National Conference president and sitting parliamentarian from Srinagar Farooq Abdullah for the first time met a 15-member delegation of Jammu-based party leaders at his "fortified" Gupkar Road residence in Srinagar on Sunday. In another significant development, the State administration has also given permission to a 17-member PDP delegation to meet party chief Mehbooba Mufti in Srinagar on Monday. Ever since these leaders were detained, they were not allowed to meet political delegations. Only their family members were permitted to meet them. The State administration had earlier given permission to the delegation led by former MLA and Jammu provincial president of the National Conference Devender Singh Rana to meet detained leaders. Before meeting Abdullah, National Conference leaders from Jammu also called on former Chief Minister and party vice-president Omar Abdullah at Hari Niwas guest house.

The delegation discussed developments in the State and upcoming local body polls during the separate meetings with the two leaders.

Tree cutting on; Sec 144 clamped; Prakash Ambedkar detained, released

PNS\PTI ■ NEW DELHI\MUMBAI

As the felling of trees in Aarey Colony in Mumbai continued amid prohibitory orders for the second day on Sunday to make way for a Metro car shed, the Supreme Court on Sunday constituted a special Bench for an urgent hearing against the cutting of the trees on Monday.

The SC set up a special Bench on the basis of a letter addressed to the Chief Justice of India by one Rishav Ranjan against the cutting of the trees. The top court decided to register the letter as a public interest litigation

Meanwhile, Dalit leader Prakash Ambedkar was detained when he tried to enter Aarey Colony where heavy security has been deployed at its five entry points, including the key connecting road near the Western Express Highway to prevent people from going towards the area and to avoid any untoward incident.

The police official said the situation was expected to become normal soon. Patrolling was stepped up in the tribal hamlets located in Aarey area and those found assembling there were being taken into custody, but later let off after proper verification, he said.

On Saturday, clashes broke out between the police and green activists who tried to stop tree cutting by Mumbai Metro Rail Corporation Ltd (MMRCL) in Aarey Colony, leading to arrest of at least 29 people.

The MMRCL started hacking trees from Friday night to make way for the car shed, hours after the Bombay High Court dismissed four petitions challenging the decision to allow felling of nearly 2,700 trees in the prime green lung of

Delhi Metro Ph-IV may give way to budget metrolite for 3 corridors

Centre's move aimed at cutting project cost by up to 40 per cent

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

In a move to reduce cost by 25 to 40 per cent compared to the existing Metro system, the Ministry of Housing and Urban Affairs is planning to introduce metrolite system for the remaining three corridors of Delhi Metro Phase-IV project. Top sources said a high-level meeting was held at the Ministry on September 26 to discuss the adoption of metro-three corridors of Delhi Metro Phase-IV project, which include Inderlok to Indraprastha, Lajpat Nagar to Saket G Block and Rithalaum bogey. With three non-separable coaches and low floor km. Senior officials of Delhi Metro, DDA and National Highways Authority of India attended the meeting.

Delhi Metro asked DDA to provide population details along the Rithala-Narela corridor and also the estimated population increase in the next 30 years for assessing the traffic projection of the corridor. Also, the DDA was asked to fund the project.

"The maximum operational speed of the Metrolite is 60 km per hour... In any case, even with failure of on-board signalling, the speed is restricted to 25 km per hour. The train is to accomodate around 300 passengers, sources said.

The Ministry has recently issued standard specifica-which will be developed on surface and elevated stretches with stainless steel or aluminiarable coaches and low floor height of about 300-3 the train's unit length should be of minimum 33 m.

The Ministry said the metrolite with a dedicated path will also act as feeder system to high capacity Metro.

If the road width in the cities does not permit to have both lines, one line can be provided on a particular road and the other line on a parallel road, said sources, adding that as an alternative, the entire road can be closed for road transport and only train can be operated with pedestrian plazas, as per proposals made by the Central Government.

The metrolite system will have shelter platforms but won't have AFC gates, platform screen doors, X-ray and baggage scanner.
"Ticket validators could be installed inside the metrolite train and shelter with NCMC/other ticketing systems," it said.

CNG, piped gas prices cut in Delhi, Noida

Drices of CNG and piped Cooking gas in the national Capital and adjoining cities have been cut after a 12.5 per al gas rates, Indraprastha Gas Ltd said.

CNG sold to automobiles has been reduced by ₹1.90 per kg in Delhi and by ₹2.15 per kg in Noida, Greater Noida and Ghaziabad, the company said in a statement. The new consumer prices will be ₹45.20 per kg in Delhi and ₹51.35 per kg in Noida, Greater Noida and Ghaziabad, it said. "The price of CNG being supplied by IGL in other areas shall remain unchanged as of now." Separately, through text messages, IGL informed its piped natural gas customers that rates have been reduced by ₹0.90 per cubic metres in Delhi and by ₹0.40 in towns of UP.

It also announced a new cashback scheme of ₹0.50/kg for CNG fuelling at IGL CNG stations through IGL Smart Cards from 11 am to 4 pm and from 12 am to 6 am.

Jobless two-timer poses as ISRO scientist, Netflix a/c helps wife nail him

PhD student in Delhi has Aalleged her husband had impersonated an ISRO scientist to marry her and she found about his lies after tracing his location to Gurugram through their shared Netflix account, police said on Sunday.

She also found that the man was already married to another woman, they said. The man and his family have been absconding after his lies were busted. In her police complaint on October 1, the woman alleged Jitender posed as an ISRO scientist before her family and married her.

He claimed he had an MTech degree from IIT-Kharagpur and showed them bogus documents to prove he entist, before joining ISRO, a police official said. The woman's family had visited Jitender and his family in Rewari before the marriage, he said. After the wedding in May, Jitender claimed he was going to join American space agency NASA to train as an astronaut. The woman's father dropped him at the airport, and after "returning" from the US, he told the woman he was going to Bangalore for work. But his wife found that he was using Netflix from a location in Gurugram, the officer said. When confronted, Jitender disclosed he was unemployed and was already married. He did not visit the US or Bangalore and was in Gurugram the whole time.

Sources said that it was also found that a senior bureaucrat is residing at bungalow number 23 in South Avenue. The bungalow was allotted to MI Shahnawaz, who died last year.

Sources said former MP Kameshwar Singh was found residing at South Avenue bungalow no 77. The said accommodation was allotted to an MP in 2014 who allowed Singh to stay as a guest. Now Singh wants to stay in this bungalow citing his poor health. Singh had won the LS polls in 1967.

In another case, Conard K Sangma, who is now the Chief Minister of Meghalaya, is seeking to retain a type VIII bungalow under the State Government quota, allotted to his father late PA Sangma.

"The eco-friendly puja also helps in developing environmental awareness among people. The puja this year centered around the theme of environment and adoption of environment-friendly practices that need to be encouraged. Apart from this, separate stalls are installed for prasad distribution to senior citizens and women. "Organisers have ensured that there was no interruption in distribution of Prasad to the devotees," said one of office bearers of the KMS, adding that many of the volunteers along with Delhi Police personnel have also been deployed to manage the crowd.

It is believed that Goddess Durga opens her third eye and showers blessings on her devotees on the auspicious day of Ashtami (the eighth day of

Our efforts have brought down dengue cases: Kejriwal

¬he Chief Minister of Delhi Arvind Kejriwal inspected his home on Sunday for stagnant water as part of '10 Hafte 10 Baje 10 Minute' campaign launched by him in the national Capital against vector-borne disease dengue.

"Checking my home another Sunday. I am happy that the cases of dengue have come down due to our efforts. As part of #10Hafte10Baje10Minute campaign, we will have to check our homes for a few more weeks as doctors said dengue cases will prevail till November 15," Kejriwal tweeted in Hindi.

The campaign from September 1 to November 15 to combat dengue has garnered massive support from public and several other well-known personalities across the country, including cricketers, Bollywood actors and famous journalists. Bollywood actors Emran Hashmi, Taapsee Pannu, Swara Bhaskar and filmmaker Mahesh Bhat, and several senior journalists, including Rajdeep Sardesai, Nidhi Razdan, Faye D'Souza, have supported the campaign. Kejriwal had said participation of these public personalities will inspire common people to take precautions in combating this vec-

The Chief Minister had also directed his colleagues in the Cabinet to work towards encouraging mass participation in the third week of the campaign.

At least 57 cases of malaria were reported in the last week of September, taking the total number of patients suffering from the disease to 304 this year. According to the South Delhi Municipal Corporation (SDMC), which tabulates the data on vector-borne diseases in the

BJP's new face from Badshahpur is MBA grad from US PARVESH SHARMA GURUGRAM

Ctate president of Bharatiya Janata Yuva Morcha (BJYM) Manish Yadav, who has been fielded from the Badshahpur Assembly seat, has set his priorities for the upcoming Haryana Assembly elections. An MBA degree from an American university, Yadav joined the BJP in 2009 and since then he has been working for the party. He is seeking votes on development.

Son of a social worker Ramanand Pradhan of Sikenderpur Ghosi village, Yadav pipped sitting PWD Minister Rao Narbir Singh to the post and was given party ticket from this high profile seat.

sprung a surprise in the distribution of tickets for the Assembly polls, by ignoring sitting Badshahpur MLA and PWD Minister Rao Narbir Singh and instead gave ticket to Manish Yadav. "It was not a surprise for me as Chief Minister Manohar Lal Khatter and senior party leaders, party workers gave me ticket from this seat. I hope sitting Badshahpur MLA and PWD Minister Rao Narbir Singh will support me in this election," Yadav said. Yadav had actively participated in party's every event in the past which including Maha Sangram rally in 2011, Himachal Pradesh election campaign in 2012, Swami Vivekanand Sandesh Yatra in 2013 and many others. In 2013 Yadav was selected as General Secretary of BJYM and worked for the party candidate during Lok Sabha elections of 2014 and 2019.

"Badshahpur constituency is a cosmopolitan seat and I along with party workers have visited around 84 villages. PWD minister Rao Narbir Singh and Haryana Government have worked extensively on developing infrastructure, water harvesting, plantation drive, public health and education need to be done in the region," Yadav told The Pioneer.

Yadav said the work on the Metro project which comes under Badshahpur constituency needs to be completed on a priority basis. " Providing basic facilities to the residents of new developing sectors located on Dwarka Expressway is my priority," , he added.
"I have worked hard in the organisation and I was given a party ticket because of the support of the party workers and people of Badshahpur. I would like to continue working 24x7 for the welfare and uplift of the constituency and its people," he said.

