holders who enjoy unlimited impunity (p. 73). Yengde has narrated how dalits at every echelon of society are discriminated against. Justice C.S. Karnan, a dalit sitting judge of a high court, who was incarcerated for six months, is one such case. (p. 74). Yengde is inspired by the youth fury over institutional murder of the Rohith Vemula to see a neo-dalit rising. Sadly, this reaction had not even lasted up to the first anniversary of Rohith's anniversary Rohith's martyrdom. The third chapter takes stock of many categories of dalits, acknowledging the changes that befell the community. One one hand, it reflects the progress the community made but on the other, a loss of community itself. It also notices the rise of a cer-"Ambedkargodism" tain amongst dalits. Yengde boldly points out: "Ambedkar has become a fairytale hero who has solution to every problem". (p. 146) He laments that the iconoclast Ambedkar being cast into the godhead and worshipped in Hindu style.

The fourth chapter deals with the phenomenon of the dalit middle class and brings up the question of reservations. It notes that although reservations have benefited many individuals, it has not uplifted the community. (p. 164) This upwardly mobile middle class, unable to the upper castes, falls back on the community to meet its social needs. Yengde observes how the dalit middle class upholds the Ambedkarite dictum — "becoming the ruling class" revived by Kanshiram, but will convenient ly ignore his vision of socialism. The next chapter on "Dalit Capitalism" presents an interesting comparison between Booker T. Washington, who formally established the National Negro Business league in 1990 with an intent of creating a cap-italist class among the Black population in the ŬS and Web Du Bois, who wanted the Black population to acquire positions of eminence in arts, literature, academia and other forms of cultural, moral and intellectual endeavours. Du Bois wanted to elevate Black people from their enforced subservience. This is similar to the idea of Ambedkar who wanted Untouchables to leave hamlets that were the site of traditional caste-mandated occupations (p.210). The folly of the fad of Dalit capitalism is thus disposed of. The last chapter "Brahmins against Brahminism" acknowledges the contributions of people of the brahmin caste to anti-Brahminist struggles of the oppressed castes. The book boldly confronts most of the contemporary most issues facing dalits, largely successfully. However, it has certain logical angularities. As it classes people by caste, it necessarily feeds into caste identities, which the author detests to start with.

How Jagmeet Singh, Canadian MP, failed to love his father fully

he personal is political" and not surprisingly, the memoir of Jagmeet Singh, elected as the first visible minority face to lead a major federal political party in Canada, was released during an election year. He led Canada's New Democratic Party (NDF) to win 24 seats in the recently concluded general election and was briefly set to play "kingmaker" to Justin Trudeau's Liberal Party.

The title of the book, Love and Courage, his signature political catchphrase, emerged as a response to a heckler who typecast people sporting turbans as Muslim and accused them of being terrorists. Whenever he was faced with Islamophobia, Jagmeet Singh never replied, "I'm not a Muslim", because "hate is wrong, no matter who it is aimed at". "We must respond to hate with love and courage," was his message.

Can you separate the personal from the political, especially when you belong to a visible minority community with very vis ible religious symbols as markers of your identity? Singh, like so many other non-Caucasians, faced stares and taunts like "Dirty", "Paki", "diaper-head", what with society, including the media, broadcasting the image of a terrorist as "brown skin-plus-young male-plus-beard-plus-turban". "Carding" and "profiling" were more widespread among black and indigenous people, often termed as "routine procedure". Bouncers at clubs targeted brown-skinned people. Violence against cab drivers was common and the lives of brown people were deemed less valuable. Jagmeet (which means friend to the world) became an activist in addition to his law practice and participated in anti-poverty and pro-human rights demonstrations. He regularly organised "Know your Rights" workshops and soon went on to form the first Western Sikh student association.

This book is, in fact, his journey from being Jimmy to Jagmeet. It was a life-changing moment for our hero when at the end of his second grade he made two big decisions - to change his name from Jimmy Dhaliwal to Jagmeet Singh and to stop cutting his hair. This memoir is also a window to some basic Sikh theological beliefs and practices in everyday life. With some core values like Ikk-Onkar, God is one, Chardi Kala (to remain in high spir-its against all odds), Gurbani as a source of strength, gurdwara as a gateway to enlightenment, seva (service), sacrifice, charity and sarbat-da-bhala, it can be said that Jagmeet Singh has truly embraced the "Sikh way of life". There are pieces of Sikh histo-ry and culture as well in the book and these include references to Maharaja Ranjit Singh, the Akali movement, the British Sikh Army, the Punjabi language as a bond between Jagmeet and his parents, Operation Blue Star and the 1984 riots. Jagmeet writes that Canada is home to him and it is a country that respects human rights and dignity of life.