Remove sedition case against celebs: Parties, film bodies

New Delhi: More political parties and film bodies on Sunday demanded the withdrawal of the controversial sedition case filed against 49 celebrities after they had expressed concern over rising incidents of mob lynching in an open letter to Prime Minister Narendra Modi.

The CPI(M) and the Kerala State Chalachitra Academy joined the DMK, the Congress and others in condemning the filing of the case against celebrities like Aparna Sen, Adoor Gopalakrishnan, Ramchandra Guha, Mani Ratnam, Anurag Kashyap and Revathi.

The Communist Party of India (Marxist) said this reflects the "growing authoritarianism" in the country. "This is tantamount to punishing all those who have a dissenting opinion on the policies of the present Government. This is a complete negation of democratic rights and reflects the growing authoritarianism in the country," the Left party said.

The Kerala State Chalachitra Academy called it a "blatant violation" of the freedom of expression guaranteed under the Constitution.

The case was registered after a chief judicial magistrate in Bihar's Muzaffarpur passed an order on a plea by a lawyer alleging that the celebrities had tarnished the image of the country through their open let-

Asked about the case, Union minister Prakash Javadekar Saturday said the Government has nothing to do with it. "An individual went to the court which has passed an order."But Gopalakrishnan, one of the writers of the letter, has said the registration of a sedition case is a "matter of great concern".

The filmmaker cited an incident where, he said, a woman and her followers were found shooting at Mahatma Gandhi's effigy on January 30. 'None of them have been labelled as anti-nationals, with even some of them managing to become MPs.

On Saturday, DMK chief M Stalin, Congress leader Digvijay Singh, RJD national vice-president Shivanand Tiwary and the CPI had demanded that the sedition case be withdrawn.

A day before, the Congress party had urged "all right-thinking progressive" parties to collectively "fight this grow-ing spectre of authoritarian-

. "Where is this country headed? People of India need to seriously think, need to seriously apply their minds to what is happening to this country in the past 120-odd days ever since the NDA-BJP Government assumed office, Congress spokesperson Manish able. "How can seeking to uphold the basic tenets of the Constitution like tolerance and communal harmony be construed as anti-nationalism," he asked in a statement The CPI said it firmly stood for independent judiciary but cases like this were ound to strengthen the apprehension that judicial systems are used to harass and intimate the critics of the present Government.

"Adoor Gopalakrishnan is someone who has always upheld human values through his movies. The act of registering a case against those who had expressed concern over the growing action against humanity does not go well along with a civilised democratic society," the Kerala Chalachitra Academy said.

RJD's Tiwary, who was formerly with the JD(U) headed by Bihar Chief Minister Nitish Kumar, said in a statement that historian Guha had raved about Kumar as a leader fit to become the prime min-

"It is ironical that Guha finds himself booked for sedition in the very State ruled by Kumar. I would urge Kumar to seek legal opinion and get the case annulled," he said. PTI

6 architecture firms race to be consultant in redevelopment of Central Vista, Parliament

Six architectural firms have submitted in bids to become consultants for the architectural and engineering planning for the Centre's ambitious plan to redevelop the Central Vista and Parliament, and develop a common Central Secretariat for ministries. No foreign firm has submitted consultancy bid in the project.

According to the sources in the Union Housing and Urban Affairs Ministry, six Indian architectural firms have submitted bids for the project. "We were also expecting foreign architectural firms to submit bids as it is a very big project of the central Government. However, no international firm has submitted bids for it," the sources said.

On September 2, the Ministry had invited request for proposal (RFP) from national and international design and planning firms for the ambitious project of the Modi Government. The last date of submitting bids was September 30.

The Central Public Works Department (CPWD) has invited Indian and international firms to bid for the project, which paves the way for the redevelopment of the exist-ing Parliament building or construction of a brand new, potential demolition of Central government offices to make way for a common Secretariat for all ministries and the revamp of the 3-km Central Vista that stretches from Rashtrapati Bhavan till India Gate. While the Government had not spelt out which buildings would be demolished and which would be refurbished, Housing and Urban Affairs Minister Hardeep Puri had said Parliament and North and South Blocks would not be torn down, but could be renovated and/or used for other purposes, like to house museums.

The sources, however, said that in the RFP, there is also a provision according to which selected architectural firms can associate sub-consultant, including foreign firm, which has domain specific specialisation during the execution of the ambitious project. There was no immediate reaction available from the Central Public Works Department.

Among six Indian architecture firms, Hafeez Contractor is learnt to have submitted bids for the ambitious project.

A committee of experts will now evaluate the technical proposals submitted by firms. Financial proposals of only those bidders qualifying in the technical proposal will be opened.

The Government has so far not publicly shared the estimated cost of its project.

According to the plan, the government would redevelop the 3 km-stretch of the Central Vista spanning from Rashtrapati Bhavan to India Gate. The Ministry said the entire project will be completed by 2024.

Terming it a "dream pro-ject" of Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Union Housing and Urban Affairs Minister Hardeep Singh Puri had recently said that redevelopment or development of Parliament would be done by

For the redevelopment of Central Vista and development of Common Central Secretariat for various Ministries, several buildings like hastri Bhawan, Transport Bhawan, Udyog Bhawan, Nirman Bhawan and Krishi Bhawan may be razed.

However, the Government will take a final decision on it only after designs to be submitted by architectural firms are selected.

On September 18, Puri had said buildings that had been built in 1960s and 70s should have been torn down many years ago. "Something went wrong there," Puri had said. Using cricket terms to take a dig at earlier Governments, the minister had said, "Either we (CPWD under previous governments) lowered the standard or we took eyes off the ball. We wanted to spin the ball but something else happened and in the process it was a

Only 75 MLAs asked questions in 13th Legislative Assembly of Haryana: ADR

PNS NEW DELHI

As Haryana is ready to polls on October 21, the Association for Democratic Reforms (ADR) has analyzed the performance of MLAs of the 13th Legislative Assembly, found that out of 91 MLAs analysed, only 75 MLAs have asked questions in the 13th Legislative Assembly of Haryana

If asking questions is the parameter of performance, Congress MLA from Tosham constituency Kiran Choudhry has fared on top with 225 starred questions. She is closely followed by Indian National Lok Dal's Naina Singh Chautala from the Dabwali constituency. In fact in the top ten performer, in terms of asking questions, there's only one MLA from the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) - Prem Lata.

There are 16 MLAs who haven't bothered to ask even a single question, be it about the state or raising issues pertaining to their respective constituencies. Congress' national face Randeep Singh Surjewala and BJP spokesperson Captain Abhimanyu are among them.
"I don't know why they are

States criticise NEP on financial ambiguity

PNS NEW DELHI

The New Education Policy (NEP) has come under the scrutiny of the stakeholders including States who have criticised it for ambiguity in financial management. The issue came during the meeting of the of the HRD Ministry's Central Advisory Board of Education (CABE). Education Ministers and representatives of states attended the meeting.

According to the minutes of the meeting, the States like Delhi, Bihar, Āndhra Pradesh and Karnataka flagged the funding issues in proposed NEP by the HRD Ministry, sayproposals but no "financial plan of action for implemen-

The panel led by former Indian Space Kesearch Organisation (ISRO) Chief K Kasturirangan had submitted the draft of the new NEP to HRD Minister Ramesh Pokhriyal 'Nishank'. The draft was then put in public domain to seek feedback from various stakeholders and over two lakh suggestions were received by the HRD Ministry about the same. Draft NEP has since seen three HRD Ministers-Smriti Irani, Prakash Javadekar and the incumbent Ramesh Pokhriya Nishank.

WHO to launch '40 seconds of action' campaign on World Mental Health Day

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

With World Mental Health Day round the corner, to be precise on October 10, the World Health Organisation (WHO) is all set to launch "40 seconds of action" campaign to raise awareness of the scale of suicide around the globe and the role that each of us can play to help prevent it. The campaign is based on the observation that every 40 seconds, someone loses their life to suicide.

Globally, close to 800 000 people die by suicide every year. Furthermore, for each suicide, there are more than 20 suicide attempts. Suicides and suicide attempts have a ripple effect that impacts on families, friends, colleagues, communities and societies, as per the WHO statement issued recently. Stating that suicides are preventable, the WHO notes that much can be done to prevent suicide at individual, community and national levels.

"Much can be done to prevent suicide," said an official

The global health agency has recommended four key interventions which have proven to be effective. These are restricting access to means, helping young people develop skills to cope with life's pressures, early identification and management of people who are thinking about suicide or who have made a suicide attempt, keeping follow-up contact in the short and longer-term. The WHO is also working with the media to ensure responsible reporting of suicide.

Collectively, WHO's approach to suicide prevention is known as LIVE LIFE (leadership, interventions, vision and evaluation). This approach is the basis on which comprehensive national suicide prevention strategies should be developed, said the official.

Patna waterlogging exposes sewerage failure, graft: Tejashwi

Leader of Opposition in Bihar Assembly, Tejashwi Prasad Yadav, has attacked Bihar Chief Minister Nitish Kumar for the recent waterlogging in the city, saying it not only exposed the failure of the drainage system but also the corruption involved in it. Yaday also termed as 'shameful' Kumar's blaming of 'nature's fury' and "Hathiya Nakshatra" (constellation) for the deluge.

"The entire city has been inundated with rainwater. It is a complete failure of the drainage system and tells about the huge scam (involved in it), Yadav, the former chief minister, told reporters here on Saturday. per hour at Sripalpur, Patna District Magistrate Kumar Ravi said. It has seen a fall of 90 cm since Saturday, he added.

Meanwhile, the death toll increased to 97 from 73 in the past 24 hours, as people lost their lives in the affected districts due to incidents of drowning, electrocution, house collapse and falling of trees, a disaster management department release said. The number of dengue cases, too, have seen a sharp rise post the heavy downpour in the state capital, a release issued by the health department said.

A total of 409 cases of the vector-borne disease were reported in Patna between January to September 27, it said, adding the number jumped to 640 till October 5. Indian Railways aims to complete pending projects by 2022

PRAMOD KUMAR SINGH KATRA (JAMMU)

With 'Vanda Bharat' Express having a smooth run between New Delhi to Karta in Jammu region, the Indian Railways has set its eyes on completing all its pending projects by 2022, the 75th year of Independence. Vande Bharat express that was launched by the Home Minister Amit Shah on Thursday (October 3, 2019), is the second such super fast and modern train to run on the rail tracks, the first one being the New Delhi to Varanasi route, launched some eight months ago by the Prime Minister Narendra Modi.