Initially, Jagmeet was so shy that he couldn't even pick up the phone to order a pizza. Incidentally, he had turned into a vegetar-ian just to win an argument. Jagmeet also faced sexual abuse from his trainer when he was part of a "special programme" that only the very best were allowed to participate in. It required a lot of courage to come out on this incident that had kept Jagmeet in a shell for a long time. Jagmeet Singh is the first Sikh with a turban to sit as a provincial legislator in Ontario. Chosen by Toronto Life magazine as one of the five youngest rising stars and featured in the top ten bestdressed people of 2013, Jagmeet Singh's image as a style icon is also related to his attempts to meet stares and unfriendly looks thrown at him because of wearing the turban. To dress sharp was a part of his socialisation process when his father discovered it as a way "to belong". "As people of colour, we couldn't afford not to look good he believed. His father said one cannot control th colour of his skin or his country of birth, but one can control what one's wardrobe says to the world - so Jagmeet made sure his clothing never gave anyone a reason to think he didn't belong. The use of simple language in his work immediately builds a bond with Jagmeet's readers. Jagmeet's story, intersecting many social and political issues, inspires one in myriad ways. His first meeting with Walid Mansour stays with you and brings a smile to your face. It is difficult not to remember Jugnu, his dog, who proved to be the only link among and source of solace for all familv members. But the real hero of the book turns out to be Jagmeet's father, and not Jagmeet himself. Born in Punjab and armed with a medical degree, Jagtaran Singh Dhaliwal had landed in Canada to start a new life. Working as a security guard at night and studying for the Medical Council of Canada examination in the library, it was a struggle but failure was no option. From providing an affluent lifestyle to his family to giving them exposure to various activities and hobbies like horse-riding, skiing, snowboarding and golf, he made sure his children got the best upbringing. Alas his drinking problem proved to be his nemesis. Despite Jagmeet seeming to see his father as part of every single problem and defending his mother and siblings' harsh treatment of him, your heart bleeds for him and you end up seeing what Jagmeet failed to notice. Though his mother complained to the authorities against him, Jagtaran never received a single complaint from any patient. Always sober at work, he used to help out with psychiatric services and provided treatment to needy. Though he was addicted to alcohol, he was also the family's sole breadwinner and supported the children's college educations. He got fancy cars and separate apartments for all his children. It breaks your heart when he was not allowed to live in his own apartment. Ask who you remember the most after reading Love and Courage and it is definitely the father whose story inspires you, pierces your soul and becomes a part of your memory. Though Jagmeet Singh loved and cared for his father, albeit in pieces, how I wish he would have shown more courage to love 🦉 him — right at the start.

Anxious Kolkata girl loves anew with family blessings

Lata Ghosh is a bit of a moaner. This is her default mode: "Lata fell back onto the mattress and covered her face with the crook of her elbow. It's not easy to argue with a woman like this: "Manjulika Ghosh taught history and geography in middle school. She also only wore the finest Dhakai saris on her annual journey to London, where unlike the other passengers who emerged from Heathrow looking like crushed paper towels, she glided out like Aparna Sen on set."

Once in Kolkata, Lata's friends from Presidency college pop up (including Ronny-an ex) and you can look forward to squeals of joy, cheerful banter, laughs and loveor maybe not. The problem is,

Dear me, no-she is more like Coleridge's Ancient Mariner, "Alone, alone, all, all alone/Alone on a wide wide sea!/And never a saint took pity on/My soul in agony." Which, actually, is perfect for chick lit. Satire is what makes you turn the pages of this book: Ronny leads to hilarious takes on Tollywood, and his agony over his new script is painful. He chops and changes and rarely meets deadlines, which makes his almost-Marwari assistant, Bobby Bansal, feel like tearing her hair out

Bobby is only the first of the almost-Marwaris you meet in this book. Her cousin is engaged to Lata's cousin Molly (who organises her wedding by ordering almost everything online, which is so smooth). As the final tiresome and troublesome offline wedding preparations finally kick off at Ghosh Mansion, you meet the entire strict vegetarian almost-Marwari family (who are actually with Lata when she bursts into of the most loved non-Bengali songs during those decades, Dolly Parton's yowly 'Jolene". It doesn't matter if you've lived in Kolkata or not, though. The characters are alive, the one-liners are fun, and the observations are witty. If a happy ending is what you're after, you may be disappointed. Lata finally has a valid reason to feel depressed, but take heart-there's a silver lining too!

While Lata's mother may not think Friends from College is a worthy book, she would perhaps agree that it is a pleasant and comorting read. Feel free to ignore Manjulika Ghosh's stricture on books to read while travelling: 'You bought a new book to read on a journey-and mind you, no potboiler or whodunit either. A worthy book. I don't know if Lebrecht actually buys into so simple a description of scien-Norman tific progress, or whether it is just a good, combative kick-off to a book, but either way the main thrust of the argument is ines-capable. For the best part of the past 200 years a small and threatened minority has exerted a creative influence out of all proportion to their numbers, and whether they flaunt it like a Disraeli or a Bernstein, or convert like Mendа elssohn, whether they hate it like Marx, are religious or atheist, Orthodox or Reform, assimilist or Zionist, the one thing they share is their "Jewishness". While it seems a difficult thing to define without slipping into tautology — a "Jewish joke" takes one as close as one is probably going to get — the one quality, for Lebrecht, that distinguishes the "Jewish mindset" is the rabbinical, counter-intuitive ability to think "outside the box". He is quick to refute any suggestion of Jewish "exceptionalism", but whether in the end it is a matter of culture, hereditary experience or the eternal, driven angst of a people who could only fear the worst, the western world has every reason to be grateful to this astonishing explosion of talent.

But Lebrecht is not blind to the paradox at the heart of political Zionism, nor the realities of Israeli state power. In 1978, the Nobel Prize-winning novelist, Isaac Bashevis Singer, on a visit to his son in Israel, was invited to tea by a fellow Warsaw Jew, the prime minister, Menachem Beg in. "Tell me," says Singer, "why did you have to reinvent Hebrew when we have such a beautiful Jewish mother tongue in Yid dish?" Begin explains that Yiddish is unfit for government. It has no administrative terms and its elaborate courtesies are unsuited to military situations. To order 'shoot' in Yiddish, an officer would have to speak a full sentence to indicate the possibility of a shot being fired. "Why," cries Begin, "Yiddish has no word for weapons, no word even for army''' Singer surveys the Israeli PM with sad grey eyes. He raises a forefinger in the air and utters a single Yiddish syl-lable. "Oh!" says Singer meaning just imagine a world without such things. "The two men," Lebrecht adds, "never speak again."

New Delhi, Oct. 26: The disabled and people over 80 years of age can now cast their vote through postal ballot, the government said on Saturday, in a move that will help increase voter turnout.

At present, voting through postal ballot is available to armed forces and those assigned poll duties. On the recommendation of the Election Commission, the ministry of law and justice has amended the Conduct of Election Rules, 1961, on October 22, allowing senior citizens and person with disabilities in the absentee voter list.

The absentee voter refers to a vote cast by someone who is unable to go to the polling station. Officials said that in both these categories there are people who are unable to reach the polling stations and thus are unable to cast their votes.

"This will enable people from these two categories to cast their votes with ease and will also thus increase the voter turnout," an official said. The poll officer will attest the absentee voter in the case of senior citizens and person with disability in the form 13A.

Davs after the US government sought a roadmap from India on political and economic norin Kashmir and asked the Indian government to immediately release all the political detainees, six US Congressmen have written to the Indian ambassador asking some uncomfortable questions. In a letter to Indian envoy Harsh Vardhan Shringla, the American lawmakers have said that many of their constituents have portrayed a much different picture in Kashmir compared to what the Indian ambassador had told them on October 16, when he briefed members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The six US Congressmen -David N Cicilline, Dina Titus, Chrissy Houlahan, Andy Levin, James P McGovern and Susan Wild — have asked the Indian government if 100 per cent landlines have been restored in Jammu and Kashmir or there are any remaining outages. They also asked when mobile networks, including Internet, will be restored. The lawmakers also asked about the number of people detained under the Public Safety Act.