Success of Vande Bharat coupled with people's enthusiasm towards modern equipped trains with less travelling time, has also provided option for the ning privately operated Tejas express trains. According to the Railways, 40 new Vande Bharat trains will start running to different places. This is a priority area and different aspects of these new trains and routes are being worked out.

Minster of Railways Suresh C Angadi who travelled all the way from New Delhi said, Prime Minister Narendra Modi has directed the Indian Railways to complete all its pending projects and works by 2022, the year in which India would be celebrating 75 year of Independence. All our energies are focused on speeding up work on the ongoing projects and also review projects that have not met the deadline. We are modernizing passenger ser-

Freight Corridor, electrification of railway tracks, doubling of tracks are some of the major projects that have been running behind the schedule. "We have reviewed the progress of these ambitious projects and are determined to complete it by 2020", Angadi said.

Talking to The Pioneer, the minister said, "While fast tracking railway projects, the safety of the passengers will be accorded topmost priority. We want to provide world class, safe and less time consuming rail services to the passengers "Earlier, there were only government channels. But later private channels were also allowed to operate", Angadi said adding that private operators and Indian Rail Catering Tourism Corporation (IRCTC) are the new channels that have been brought into to make more competitive and also run advanced trains suc-

400 kms an hour, the minister said that Railways are aware of this fact and are making sincere efforts and effecting suitable changes to run high speed trains. "Trains in our country are not running even at 160 kmph and a lot of work needs to be done before high speed trains could be launched", he added. 'Modernization of the countrywide rail network is a challenging task and it requires a large scale investment. We are open to private operators and agencies interested in investing in developing rail infrastructure and running high tech trains", the minister said.

"Lucknow-New Delhi and Mumbai-Ahmadabad that witness heavy traffic have been awarded to the IRCTC for operations while Railways has initiated the process to award new train routes to the private operators on inter-city services on 14 routes. Apart from these, there are 10 overnight and long distance services and four suburban services that will see private operators entering into the fray", said a senior official of the Índian Railways. There is another significant plan by the Railways to corporatize the Rae Bareli Modern Rail Coach Factory (RCF) in Uttar Pradesh. It will be followed by the corporatization of other RCF units at Kapurthala and Chennai. "Plan is afoot to create a Public Sector Unit (PSU) as that would invite investment from the public and business houses as well. This is still in initial stages but will be set rolling once the concept note prepared by the Railways in this regard, gets the Union Cabinet's nod", said the official

'PM committed to improve infrastructure in J&K' The launch of Vande Bharat

Express between New Delhi to Katra is aimed at catering to the pilgrims going to Mata Vaishno Devi Shrine. It has also to do with the decision of the Union Cabinet to do away with Articles 370 and 35. Developing rail network in Jammu and Kashmir is top of the agenda of the Government. "Prime Minister is committed to improve the infrastructure and further develop railway network in Jammu and Kashmir, Vande Bharat Express will not only provide comfortable and fast service to the pilgrims to Vaishno Devi shrine, it will also boost the economy of the state", said minister of state (Railways) Suresh C Angadi.

Why we need Bangladesh

With China breathing down on an energy-strapped Dhaka, the rant on infiltrators here is not taking ties to a new level

n the face of it, Bangladesh Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina assured India of respecting the organic nature of historic ties and soothed anxieties over the National Register of Citizens (NRC) exercise in Assam. But by foregrounding economic cooperation, one that spans connectivity, investment, power and infrastructure projects in her home country, she has also redefined the rules of bilateral engagement. The new reality has put us in a competitive slot visà-vis China, which has become one of the top trading partners of Bangladesh over the last couple of years. And in a multilateral world, where each nation is negotiating deals most beneficial to it and will not just pay obeisance to history, we can no longer afford to touch a raw nerve. Nepal and Sri Lanka have shown how smaller nations gain in the competitive powerplay and easily rotate their axis. And China is doing that successfully, wooing the smallest of nations with infrastructure aid, creating debt economies and buying support. To that extent, the difference of opinions on NRC did raise concern in Bangladesh. Particularly the idea that all "infiltrators" were "Bangladeshis", repeatedly in speeches by politicians, has not gone down with it. Besides, the divergence between Home Minister Amit Shah's remark that all infiltrators would be sent back to Bangladesh and External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar's assurance that the NRC blacklisted won't has left our neighbouring nation confused. While many understand the difference between the political necessity of posturing and the diplomatic value, the overtly aggressive Hindutva messaging hasn't quite sat easy with Bangladesh. In fact, the usage of words like "termites" to describe Bangladeshi infiltrators is being seen as insulting in a nation which India helped liberate in 1971. There is no agreement on sharing waters of the Teesta. India's silence on the forced exodus of Rohingyas from Myanmar, which Bangladesh has been drumming up support against, has rankled, too.

A certain stagnation on these fronts has put the relationship under stress and strain, it being assumed as India taking a neighbour for granted. But it must be said that Bangladesh is a key pillar in Prime Minister Narendra Modi's neighbourhood diplomacy, what with it being a littoral nation and crucial to our role in the Indian Ocean. China has been eyeing the Chittagong port for quite a while for its maritime Silk Road. Bangladesh has also stood apart from most Islamic nations by supporting India's call for a "zero-tolerance" approach to terrorism when Modi and Hasina met on the sidelines of the United Nations General Assembly (UNGA) in New York. It supported India's decision on the abrogation of Article 370 as an internal matter. It is key to the Modi government's push on the Bay of Bengal Initiative for Multi-Sectoral Technical and Economic Cooperation (BIM-STEC) fora. And with Nepal and Sri Lanka having drifted towards China, we need Dhaka. In fact, Nepal has stepped up anti-India rhetoric quite a bit recently, even calling for reducing dependency on us. China has been quick to tap into the acute shortage of power in Bangladesh and has already taken up two mega power projects, hoping to enhance its presence in the energy market there. And while India is also a player in the power sector, it is difficult for Bangladesh to overlook China given its energy demands. In this respect, Sheikh Hasina has done a tight-rope act of equidistance so far, timing her visit to India at the right juncture and categorising China as an economic and India as a geo-political partner. But translating that reality on the ground could prove to be a tricky business. China doesn't invest unless it serves the interest of its Belt and Road Initiative, and Bangladesh may not be in a position to avoid a debt trap and not appear beholden to an economic imperialist in the region. It could very well find itself in a sticky situation if under debts, it is expected to take a stand in China's diplomatic standoffs with India. Which is why Sheikh Hasina is also hoping for widening India's ambit of economic cooperation beyond core sectors, calling for investment in the knowledge and tech economy. If the Modi Government wants to make a success of its Act East policy, then Bangladesh will be a cornerstone of that project. But it needs that reassurance not silently, but more volubly now.

The bank problem

Until now, the scale of NPA crisis has not impacted average bank account holders. The PMC scandal may change all that n the face of it, the Punjab & Maharashtra Co-operative Bank Limited (PMC) scandal is much smaller than the one that the devious diamante duo of Mehul Choksi and Nirav Modi orchestrated on the Punjab National Bank. It is even smaller in scale when compared to the bad loans that have engulfed the State Bank of India, which it forwarded to the collapsed airlines — Kingfisher Airlines and Jet Airways. But given the stupendous nature of the loans involved and the modus operandi used — which meant almost all the bank's assets were linked to a single developer that the Wadhawan family promoted, HDIL — it seems difficult to believe that such a scam could have been concealed or orchestrated to the extent of allegedly having 21,000 bogus account holders. The scale of the loans to the developer, which constituted over 70 per cent of the bank's loan book, has meant that the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) has effectively put the bank under its guidance. It also put a cap on customer withdrawals — first to ₹1,000 and then after mounting pressure from account holders to ₹10,000 and then to ₹25,000. Yet, thousands of account holders are left holding the can. Thousands of customers are eyeing lakhs of rupees of savings, for marriages, education and even houses, all of which are locked up. It even appears that before the clampdown, several high-profile account holders made massive withdrawals. This made matters worse. Undoubtedly, the RBI could have handled matters better. The ham-handed nature of the way things were communicated by the Central bank made customers of other banks jittery. With the news of Yes Bank facing troubles, thanks to its bad loan problem, online banking channels of most banks collapsed over the festive period as customers rapidly moved to withdraw money or transfer it to what they consider "safer banks." RBI Governor Shaktikanta Das has said that no banks are in trouble and that he would not let any cooperative bank collapse. But consumer confidence in banks is at an all-time low. To be fair, there has not yet been a "run" on the banks in the traditional sense of the word. However, the fallout of the PMC scam will be felt for a long time. One good thing is that possibly, there will be a crackdown on co-operative banks. It has been suspected that these banks, with their lax standards, have helped funnel money for politicians. It is almost certain that some big political names will tumble out of the PMC scandal, even though PMC bank managing director, Joy Thomas, is trying to take all the blame.

Learning does not just mean textbooks, transaction and evaluation. It has to also achieve an attitudinal transformation, needed to ensure the very survival of humanity couple of decades ago, during an international conference on education and teachers' development, a much-admired and sought-after speaker summarised learning, its transfer, acquisition of knowledge and its utilisation in four simple queries: Who to teach; whom to teach; what to teach and how to teach. As a new entrant in the area of teaching, switching over from research to teaching Physics, I was listening with rapt attention to every word uttered by the speaker. I recalled how all those, who were attempting to extend and expand education to one and all in the early 50s and 60s, had to regularly respond to a serious question: Why should I teach my children? The most serious question, however, was: What purpose will it serve if we send our girls to schools? The toughest poser from several communities before educators in the mid-20th century was: Why educate? Recalling such experiences, I asked the speaker whether his articulation would appear more comprehensive if "why to teach" could also be included. To my surprise, the speaker and others agreed with me and included it. Most participants from developing nations had similar experiences that a large number of people were reluctant to send their wards to schools. Human traits of curiosity, exploration and creativity have suffered invasions of ignorance but have continuously scaled greater heights in exploring the secrets of nature.

Education is a process that organises, synthesises and harmonises such human endeavours and infuses the requite dynamism to enhance the process of civilisational advancement. Knowledge quest remains an eternal human pursuit. As human beings advance ahead in their comprehension of the secrets of nature, new avenues and challenges emerge before them and that requires reshaping of education policies. India is already in the process of doing so. But education policies must be based on sound epistemological base and articulated in the idiom of the day. The deliberations of the conference mentioned above were attempting the same: Know the learner, study, analyse and envision needs; evolve the right and appropriate pedagogy; practice the transaction strategies and prepare the learner to face life and above all, add to the acquired knowledge and put it to the right use. Teachers, researchers and all those engaged in the process of transfer and creation of new knowledge and skills are categorised as knowledge workers in current parlance. This tells us that we all are living in a "knowledge society that concentrates on conscious of this responsibility to prepare knowledge workers.