Fadnavis to be sworn in by Nov. 3; Sena likely to revisit 1995-formula on portfolios

SONU SHRIVASTAVA MUMBAI, OCT. 26

Even as the Shiv Sena is mounting pressure on the Bharatiya Janata Party to share the Chief Minister's post for 2.5 years each, the later has started preparations for Devendra Fadnavis's swearing-in ceremony. A senior party leader on Saturday informed that Fadnavis is likely to be sworn-in as the Chief Minister for the second time on November 2 or 3 at Wankhede stadium. The senior BJP leader said, "The swearing-in ceremony of the new government is likely to be completed by November 3. Meanwhile, the discussion over sharing of portfolios would be held with Shiv Sena president Uddhav Thackeray." Interestingly, the BJP leader added that the party had earlier planned to hold the swearing ceremony at Mahalakshmi Race Course — if it had managed to get a majority on its own. With the BJP short of 40 seats to form the government, it will have to take the Shiv Sena on board.

The Maharashtra BJP has convened a meeting of its MLAs on October 30 to elect the leader of the House. This will be a mere formality since Narendra Modi and Amit Shah have already declared Fadnavis as the BJP's chief ministerial face during the polls.

Hopes of rescue receded as two-year-old Sujith Wilson slipped further to about 100 feet depth into the borewell in his father's corn field at Nadukattupatti village near Manapparai near here even as multiple expert agencies and teams continued efforts to retrieve him for the second day on Saturday.

"Despite our best efforts and the hard work of various organisations, the boy could not be retrieved so far and has in fact slipped further to about 100 feet. He has not been responding to our calls and there is no sign of any movement in him since 5.30 this morning. He did respond with feeble 'hmm' noises even at 3.30 a.m., but has fallen silent since then. Also, mud has slipped from the walls of the narrow borewell to walls and fallen on him," health minister Dr C. Vijaya Baskar said. the boy.

He has been camping at the mishap site since Friday evening.

After the failure of over six different expert teams coming from various parts of the state and elsewhere, along with their machines and innovative gadgets to rescue the kid, a group comprising the ONGC and NLC experts began work late Saturday night to dig a pit parallel to the borewell pipe and a little deeper than Sujith's position at 100 ft.

A volunteer from the state fire service has been drafted to don special outfit, including focus light and tunneling equipment, drill a four-inch diameter tunnel to reach

> "We first thought of digging the pit about one metre from the borewell but decided to do it three metres away to prevent caving in of the soft mud or the vibration if we hit a rock which could harm the kid and the borewell. These experts are experienced in doing such deep tunnels, such as the underground Metro Rail works", said minister Vijaya Baskar, adding that he hoped the boy would be reached by the brave fireman in about three hours.

Death toll climbs to 42 in Iraq

Baghdad: The death toll from protests in Iraq has climbed to 42 after a senior government official in the country's south said 12 pro-testers died in a fire they started while storming the office of powerful militia during a rally there a day earlier. The anti-government protests erupted after leaderless, spontaneous revolts were violently quelled earlier this month in the war-torn country. The southern official says that in Diwaniyah town, bodies were being removed from a building belonging to a powerful militia where the protesters set it on fire. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because he wasn't allowed to talk to reporters. In Baghdad, pro-testers gathered again in the central Tahrir Square but there were no immediate reports of violence.

Fire danger for millions in CA

San Francisco: Millions of Californians were preparing to live in the dark again as the state's largest utility warned it may cut power for the third time in as many weeks because of looming strong winds and high fire danger. Pacific Gas & Electric will decide whether to blackout 8,50,000 homes and businesses in 36 counties for 48 hours or longer throughout the San Francisco Bay Area, wine country and Sierra foothills. The two previous shutdowns were done amid concern that gusty winds could foul or knock down power lines and spark devastating wildfires. Weather forecasts called for record strong winds to lash much of the region over the weekend, with some gusts hitting 85 mph. PG&E's warning came as firefighters battied flames in Northern and Southern California. A blaze destroyed at least six homes in the Santa Clarita area near Los Angeles and prompted evacuation orders for up to 50,000 residents, although some were allowed back home after Santa Ana winds began to ease.