We acquire and continue to receive more knowledge; we transmit it to the new generation and expect them to excel us; we expect the younger lot to contribute to knowledge creation and its utilisation. There are two basic premises that characterise the Indian tradi-

Yavadjeevait adhiyate viprah the wise continue to learn throughout life — and sarva bhuta hite ratah — strive for the welfare of one and all. The Quran directs to acquire knowledge even if one has to travel to China face arduous roughness and toughness. Ilm (knowledge), I am told, is the second most used term in the holy book after the "Lord." Indian civilisation has given the highest respect to gyan (knowledge) and the guru, the giver of gyan who leads an individual learner and takes him/her into the realm of the unknown to unravel secrets of the universe and beyond — from the darkness of ignorance to the light of knowledge.

Nothing, it is said, is accepted by a thinking, analytical and critical mind without adequate scrutiny; posing queries; and searching for answers. It applies to knowledge, too. Here, I am reminded of a quote by Bertrand Russell: "Man has no chance of survival if knowledge remains only knowledge. But if we could dom, one would not only survive but would be able to ascend to greater and greater heights of achievements." In fact, Russell is making the distinction between gyan and vivek (discretion). He emphasised on the power of ideas and imagination when he expects to conform to society. The unreasonable man expects society to conform to him. Therefore, all progress depends on the unreasonable man. To illustrate why Russell is orrect, I will cite an example. Think of Hiroshima and Nagasaki and what happened there. Modern scientific knowledge was at its highest peak human beings could prepare an atom bomb, a great scientific and technological achievement. Those involved were the most brilliant of minds on earth, admired for their unparalleled dedication and devotion to their profession. They were distinguished scientists, academics, scholars, explorers and innovators. There was no suffocating hierarchy between them, they respected each other and mind power ruled there, in Los Alamos. They were linked to their peers elsewhere, with riders, of course. They were, however, expected to hurry up as the enemy elsewhere was also keen to reach the same destination before the other. Scientists were assigned to prepare the bomb but its use and misuse wrested with political power wielders. Knowledge was there, its possible usage in human welfare was clear before scientists. Even the general public was aware of it.

wisdom — buddhi (wisdom) and vivek - and shamed humanity Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Clearly, education does not just mean textbooks, transaction and evaluation but much more. It has to achieve an attitudinal transformation, needed to ensure the very survival of humanity. When Swami Vivekananda said that education without character building is meaningless, he was only expressing how it is imperative on part of education systems and policies to ensure "manmaking education." This is what India's new education policy must aim at. It must attempt to articulate how to move ahead towards that goal.

Education is very rightly termed as "a necessary utopia." There can be no limit to expectations from education, educational systems and educated human beings. At the current juncture of human civilisation, characterised by the "pace of change", the guiding factor must be nurturing and nourishing institutions, right from initial stages, must realise their responsibility to offer free passage to curiosity, creativity, natural flight of ideas and imagination.

Unfortunately, our systems have become so prescriptive and restrictive that all these four factors are impeded at every stage, rather everyday. Our system is characterised by debilitating school bags, innumerable textbooks and a series of weekly tests, board examinations with total focus on marks. Policy-makers usually work around these aspects, suggest some half-hearted changes and are often bogged down by the system to suggest only such changes that they consider pragmatic and practical. In such a process, there is little scope to encourage, inspire and nurture the faculties of imagining, thinking, reasoning, expressing, creating, inventing and postulating. We all know how these are systematically impeded, often beyond repairs. A nation actively engaged in inclusive growth and development cannot allow the erosion of its cognitive capital. The visionary in Vivekananda had exhorted us to realise that "education is a manifestation of perfection already in man", which clearly indicated that every individual could be nurtured to discover the "treasure within" and unearth as much as possible out of inexhaustible treasure. His prescription was: "The brain and muscles must develop simultaneously. Iron nerves and intelligent brain — and the whole world is at your feet."

Over the last seven decades, we have moved ahead only in bits and pieces in bringing quality educational reforms. Now that elementary education has practically been universalised, at least in enrollment and participation, we must focus on transforming every learner "from a person to a personality." That could also be comprehended in terms of the famous Gandhian articulation of "bringing the best out of body, mind and spirit." Once all the three get the proper environment to flourish and the interest of the child watched precisely, the right direction could be delineated on the path of vitality, including selfassurance and confidence.

Yes, teachers would have to accept what Sri Aurobindo had taught us: That nothing can be taught and that mind must be consulted in its development. Once education puts the learner on the path of his/her own liking and special interest, it would be possible to expect, in the words of Vivekananda: "The whole gist of this teaching is that you should work like a master and not like a slave; work incessantly but do not do a slave's work through love. That is what education must achieve: Every learner internalises the values of truth, peace, non-violence, righteous conduct and love.

Preserve language

Sir - The Vice President of India, M Venkaiah Naidu, recently underlined the importance of preserving local languages. He is reported to have said that when a language dies, culture, traditions and customs associated with it are also lost. His statement is important, especially since it comes at a time when the present ruling dispensation seems to be keen on pushing the case to declare Hindi as the official language of the country

Language truly is the lifeline of culture, tradition and customs of people living in a particular region and the best way to preserve or promote any language is to use it extensively. Naidu exhorted people to start using their native languages at home and in the community. In my opinion, the promotion of the mother tongue should begin at the primary school level. But the recent comments of Union Home Minister Amit Shah have stoked tension. "One nation, one language" would slowly kill India's regional languages.

While preserving local languages is important, it must also

The situation cannot be very different in other parts of the country.

Credit must be given to the Modi Government for launching the Swachh Bharat mission that led to the building of more than 110 million toilets in a span of just five years. But all these low-cost toilets cannot be said to be conveniently located, accessible, selfcontained with essentials like toilet seats and tapped water. It should not be forgotten that many people in our country are still homeless. Going forward, a lot more needs to be done on several fronts to make India fully free from open defecation. FIRSTCOLUMN

Time to take the winnings and go

Protesters in Hong Kong have won the withdrawal of the extradition law but their other demands will never be met by the Communist Party of China

fter the 17th consecutive weekend of increasingly violent protests in Hong Kong, the first protester was wounded by a live bullet last week. The 18-year-old student, Tsang Chikin, one of a group of about a dozen students attacking a policeman who had become separated from his comrades, was shot in the chest as he struck the man with a metal pole. He is expected

A hundred other Hong Kongers, civilians and police were treated in hospitals on the same day for injuries incurred during what the Beijing regime calls "riots." The violence has grown over the months and sometimes that is an accurate description of what is going on in the streets. Even if the protesters are in the right, they are definitely a lot less non-violent than they were at the start.

What is remarkable (though rarely remarked upon) is the restraint shown by the police, who, although employed by the Hong Kong city Government, ultimately serve the repressive dictatorship in Beijing.

It's only relative restraint, of course — we are not talking about the Royal Canadian Mounted Police or 'kindly British bobbies' here — but during months of escalating violence, they have still managed not to kill anybody.

Even last week, when the rest of China was marking the 70th anniversary of the People's Republic, the protests in Hong Kong continued and nobody died.

To understand how remarkable this is, ask yourself this: How many protesters would American police have killed by now if equally violent protests had been taking place in the streets of a major US city every weekend for the past four months?

This is not proof of how nice China's rulers are. It's evidence of how worried they are. They dare not make too many concessions to the protesters but they want to avoid using major force against them — doing another Tiananmen Square massacre, so to speak — because they think the price would be very high. They

When Britain returned the colony of Hong Kong to China in 1997, it was China's main financial window on the world. That's why it was granted a special status in China ('one country, two systems') for the next 50 years. It has free speech, the rule of law, all sorts of privileges that do not exist in the rest of China — but ultimately it must bow to Beijing.

Two decades later, its status as a global financial centre remains a major asset for the regime but there are red lines that President Xi Jinping will never cross, like letting Hong Kong people choose their own Government in a free election. This is now one of the protesters' demands (although it wasn't at the start) but it simply is

The Communist Party of China rules through carefully chosen, mostly non-Communist puppets in Hong Kong but it does rule. As Carrie Lam, Hong Kong's Chief Executive, explained in a private meeting with business leaders last month, her freedom of action is "very,

She got into trouble in the first place by putting forward a new extradition law that would have allowed Hong Kong residents to be tried in Chinese courts, where accused people have few rights and the conviction rate is 99 per cent. She probably did it against her own better judgement but the orders came from above.

When the public pushed back, sensing that this could be the beginning of the end for Hong Kong's relative freedom, Lam probably wanted to drop the matter but it took her months to persuade Beijing to let her do it. In June she shelved the law, in August she said it was "dead" but only in early September did she actually get Too little, too late! By then the protests had escalated far beyond the specific law to sweeping demands for democracy in Hong Kong. Most people outside China will sympathise but it cannot happen. The communist regime's first priority is its own survival so it will not permit such an example to flourish on Chinese soil.

The protesters have won what they originally came out for: The withdrawal of the extradition law. Their other demands will never be granted because they imperil the ultimate authority of the communist party. It's time to collect their winnings and step away from

If they don't, Beijing will ultimately crush the protests no matter how much economic and reputational damage that does. In August it doubled the number of troops it keeps in Hong Kong under the guise of "rotating" the garrison: The replacements came in, but the others didn't actually leave. Sooner or later, if things go on like this,

A new pattern of progress

It is now being universally acknowledged that if we want to move the needle on tough problems, reusing the same old frameworks is not good enough

ne of the most dispiriting features of the modern development agenda is the strong and pervasive influence of elitism in policy circles. There is a mountain of scholarships and a huge circuit of academics and researchers wracking their brains and pontificating. Despite all this, the results are far from impressive.

It is now being universally acknowledged that

It is now being universally acknowledged that if we want to move the needle on tough problems, reusing the same old frameworks is not good enough. One must understand that it is an arduous task to discover and practice true development, one that can be transformative for people.

There is common strand in the conventional advancement peredigms. That the execution is rigged.

advancement paradigm: That the system is rigged against people whose condition it promises to transform. Perhaps this is the reason why we see constant resentment among commoners against "the system" because people expect it to be a harbinger of societal progress. Instead, it has been organised to siphon off the gains of development to the elite. There is firm opinion on both sides of the ideological divide that the system is broken and it needs to radically change. The people who are most likely to lose from genuine social change the elite — have placed themselves in charge of this change, often with the passive assent of those most in need of it. They have devised myriad subterfuges to show they are changing things on the surface while at the same time ensuring that in reality, nothing changes and the status quo is very cleverly achieved. The culture of the rich is inward-looking and defensive. The whole apparatus that it has erected isolates it from the majority.

The development community: Most advancement academics and professionals are researchers with little real-world experience. The underdeveloped and marginalised communities are highly stratified, with each one different from the other and need experts who understand the subtle nuances of the dynamics at play in these communitiatics of the dynamics at piay in these commu-nities. Intellectual sophistry cannot become a sub-stitute for local-level social engineering.

They stress world goals over the autonomy of societies to choose their own path, implying thereby that there is only one correct answer. They do not tolerate dissent and also don't want to grant freedom to individuals and societies to choose their destinies. They see poverty as a purely technological problem, to be solved by engineering and the such as economics, politics and sociology.

In a system of multiple elites, no major party has a strong incentive for ensuring that growth is inclusive. Those left behind by the progress train are now seeking alternatives. There is a tribe of development professionals — mostly locally bred intellectual activists — who question the relevance of Euro-US advancement policies. They're not just talking about individual, misguided projects but the entire model. They believe that aid merely exports those countries' notions of poverty, consumerism and wealth to traditional communities, creating an unhealthy dependency. They argue that such aid does more to boost the donors' economies than to improve the lives of the people it is assumed to help. This development fraternity, which represents an alternative ideology, feels that in order to check inequality's current trajectory, ordinary people need to take control, as opposed to being on the receiving end of economics. The elite community seems constantly and restlessly in search of a singular approach. The flaw in this system is that each new approach NEED TO BE fails to break out of the underlying technocratic and specialised paradigm. The contrast between India's economic might and the reality of its crumbling betterment sectors — with India ranked among the lowest in the Human Development Index — points to what is wrong with our paradigm.

What are the ends of development?

To grow what is called the Gross

Domestic Product (GDP) or to enhance people's capabilities and widen their choices and freedom? It is now being increasingly recognised that growth is, in fact, rather weakly correlated with indicators of broader social inclusion, indicators of broader social inclusion, such as employment and inequality. History proves how much good can come from individuals who both bear the costs and reap the benefits of their own choices when they are free to make them. A committed practitioner must use his the covern patural instincts to bring his/her own natural instincts to bring together authentic rural voices in unfamiliar milieus.

nity can come out only with time. It takes time for trust to build between them and the outsider, so the latter can peel away the layers and approach the truth. Even though the poor constitute a vast majority of Indian voters, they have been shut out of public discourse by being trapped in a system that is rigged against them.

We must understand that there is no precooked blueprint ready to be replicated. Individuals can make a difference in fighting poverty when ways are found to institutionalise creative ideas. But along a factory model, the replication of successful models continues to be the guiding mantra of development programmes.

We must also recognise, when examining specific experiences with replication in mind, that the personal charisma and passion of inspirational leaders cannot be transfused. The imposition of unwilling leaders has been the bane of most developmental programmes. Role of professionals: Poverty duction is not a discipline. You can't just get somebody from a university who has done a PhD in poverty reduction. Nor is there a talisman for eradicating it. Leadership in rural development programmes is a clinical art and people need the experience to learn it. From their own experience, veterans can spell out the ingredients one may need to be successful. But the practitioners will still have to work out their own recipes for blending these ingredients in the right proportions. There is so much cultural diversity even in neighbouring villages that a blueprint for one village may need a drastic change for the next.

Often professionals show disdain for people living in low-income communities or show pity for their misery but there's rarely a sense of equality or connectedness with them. It is only through engagement with these communities that a development professional may gain a correct perspective. This will also these communities. It will deepen our understanding of human nature, social structures and change and help us to engage better with them. People gather courage by coming together. Collective risk is both possible and incredibly powerful because nobody is fighting alone. Individuals alone cannot make a difference but together, they can. It is time we place human agency at centre stage and stress the complementary roles of different institutions (economic, social and political) in enhancing effective freedoms.

Consultants have for long been the key people in policy mechanics and there are many instances of glaring overdependence on them. But it is necessary to moderate the reports and prescriptions of consultants with the realities on the ground. For some, the old adage about teachers applies: "Those who can, do. Those who cannot, consult." Elitism has given rise also to smug techno-utopians, who see potentially revolutionary possibilities in the proliferation of cell phones and other shiny gadgets that appear and vanish with the rapidity of fashion. The promises are very seductive. Why is the international development community having a love affair these days with the mobile phone and other new technological apps? The reality is much harder than we imagine. It is easier to spread technology than to bring about extensive change in social attitudes and human capacity. It is easier to purchase a thousand computers than to provide real education for a thousand children. It is much less agonising to run a text-messaging health hotline, than to convince people to boil water before drinking it. The "technological layer" is only another tool — the means to an end — and not a solution in and

We must not forget that we are working with a constituency which is both we cannot hear it. The poor are rarely visible because the well-off urban developers have little interest in their lives. In a country with more poor people than the 25 poorest African countries combined, this apathy is a failure not merely of intellectual curiosity but of moral values.

In the new development agenda, decision-making cannot be played out in the same way that boardroom economists have perceived the poor: As desperate citizens who need to be rescued by the rich. Boardroom elitism will have to understand what people are doing to improve their human conditions rather than hastily proposing templates that serve the interests of the privileged.

The politics of climate strife

The effects of climate change have aided environmentalism as an idea to enter international political and economic discourses. But perhaps the most alarming aspect is how it might actually be causing civil unrest and violence within countries

n September 20 this year, environmental activists and sympathisers in over a hundred countries participated in an international "climate strike." Protesters — including in Pakistan - demanded urgent action to stem the tide of climate change, which according to environmentalists, is being caused by human negligence and by various economic and developmental policies being implemented by Governments and business enterprises across the

There is now sufficient scientific data to prove that indeed, the average temperatures of the planet have been rising, causing drastic climatic changes, namely global warming and its cascading effects. This has aided environmentalism as an idea to enter international political and economic dis-

As a concept (and a global movement) environmentalism puts the blame of global warming on the reckless exploitation of the Earth's natural resources by Governments and business ventures. This claim often draws a sharp reaction from those who believe that climate change is a natural occurrence.

However, due to the noticeable impact of the current bout of climate change, more people are now responding to the concerns raised by environmentalists than ever

To me, perhaps the most alarming aspect of climate change is the one that many environmentalists have not yet delved deeper into, that is how it might actually be causing civil strife within countries. The June 2019 edition of the academic journal, Nature, published a study that demonstrated how droughts, floods natural disasters and other climatic shifts influenced approximately 20 per cent of armed conflicts over the last cen-

The study concluded that in the coming years, one in four armed conflicts around the world will be caused by global warming. It gave the examples of civil wars in Syria and in various African countries, thus reinforcing the findings of a March 2015 study conducted by America's National Academy of Sciences. Both the studies noted that increasing temperatures trigger unpredictable climatic shifts, which result in failed crops. This forces farmers to migrate to urban centres. Cities that have already been experiencing rising populations and a resource crunch do not react kindly to such migrations. This causes political/religious/ethnic/tribal tensions, whereas catastrophes such as droughts and flooding in the rural areas are exploited by warlords to assume power. Such a situation can explode and has exploded into full blown civil wars. But there is still more to this phenomenon than just rural-to-urban migration. And the impacts in this context are not always immediate. Take for example, the case of the Kajaki

struction and the devastation that it caused is discussed in some detail in BBC's 2015 documentary, Bitter Lake, made by the brilliant British documentary filmmaker Adam Curtis; and in the 2010 book, Environmental Histories of the Cold

In the 1950s, King Zahir Shah of Afghanistan initiated a developmental programme in his country to modernise its agriculture and economy. This also included the construction of dams. On the advice of American experts, one such dam was to be built in the country's Helmand province.

American engineers and geologists arrived and began to construct the dam — the Kajaki Dam. Construction work displaced hundreds of peasants and herdsmen. In 1953, as the dam neared completion, some observers warned that it may cause waterlogging and salinity in the surrounding areas, sullying the fertile soil of the area. But the warnings were not heeded and the problem not addressed. According to Curtis, the then Prime Minister, Daoud Khan, encouraged the expansion of the dam because being a staunch Pashtun nationalist, he wanted more Pashtun families to settle in Helmand that borders a Pashtun majority area of Pakistan's Balochistan province.

By the time Daoud toppled King Zahir in 1973, the salinisation problem caused by the dam had compounded. Despite the availability of irrigated water, the soil became problematic to harvest cash crops such as cotton.

Instead, it became perfect to grow another cash crop poppy. The economy of the area thus began to revolve around poppy, which is used to prepare the highly-addictive narcotic heroin. For this very purpose, Helmand became extremely important to warlords fighting Soviet forces in the 1980s and then against the fanatical Taliban regime.

Curtis describes Helmand as one of Afghanistan's most violent and corrupt regions, mainly due to the poppy that is grown there in Ironically, despite the fact that the Taliban regime attempted to eradicate poppy farms in the country, after the regime was removed in 2002, Taliban insurgents regularly interact with Helmand's poppy growers and corrupt Afghan officials to sustain the area's poppy farms (irrigated by the dam). The poppy crop sustains the growers, enriches the officials and helps finance the Taliban's insurgency against US forces.

The dam thus became a manmade environmental disaster that instead of enhancing a country's agricultural fortunes, became the harbinger of corruption, violence

The m-cap of ITC advanced ₹5,344.62 crore ₹3,16,069.96 crore. In terms of ranking of top-10 firms, RIL retained its top position, followed by TCS, HDFC Bank, HUL, HDFC, Infosys, ITC, Kotak Mahindra Bank, ICICI Bank and Bajaj Finance, which pipped State Bank of India to acquire the tenth position.

Auto sector cuts losses as Govt schemes, discounts attract buyers

"Depreciation benefits and discounts have helped a little bit in increasing sales in September in comparison to August," said Sridhar V, Partner, Grant Thornton India

"New introductions have also been instrumental in the slight recovery in passenger car and two-wheeler sales in September 19 over August 19, while the YoY numbers indicate the extremely cold nature of the market. The market is yet to see the recovery mode set in."

Additionally, the immediate price reduction due to lowering of effective corporate tax rate to 25.17 per cent (inclusive of all cess and surcharges) from 30 per cent for all domestic companies has helped to deepen discounts and drive-in some extra sales numbers.

In August, Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman announced several measures to boost the sector, including lifting a ban on purchase of vehicles by government departments, and allowing additional 15 per cent depreciation on vehicles bought till March 2020 among others. The decisions are likely to sustain the trend for a few more months.