As many as a million Chileans protested peacefully in Santiago in the biggest rallies yet since violence broke out a week ago over entrenched inequality in Chile.

Deja vu for Indians

T.S.S. SIDDHARTH | DC HYDERABAD, OCT. 26

When Chileans woke up on October 20, they were under their first curfew since 1987. The cascading effect began on October 4, when the government announced a hike in the subway and bus fares. This echoes happenings in India, where people are vociferous about sky-rocketing prices and the curb-ing of civil rights.

NAWAZ SHARIF SUFFERS ANGINA ATTACK

Lahore, Oct. 26: Former Pakistan prime minister Nawaz Sharif on Saturday suffered angina pain while undergoing treatment at a Lahore hospital, according to a media report. Angina is a type of chest pain caused by reduced blood flow to the heart. Sharif suffered angina pain in the morning while undergoing treatment at the hospital, Dawn News reported quoting Services Ins-titute of Medical Sciences Principal Dr Mahmood Ayaz. Ayaz refuted reports in a section of media that the 69-year-old Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) leader has suffered a heart attack. Earlier in the day, Sharif's lawyer Khawaja Haris claimed that the former premier had suffered a "minor heart attack" last night and that his "life is in danger".

Ayaz said Sharif's platelet count is now rising. He is administered around 16 injections of intravenous immunoglobulin (IVIg) every day. The Lahore High Court granted bail to Sharif, who is undergo-ing treatment, after being diagnosed with an acute immune disorder, which reduced his blood platelet count to dangerous levels. The three-time pre-mier was in Kot Lakhpat jail but early this month was sent to the custody of the National Acc-ountability Bureau (NAB), which is probing the Sharif family in the Chaudhry Sugar Mills case. Sharif's daughter Maryam Nawaz, 45, is also under treatment at the same hospital.

DIWALI IN U.S. IS RELIGIOUS LIBERTY: DON

Washington, Oct. 26: Sending Diwali greetings to Hindus, Jains, Sikhs and Buddhists, US President Donald Trump said that the observance of the festival of lights throughout America is an important reminder of the significance of the country's core tenets — religious liberty. A day earlier, Trump celebrated Diwali in the Oval Office with a small group of Indian-Americans.

'The observance of Diwali throughout America is an important reminder of the significance of one of our Nation's core tenets — religious liberty," Trump said in a statement ahead of the Diwali celebrations in India, the US and across the world.

"My Administration will continue to defend the rights enshrined in our Constitution that enable people of all faiths to worship according to their beliefs and conscience," he said.

"As Diwali commences, Melania and I wish those observing the Festival of Lights a blessed and happy celebration," said the President. For many Hindus, Jains, Sikhs, and Buddhists in the US and around the globe, this sacred period is an opportunity to commemorate the victory of light over darkness, good over evil, and knowledge over ignorance, he said.

"Throughout this holy time, members of these faiths engage in prayer, light diyas and lanterns, and partake in traditional feasts and other festivities with friends and family," he said.

AFC recognises

ISL as top league

New Delhi: The Asian Football Confederation (AFC) on Saturday recognised the Indian Super League as the country's premier competition while recommending the AIFF to "open a pathway" for two I-League clubs' entry into ISL by the end of 2020-21 season. The AFC's executive committee approved All India Football Federation's (AIFF) proposed roadmap for the country's sport during a meeting in Vietnam. In a release on Indian football's roadmap, the AFC stated, "In season 2019-20, the ISL will attain the status of premier league competition in Indian football. Another key recommendation by the AFC is to open a "pathway for two I-League clubs' entry into the ISL by the end of the 2020-21 season, subject to the criteria being fulfilled" The top continental body will allow the winning ISL club to represent India in the AFC Champions League play-offs, and the I-League winner will get to play in the AFC Cup play-off. — PTI

Los Angeles: The Nets, out to make Brooklyn the center of New York City's NBA universe, edged the Knicks 113-109 Friday, but not before a fourthquarter dogfight. Brooklyn's new star Kyrie Irving didn't match the 50 points he dropped in a heartbreaking season-opening loss to Minnesota, but his 26 points included a step-back three-pointer with 22.4 seconds to play that gave the Nets a 111-109 lead that they wouldn't give