According to Fitch Ratings Associate Director Snehdeep Bohra, the recent interest rate cut and lower base effect will help stabilise the YoY auto sales in October.

"What is really important is to pass on the interest rate cut to the customers. New launches ahead of the festival season, including BS6 compliant versions, are also going to support the sales momentum," said

However, some industry insiders contend that mitigated decline in sales on a MoM basis has been caused due to wholesale adjustment, since dealerships were over-stocked for the last couple of months. Effectively meaning that the dealers stopped buying from OEMs to reduce the stock pile-

The auto industry is facing a severe demand slowdown on account of high GST rates, farm distress, stagnant wages and liquidity constraints.

As per the Society of Indian Automobile Manufacturers' (SIAM) August sales figures, the overall sectoral offtake in the domestic market plunged 23.55 per cent to 1,821,490 units, from 2,382,436 units sold during the corresponding month of the previous year. September sales results are awaited.

'Sluggish digital payment growth in small town India'

IANS NEW DELHI

Digital payment has been one of the key features of the Government's 'Digital India' initiative and online payment platforms and services have indeed spread themselves in the country. However, its penetration and acceptance in the tier-II and tier-III cities still face some obstacles, market players said.

According to Credit Suisse report, India's mobile payments market is likely to touch $1 trillion by 2022.

Post the demonetisation, whereby Prime Minister Narendra Modi on November digital transactions shot up tremendously. The Unified Payment Interface (UPI) also has been accepted well.

Despite the rise in the number of platforms that enable businesses to offer online payment experience to their customers regardless of location, instrument or mode, still there is a long way ahead as the penetration has mostly been in tier I cities.

RBI expects the country will have five million active point of sale (PoS) machines by the end of 2021. However, to achieve it, there are several hurdles to be crossed.

"Although the awareness strengthened further to ensure consistent reach and penetration across the Tier II and Tier III cities along with rural areas," says, Sunil Khosla, Head Digital Business, India Transact Service Limited.

According to Manish Patel, Founder and CEO of Mswipe there is a need for easy and cost-effective payment acceptance tools for small and medium enterprises, micro-merchants, especially in tier-III and III cities as a segment, is still under-penetrated.

"They need acceptance tools that are cost-effective and easy to enable. In many cases, it is cumbersome for a micro-merchant to keep tabs of different

RAKESH KUMAR, chairman and managing director of NLC India Limited, says that the company is taking self-sustaining, motivating and revenue-generating initiatives to enhance the quality of life of its employees and stakeholders In coversation with JETENDER RAWAT

When I joined the organisation back in 2012, I saw that there was a big potential to leverage the debt equity ratio for its advantage. Therefore, we formulated an ambitious growth plan. In 2015, we set a target to enhance our power generation capacity. It was less than 3,500 megawatt at that time and we dreamt of reaching beyond 20,000 megawatt. We had set the standard high but we were also confident enough to achieve it. Since then we have been progressing well. We have been able to leverage our debt equity ratio and use it

☐You have completed more than a year as the chairman of the company. How would you describe your journey?

I joined on September 28 last year. It has been a wonderful experience since then. We have built a strong connection with the stakeholders and our team is motivated to take up higher goals. Our people are able to show positive results in many spheres. For example, our latest 709 megawatt solar power project is progressing very well. Our team is working at the site and our SDOs are committed to their job. We are very much satisfied. We reached out to Andaman and Nicobar for completion of unique batterybased solar power project of 20 megawatts and it was completed in a record time of two-anda-half-months from October 2018 to December 2018. We have an ambitious project of 1980 megawatt coal-based power plant in Ghatampur near Kanpur district, which is also progressing quite well. Now we are target to commission the first unit by November 2020. There are three units of 360 megawatt. We are hopeful that we will be able to complete that project on time. We are also proactively resolving the issues which are being faced in between the work. We are working on 1,000 megawatt lignite-based power plant in Neyveli. This is going to be the first-of-its-kind as it's the first time in India. The efficiency is such that the 1,000 lignite-

□Could you elaborate on the growth plans based power plant can replace the 600 megawatt one (this implies that the quantity of lignite which was used for 600 megawatt will be sufficient for 1,000 too). It has been a great experience overall.

> □Sustainable development is an important part of your approach at NLC. Are there any new programmes in the offering?

Sustainable development is the need of the hour, especially in lignite and coal mining. So we are focussing on the mined out land by reclaiming its bio fertility. To do that, we are deploying various techniques, one of them being Israeli technology. It has an excellent impact. If we talk about its advantages, it is multi-dimensional. First, we are able to fulfill the legal and moral obligations. Second, we feel this plays a huge role in providing employment opportunities. Third, the surplus land which was lying idle is deployed to generate revenue which in turn reduces the cost of mining Fourth, we are able to develop the skills of people who are otherwise marginalised. The farmers or workers do not have enough resources, technology and risk bearing capacity. All these measures enable them to take a leap forward in agriculture and Neyveli has a long history of dealing with environment very friendly. If you see our afforestation and mining activities, we have been very conscious to the environment. In fact, if you see the township from a certain height, you will not find a single house there. You'll see a green carpet. We are continuously focussing on the plantation and reclamation of land in a big way. Every year the effort is much bigger and turns out to be effort is much bigger and turns out to be better. In future, we are sure that we will be able to show it to the whole world how mining, especially of lignite and coal, can be viewed as environment friendly rather than being hazardous.

□ Are you planning to expand to other that we'll be able to share.

We are focussing more on solar projects because we have tasted it's success after having completed 10 megawatt and 130 megawatt in Neyveli, 400 megawatt in Tamil Nadu (now 709 megawatt in Tamil Nadu). We are proceeding in terms of solar and we have been mandated by MNRE (Ministry of New and Renewable Energy) for ultra-mega solar power park in Tamil Nadu. So we are actively discussing that with the State Government. They are also very keen for the project. This will be the first solar park by NLC (if happens). We are very hopeful.

In 2015, there was a 32-day strike by workers. How did it affect the company and how did you handle it?

It all depends on how we interact with the workers, how much expectations we fulfill, how do we involve them in the main process and make them our important stakeholders. It is not always necessary to give them rewards financially. Involving them at every step of decision making matters. They should feel like they are an important part of the company. We always try to motivate. There are regular discussions on various topics and even on the pay many awards in the past. How do they matter to you? Awards are just the side results of our activities. They are not

☐You have received so something that we measure my work by. Prizes are just the fruits borne out of the dedication and the hard work that we put in.

□What is your expansion plan? Is NLC planning to acquire coal mines abroad?

During the recent visit to Russia, where our Prime Minister, Narendra Modiji also visited, he motivated us. And we found some opportunities after discussing with various organisations that we can try to have some ventures either alone or with Coal India Limited. Progress is going on some fronts but we are yet to get concrete results. Only after

☐How did you manage to get approval for mega projects in record time and start

Are you talking about the Talabira mines? Well, yes, we got the approval for Talabira mines really fast. I would definitely credit the team. We had to work with the government departments, take them into confidence and share all the details. These measures help to bring all the stakeholders on the same plat-

□Any projections for the year 2019-20...

The year 2019-20 has been a challenging one so far. Majorly because of the replacement of our oldest power plant in Neyveli. The work is going in full swing. In 2018-19, we reached all-time high capex and this year, we are targeting to reach the level of more than 8,000 crore capex, which means that we want to take the excess equity out of operations which is to be replaced by the interest bearing working capital loan. Therefore, financial impact on the profitability is the natural thing to happen. But we are not disappointed, we know that we are investing for the future and it is a transition phase only. Our solar and Talabira mines project are in progress and I have faith that it will soon start generating revenues.

□Are there any plans to promote wind energy projects in Rajasthan?

Although we had plans for setting up 250 megawatt of wind power project but so far we have not got any great success on that front after completing 51 megawatt in Tamil Nadu. We will be keenly watching for the opportu-

□Any other important insights on your work that you would like to share...

We are open to all the areas. We are trying to take initiatives which should be self sustaining, motivating, revenue generating, bringing excellence and quality of life to our employees and other stakeholders. We want to move forward not only taking our employees or contract workers into the mainstream but also the project related people for which we are trying to do something bigger and better. Recently, after signing the MoU with Annamalai University, we could secure 50 per cent seats for project related people in the diploma course for which we constructed the building and infrastructure. Now the course is almost completed. We have decided to engage those diploma holders as a trainee in our mines for a period of two years. We will be ensuring that they gradually attain excellence in the mining skills and are able to get the employment at their own or in our

State Dept will follow law: Pompeo

Washington: US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo has said that the Department of State will follow the law in the impeachment inquiry against President Donald Trump and defended his boss' attempts to push Ukraine to investigate former vice president Joe Pompeo's remarks came after the State Department missed a Friday deadline to comply with a subpoena issued by House Democrats to hand over documents related to the department's dealings with Ukraine and Trump attorney Rudy Giuliani.

Democrats in the US House of Representatives are examining whether there are grounds to impeach Trump, a Republican, based on a whistleblower's account that said he asked Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskiy in a July 25 phone call to help investigate Democratic political rival Biden.

Pompeo, who is travelling to Greece, told reporters that the department had sent a letter to Congress, "which is our initial response to the document request.' "We'll obviously do all the Pompeo alleged that the previous Obama administration was not responsive to the documents being sought by the US Congress and its committees.

I remember once when I was on that side and we were looking for documents, I remember precisely how long it took for those documents to come across. We're going to beat that. We're going to be more responsive than the Obama administration was in the years preceded this particular congress," he said. Responding to a question on appropriateness of the investigation against Trump, Pompeo alleged that "there's clearly politics involved" in it.

Pompeo supported the administration's demand that Ukraine open inquiries into alleged corruption that could target Biden's son and alleged interference in the 2016 US presidential election

The Trump administra-tion, he said, was incredibly focused on making sure that they worked with Ukraine in a way that was appropriate. PTI

Lawyer says representing 'multiple' whistleblowers

Washington: A Washington lawyer said on Sunday his firm is representing "multiple" whistleblowers related to an original abuse of power accusation that triggered the impeachment investigation of President Donald Trump.

The lawyer, Andrew Bakaj, represents the anonymous intelligence official who accused Trump of using the powers of his office to pressure Ukraine's new president to investigate political rival Joe Biden and his son Hunter.

"I can confirm that my firm and my team represent multiple whistleblowers in connection to the underlying August 12, 2019, disclosure to the Intelligence Community Inspector General. No further comment at this time," Bakaj said on Twitter. AFP

Iraqi PM pledges reforms to calm angry protesters

Government announced a series of reforms early Sunday after an "extraordinary" session overnight in response to sweeping anti-government rallies that have left nearly 100 dead in less than a week.

The United Nations on Saturday urged an end to vio-lence in Iraq, after five days of protests calling for the Government to resign. Confronted by its biggest challenge since coming to power just under a year ago, Prime Minister Adel Abdel Mahdi's cabinet issued a decree including 17 planned reforms, such as land distributions and increased welfare stipends for needy families.

The decree ordered construction of 100,000 new housing units. In September, local authorities launched demolitions of houses in informal settlements, home to three million Iraqis across the country.

In response to staggering outh unemployment, which has reached around 25 per cent according to the World Bank, the Government said it would create large market complexes and boost benefits for those without work.

Scuba diving is a detox: Parineeti

Actor PARINEETI CHOPRA is a scuba diving enthusiast and she says that the water adventure sport is like a detox programme for her that lets her forget all worries.

She says, "What I like the most about diving is that there is no phone network under water. Nobody can call me, even my manager cannot call and talk about work."

She adds that she used to hear that scuba diving is like a meditation. Some people say it's as good as a drug, and that it's the most peaceful thing.

Her love for scuba diving came to the fore at an event where she was announced as the brand ambassador for Adex India-Mumbai Dive show Ocean Festival.

Ravana effigy makers around the city are doing their bits to save the environment during its burning on Dussehra, discovers TEAM VIVA while PANKAJ KUMAR captures it

Jying in various colours—
pink, green, orange and silver with paper-mache and stout bamboo frames— are the heads of Ravana in Titarpur, Dwarka and Tagore Garden. It's that time of the year again, when people mark the victory of Lord Rama over the ten-headed demon by burning his effigies. While some associate Dussehra with the battle in Ramayana, others do so to commemorate goddess Durga's victory over Mahishasura. One can witness grand celebrations taking place in every street and people huddling together to enjoy the day with much colour and splendour. Well, the tradition of burning his effigies has stayed for years and continues to excite people — not just the viewers but the creators as well.

Explaining the process of building an effigy, Dhyanand, who hails from Dwarka Shree Ramlila Society, says that the height of an effigy might vary, depending upon the customer's demands. "The framework is built with bamboo sticks, which are bound using steel wires. This is followed by wrapping the frame with old cloths on the main parts to give it a support and later with khaki paper. Coloured papers are then pasted through glue or often painted and decorated once it dries," he tells us.

Well, celebrations and festivals cannot be stopped, but necessary steps can be taken to minimise the pollution caused. Over the years, many parts of the country have resorted to celebrating the festival in a greener way. Here is an example to sustain the nature's health during festivities: A laser light show that depicts an animated story of Ravana dahan, in which the laser can replace the traditional bow and arrow to burn the effigies, thus minimising the pollution and maximising the fun. This could also be educative for kids, informing them of the importance of preserving nature when abiding by the nation's culture and traditions.

-TECH TALK —

Slash the emissions:

Big Tech's eco-pledges are not slowing its pursuit of Big Oil comes questions on a range of topics. Less than a week after that exchange and days before a planned worldwide protest over climate change, Microsoft nnounced yet another major deal for its Azure cloud computing platform — this time with Chevron and oilfield services giant Schlumberger. The timing of the announcement ahead of the climate protest and United Nations climate action meetings angered some environmentally-minded Microsoft workers and caught he attention of outsiders.

"It is unconscionable that amid global climate protests, tech giants like Microsoft are announcing major partnerships with Big Oil," said Democratic presidential candidate and Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders, in a tweet that coincided with the September 20 global climate strike. "We must hold them accountable, demand they break ties with the fossil fuel industry, and move rapidly to sustainable Echoing that message was a small group of Microsoft employees who carried cardboard signs to a lunchtime protest that day outside of Microsoft's neadquarters in Redmond, Washington.

No Azure For Oil," said one of the signs. After months of employee activism, Amazon CEO Jeff Bezos said he was pushing his company to the forefront on sustainability, committing it to have 100 per cent of its energy use come from solar panels and other renewable energy by 2030.

But he also defended Amazon's work with the oil and gas industry, arguing that "we need to help them instead of vilify them." Some experts say AI and cloud services could actually play a role in curbing emissions. Denying cloud computing services to the oil and gas industry would do little to address the bigger problem of the world's ongoing dependence on fossil fuels, said Aseem Prakash, director of the Center for Environmental Politics at the University of Washington.

We would not want to collapse the fossil fuel industry," Prakash said. "We would want a soft landing." If anything, he said, an oil company's shift to another company's cloud platform may have some environmental benefits because it is more efficient than running its digital operations on its own servers. Driving down costs could also help open the door to investments in other, less polluting methods for generating energy.

It's less clear whether AI is mitigating pollution or worsening it. In their pitches to work with oil and gas companies, cloud providers such as Amazon and Microsoft have boasted of advanced machine-learning tools that can sift through huge troves of geologic and seismic data to help make decisions about where to extract resources. IDC oil analyst Gaurav Verma said AI is a critical technology for oil and gas companies that want to learn from that data to study oil reservoirs or predict when maintenance is needed on a pipeline.

Earlier this year, ExxonMobil struck a deal to tap into Microsoft's technology to capitalise on the shale oil boom in Texas and New Mexico. Microsoft has said that real-time data collected from a region spanning hundreds of miles would enable ExxonMobil "to make faster and better decisions" on drilling and well completion and support production growth by as much as 50,000 oil-equivalent barrels per day by 2025. An unsigned statement from Microsoft's protesting workers said they've been "made complicit" by the company's role in warming the planet. "Microsoft makes millions of dollars in profits by helping fossil fuel companies extract more oil," the statement said. But it's not clear if tech giants are actually helping that much — in part because they may be overstating their own role in transforming Big Oil with AI.

'The sundae they're selling is the cloud," said Chidambaram, the Accenture analyst. "The cherries they're putting on it is the analytics." Chidambaram said that's because oil industries are still cagey about sharing what they know about underground reserves and don't want third parties analysing that data.

Chidambaram said in the long run, however, AI could actually help meet climate goals. "Data can be used in many ways," he said. "It's about how it's being WOUNDS

A FIGHT FOR DREAMS

NASEEMA, a resident of Akbarpur village, Bihar, has become an inspiration for the native women as she fought against all odds to educate her daughters. By SADAF ZAREEN

t is ironical that the society reveres and worships goddesses, and at the same time, subjects women to all forms of oppression. They have been looked at as the weaker section. However, women like Rani Laxmi Bai, Razia Sultana, Aruna Asif Ali, Kiran Bedi, Pratibha Devi Singh Patil, and thousands of other women are examples that women are not meant to be incarcerated behind the walls of their homes as they have the same courage as men. If they can be loving and compassionate, they could be fierce and protective too.

One such example has been set by Naseema, a resident of Akbarpur village in Rohtas district of Bihar, who has not only faced the sting of being married and widowed at an early age, but has also educated her daughters, leaving behind the orthodox views of the society she lives in. All women who consider their life as a failure, can learn from her struggles.

Being the only sister among seven brothers and belonging to a poor family, Naseema was 12 when her family married her to a man twice her age. She did not have the slightest inkling about her marriage then. Her illiterate parents had clinged on to old customs and traditions. She says, "I was very happy when I became a bride because I did not know what marriage was. I just knew I was getting a lot of new clothes and jewellery as wedding presents. a dark middle-aged man in the room. I got very scared. I was not aware about marital relationships.

A few months after the marriage, Naseema got pregnant. She came to her mother's home during delivery time, and refused to go back to her husband's house. Soon after she gave birth to a daughter, her husband passed away in a railway accident. Prior to his death, she had been preparing herself mentally to go back to her in-laws.

By the time she turned 18, her family married her off to Mohammed Abdul from Palamu, Jharkhand. She would look after the family with the income generated from her sewing and embroidery work. As Naseema grew older, she became a more sensible individual. Life was good with her daughter and husband at her new home. She gave birth to two more daughters. But fate had a different plan. Her husband's health began to deteriorate, and the responsibility of the family fell upon her shoulders because he couldn't work. Soon, she gave birth to her fourth daughter, even though the family expected a son. Gradually, her husband's health worsened, and in a few years, she was widowed once again.

Naseema returned to her parents' home with her daughters. People made jokes about her fate. Her parents also died in quick succession, but she did not give up on life. She started sewing clothes in order to nurture her four young daughters. "Being widowed twice and with the death of my parents, I was devastated. But I was determined to give my daughters a bright future," says Naseema. Though, she was illiterate, she always knew the importance of education. She took it upon herself to educate all her daughters under any circumstances.

brothers got married, it became difficult for Naseema and her daughters to continue living with them because of lack of space in the house. She started living in a hut outside a relative's house. She somehow eked out a living for herself and her daughters by stitching people's clothes. Naseema was elated and relieved when a social worker and a local teacher of the village, Zarina Khatoon, helped her get a cook's job in a government school. The teacher also arranged for her daughter's education and their uniforms. Her employment at the school not only enabled her to generate more income for her family, but it also helped her take care of her daughters'

For a woman, living alone in society has never been easy. Naseema had to endure physical and mental torture at every step of her life. But she fought against all odds and inspired her daughters to live with self-respect. She, who has steadfastly stood up against such hardships, has become an inspiration for other women in her village today. Despite being illiterate, she has proved that by fighting against the stereotypical thoughts and restrictions that the society imposes on women, they can still move ahead in life by fighting against the struggles and emerge victorious.

Ravana, still alive?

The fact that every year people burn effigies of the ten-headed demon points to the subtle truth that he still exists in our conscience and the evil continues to grow, says Rajyogi Brahmakumar Nikunj Ji ussehra, also known as Vijayadashami, is one of the most important Hindu festivals celebrated in various forms across the world. It has a deep spiritual significance as it marks the victory of Goddess Durga over the demon Mahishasur. On this day, people also burn effigies of Ravana, who, according to Hindu mythology, was the demon king of Lanka. The myth goes that Ravana had abducted Sita, the consort of Lord Rama. Supported by an army of monkeys, Rama defeated Ravana and rescued Sita. The killing of Ravana by Rama is hence celebrated.

Dussehra stands for dus (ten) + hara (conquer). Ravana is known to be a demon with ten heads to symbolise the conquest of ten vices, of which five are in men and five in women. The five vices are — lust, anger, greed, attachment and ego. And the word Vijayadashmi means the tenth (dashmi) day of victory (vijaya) of Rama over Ravana, which is symbolic of the victory of virtue over vices by men and women who follow the path of self-purification to attain spiritual perfection.