Allonzo Trier's 22 points helped the Knicks erase a 19point deficit and take a threepoint lead with 3:41 to play. FOXES HUNT IN PACK

Manchester, Oct. 26: Manchester City closed the gap on Premier League leaders Liverpool to three points as Raheem Sterling inspired a 3-0 win over Aston Villa on Saturday. Pep Guardiola's side survived a tame opening peri-od as second half goals from Sterling, Kevin De Bruyne and Ilkay Gundogan put Villa to the sword. City's second successive league victory lifted them above Leicester into second place and put pressure on Liverpool to beat Tottenham in Sunday's clash at Anfield.

The only frustration for Guardiola was a red card for Fernandinho, who was dismissed after earning a second booking when he tugged at Keinan Davis in the 87th minute.

City were upset by Wolves in their last league fixture at the Etihad Stadium, but Guardiola had never lost back-to-back home league games as a manager.

Sterling's latest virtuoso display came just days after his second hat-trick of the campaign in City's Champions League demo-lition of Atalanta.

Earlier, Leicester City went into the Premier League record books on Friday with a 9-0 hammer-ing of Southampton that equalled the biggest ever win in the history of the division.

Ayoze Perez and Jamie Vardy both hit hat-tricks as Brendan Rodgers' side moved second with a huge win that continued their superb start to the season. The rout equalled Manchester United's 9-0 demolition of Ipswich at Old Trafford in March

Liverpool brace for Spurs battle

Liverpool, Oct. 26: The comprehensive midweek defeat of Red Star Belgrade raised hopes Tottenham Hotspur have turned the corner after a dismal start to the season but their revival will face a stiff test when they face Liverpool at Anfield on Sunday.

It will be the first meeting between the two sides since their confrontation in the Champions League final in Madrid in June, which since Jurgen Klopp's side have pushed on from their victory and took control of the early Premier League running. Tottenham coach Pochettino Mauricio admitted on Friday that defeat has weighed heavily on his players and has

LEWIS FIFTH IN SECOND PRACTICE

Mexico City: Lewis Hamilton's hopes of wrapping up his sixth drivers world title this weekend dimmed on Friday when he languished in fifth place behind Sebastian Vettel and Ferrari after second free practice at the Mexican Grand Prix. After topping the times in the opening session, the defending five-time champion was unable to resist the pace of his main rivals as four-time champion Vettel delivered a best lap in one minute and 16.607 seconds. Dhaka, Oct. 26: Bangladesh opening batsman Tamim Iqbal has pulled out of next month's Twenty20 and Test tour of India on personal grounds, the Bangladesh Cricket Board said on Saturday. The 30-year-old Tamim – Bangladesh's top run scorer in all formats had indicated he would likely miss part of the tour to be with his wife as they expect their second child, chief selector Minhajul Abedin said.

Bangladesh are scheduled to play three Twenty20 internationals and two Tests in India in November, starting in Delhi on November 3.

Tamim missed Bangladesh's recent tri-series Twenty20 tournament after a dip in form. The left-hander also struggled in the World Cup in England, where he scored only 235 in eight innings, a 29.37 average.

The 30-year later made interim captain for a three-match one-day international series in Sri Lanka in the absence of injured regular skipper Mashrafe Mortaza. But the leadership role failed to bring out his best. -PTI

Basel (Switzerland), Oct. 26: Roger Federer defeated Stefanos Tsitsipas in straight sets 6-4, 6-4 to make his 15th final at the Swiss Indoors on Saturday.

Earlier, Australia's Alex de Minaur survived a barrage of 26 aces from American giant Reilly Opelka to battle to a 7-6 (7/2), 6-7 (4/7), 7-6 (7/3) win the other semifinal of the Swiss Indoors.

The world number 28 is the first Australian to reach the Basel final since Mark Philippoussis finished runners-up in 1997

De Minaur, who measures up at 1.80m compared to Opelka's towering 2.11m, set up victory with a passing winner for four match points.

Opelka saved the first with an ace but was caught out on the second as his opponent sealed the win. Agencies