It is celebrated on the tenth day of the month of Ashwin according to the Hindu lunisolar calendar which corresponds to September or October of the Gregorian calendar. The first nine days are celebrated as Maha Navratri or Sharada Navratri and culminates on the tenth day as Dussehra.

Ravana represents all that is evil and Rama symbolises everything that is good. Usually, people burn the effigy of a person whose actions they dislike. The fact that every year people burn larger and larger effigies of Ravana points to the subtle truth that he is still alive and the evil continues to grow in

From reading to cats to taking the dogs for a walk and cleaning kennels, here is how you can volunteer at animal shelters to help them tle to do. Enrichment activities to keep them occupied include making and delivering foodpuzzle toys, reading to them, sitting and petting them, or taking them on walks.

Volunteer dog walkers will probably be trained in leashing dogs, getting them in and out of their kennels, and managing them around other dogs. At Maricopa County Animal Care in Phoenix, volunteers with the Petite Pet Project simply sit in a room with dogs and give them small treats and toys, letting the dogs socialise at their own pace. "I love seeing them learn, it's okay to come out. The socialisation of the dogs, getting them used to touch is like a dog therapy. You're committed to help the dogs find their best self," says volunteer Julie Jo Hughes.

Cats might need help getting acclimated to a shelter so they won't be nervous when potential adopters come by. Just by checking in on and petting cats, volunteers can help them learn to be calm during interaction with humans. "The more comfortable a cat is with a person approaching the cage and putting their hand in there, the more likely they are to get adopted," says Katy Hansen with the Animal Care Centers of New York City.

Fostering an animal can be great for someone who loves having a pet in the house but can't guarantee a forever home. usually start with a conversation with the coordinator about the level of involvement and commitment they're willing to make. Fosters can take a dog for the afternoon, the weekend, or until they are adopted.

Pearson says the shelters homes admit around 9,000 animals a year, and the constant noise and activity can be stressful for dogs. Having a quiet home to escape for the day can help the dogs to relax.

Shelters also use fosters to house animals recovering from surgery or illness. "They'll recover faster in that home than in the kennel," Pearson says.

She adds that fostering kittens or puppies, while timeintensive, makes it more likely that those animals will be adopted quickly "because they've been now handled by people," and "socialising pets is a huge thing."

CLEANING

An important part of making shelter animals happy and healthy is keeping kennels clean.

"We all have to be willing to do some dirty work, because with over 700 dogs in our care on a daily basis, there is a lot of cleaning to do," says Samantha Wessel, volunteer engagement coordinator. A clean blanket for each animal means a lot of laun-

Terri Sharp, a retiree who has volunteered at the Phoenix shelter for more than two years, starts her day checking on all the linens in the kennels.

She says, "We also mop and thrive. We want to give them every opportunity to succeed."

DONATIONS

Shelters always need donations, so consider setting up a collection box or fundraiser for much-needed goods. Consider bringing in a box to work or school and collecting toys, blankets and other items.

"They can be new or used and washed," says Hansen. "The only thing we can't take is open or expired food or treats." Lots of shelters have online wish lists too.

Another way to help from home is by joining a shelter's social media team, sharing or helping to run social media pages. "Answering questions people post, writing bios is very helpful," says Hansen. Volunteers can design flyers, create templates and share ideas. "Good flyers can get shelter pets adopted quickly," says Karen Hirsch of Lifeline Animal Project in Atlanta.

One must understand that we would be able to celebrate it only when all the human beings become pure, that is, when the vices of lust, anger and greed are completely eliminated from human minds so that Ravana, symbolic of evil, is defeated forever. According to the study published in the Journal of Developmental Origins of Health and Disease, West Virginia University researcher Amna Umer explored how low birth weight correlates to cardiovascular risk factors in childhood. The research team assessed data of 20,000 fifth-graders born in West Virginia. They discovered that children with a low birth weight are more likely to exhibit cardiovascular risk in fifth grade. "It was thought that risk factors for cardiovascular diseases were only observed in adults, but in the past few years we've seen that they are observed in children also." Umer said.

DROPS IN INCOME CAN HARM YOUR BRAIN

young adults who experienced annual income drops of 25 per cent or more might be more at a risk of having thinking problems and reduced brain health in middle age, a study said.

"Our exploratory study followed participants in the US through the recession in the late 2000s when many people experienced economic instability. Our results provide evidence that higher income volatility and more income drops during peak earning years are linked to unhealthy brain ageing in middle age." said the study's lead author Leslie Grasset from the Inserm Research Centre in France.

The study published in the journal Neurology involved 3,287 people who were 23-35 years old at the start of the study and were enrolled in the Coronary Artery Risk Development in Young Adults (CARDIA) study, which includes a racially diverse

AIR POLLUTION CAN MAKE YOU AGGRESSIVE

Researchers have found that breathing polluted air does not only make you sick, but it could also make vou more aggressive.

The research team from the Colorado State University found that strong links between short-term exposure to air pollution and aggressive behaviour in the form of aggravated assaults and other violent crimes across the continental US.

The results were derived from daily Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) crime statistics and an eight-year detailed map of daily US air pollution. "We're talking about crimes that might not even be physical, you can assault someone verbally when you're exposed to pollution, you become more aggressive, some things that may not have escalated, do escalate," said the study's researcher Ander Wilson. For the study, researchers cross-analysed three highly detailed datasets of criminal activity, county-level air pollution wildfire smoke plumes from satellite imagery.

'Shami has mastered art of reverse swing'

Mohammad Shami's mastery over reverse swing has been one of the big plus points for the Indian team while playing on slow unresponsive pitches, feels India opener Rohit Sharma.

"We have seen him (Shami) in these conditions not just today but earlier also. I still remember our debut together in Kolkata (2013), where the pitch was not exactly like this but on day four and five, it was slightly lower and slower," Rohit said.

"He knows how to bowl on these pitches, gets reverse swing straight into play once he knows there is some help on offer," said Rohit.

Executing reverse swing is easier said than done, feels the stylish Mumbaikar.

"It is not easy to bowl when the reverse is happening. You need to pitch in the right areas, need to make sure the ball is just around the off-stump and it comes and hits the middle-stump. He has mastered that art now, bowling with the old ball and getting it to reverse."

The conditions in Visakhapatnam were ideal for him as the Bengal speed-ster got the ball to reverse both ways.

"Yes these type of conditions are pretty ideal for him. He makes them play all the balls and it is tough for the batsmen on a pitch like this, where the ball was doing something from the cracks. It keeps you in the game.

"Batsmen doesn't know which way it will reverse swing. I would say he has mastered how to bowl with the old ball," Rohit made a dream start as a Test opener and shattered multiple records. However, he is not getting ahead of time and said it is still early days for him.

'That communication (on opening) between management and myself happened long time ago that I might have to do past at some stage. So for the past two or three years I was prepared for it mentally.

'Whenever I was not playing a Test match, in the nets I was batting with the new ball trying to be ready if the opportunity come. It's a great start and I have long way to go. It's not the end, it's the start. Good things are about to follow," said Rohit.

"All those things are nice to happen along the way but have said many times I am not here for records. I just want to enjoy the game. I know it might be boring but that is what it is.

Record for most sixes PTI VISAKHAPATNAM

The opening game between India and South Africa broke the world record for the most number of sixes in a Test match on Sunday. A total of 37 sixes were hit in the match with South Africa's Dane Piedt registering the record-breaking 36th the fifth day. The earlier record for the most sixes was set during the 2014 New Zealand versus Pakistan Test played in Sharjah. That match saw a total of VADODARA: Pacer Sandeep Sharma wrecked havoc with a career-best figures of 7 for 19 as Punjab beat Haryana by three wickets in a low scoring Elite Group B match of Vijay Hazare. Sharma alongisde Sidharth Kaul (3 wickets) saw Haryana get bundled out for a paltry 49 runs in 16 overs. Opener Nitin Saini top-scored for Haryana with 22 runs while Sumit Kumar chipped in with 13. In reply, Punjab made hard work of a simple task. They lost wickets at regular intervals with pacer Ajit Chahal getting early breakthroughs for Hayana. The duo of Chahal 4/32 and Harshal Patel 2/12 claimed six wickets but the total tuned out to be too low in the end. Opener Abhishek Sharma stood his ground and anchored his team to victory. He was the top scorer and remained unbeaten at 22.

JAIPUR: Abhinav Mukund (84) and Baba Aparajith (87) shone as Tamil Nadu thrashed Tripura by 187 runs for its sixth straight win in Group 'C' of the Vijay Hazare. After posting an imposing 315 for 8 in 50 overs riding on impressive knocks by Mukund and Aparajith, Tamil Nadu shot out Tripura for 128 in 34.3 overs with left-arm pacer T Natarajan taking three wickets to pocket four points. Spinners R Sai Kishore and M Ashwin pick up 2 scalps each as Tamil Nadu made short work of Tripura to take its tally to 24 points. Chasing 316 for victory, Tripura never seemed to be in the hunt as it kept losing wickets at regular intervals and slid for 105 for 4 to 128 all out in the 35th over.

PARDEEP STARS IN PATNA PIRATES' WIN

GREATER NOIDA: Pardeep Narwal was at his scintillating best for Patna Pirates as his 36-point performance helped the three-time champions thrash semifinal-bound Bengal Warriors 69-41 in their final Pro Kabaddi League match of the season on Sunday. Pardeep Narwal's 36-point display in front of a packed audience at the Shaheed Vijay Singh Pathik Sports Complex also helped him cross the 300-point mark for the season (302) as Patna equalled their own record of highest points scored in a match. Atletico will head into the international break three points behind their city rivals and with work to do after the stalemate means Diego Simeone's side have managed only two wins from their last seven games in all competitions. They could have lost if Valladolid's Sandro Ramirez had not missed a firsthalf penalty while Alvaro Morata squandered two good chances for the visitors and Angel Correa hit the post late on.

KROOS UNAVAILABLE FOR GERMANY MADRID: Toni Kroos has withdrawn from the

Germany squad and faces a race to be fit for the Clasico later this month after Real Madrid confirmed on Sunday he has suffered a foot injury. Kroos will miss Germany's friendly against Argentina and their Euro 2020 qualifier away to Estonia. Madrid will hope to have the midfielder back for their crunch La Liga game against Barcelona on October 26 at Camp Nou. A club statement read: "After tests carried out today on the player Toni Kroos by the Real Madrid medical services, he has been diagnosed with an injury to the adductor in his left foot. His recovery will continue to be assessed." Germany confirmed Kroos and FC Cologne's Jonas Hector have pulled out of the squad, with Schalke's
