The EU on Monday adopted binding rules extending protection for whistleblowers to ensure they and those close to them are not singled out for retaliation for exposing alleged wrongdoing affecting the public. "No one should risk their reputation or job for exposing illegal behaviours," said Finnish Justice Minister Anna-Maja Henriksson.

Portugal's Prime Minister Antonio Costa in Lisbon on Monday. Reuters

PORTUGAL

Ruling Socialists win election but fall short of outright majority

Lisbon: Portugal's ruling Socialists won Sunday's parliamentary election but fell short of an outright majority, meaning Prime Minister Antonio Costa will need to negotiate a new deal with one or both of his far-left allies in the previous legislature. A few weeks ago, opinion polls showed that Costa, with ratings boosted by a strong economy, was within reach of a full majority. But the gap narrowed, leaving his Socialist party (PS) stronger than in the 2015 election but still needing allies.

At least nine die as migrant boat sinks off Sicily

Palermo: At least nine people died when a boat carrying dozens of migrants sank off the coast of the island of Lampedusa, south of Sicily, Italy's coastguard said on Monday. The coastguard said rescue vessels had picked up 22 people, and search operations for other survivors were underway after an alert was received late on Sunday night that a boat carrying some 50 people was in difficulty. The UN migration agency said the boat had set sail from Tunisia and had been carrying Tunisian and west African migrants.

NUCLEAR TALKS

N Korea: New talks depend US approach

Beijing: North Korea's chief nuclear negotiator said Washington must alter its approach if more talks are to occur between the sides, after weekend discussions broke down. Kim Myong Gil made the remarks Monday at Beijing's airport on his way back to North Korea following talks with his US counterpart, Stephen Biegun, Saturday in Sweden. Kim said, "Whether or not there are further talks will depend on the US."

WORLD MbS snubbed Imran, recalled his private jet from US: Pak newspaper

'Saudi Crown Prince upset by Pak PM's actions in New York'

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA ISLAMABAD, OCTOBER 7

CROWN Prince Mohammad bin Salman was so upset by some actions of Pakistan Prime Minister Imran Khan in New York that he reportedly "snubbed" him by ordering his private jet to deboard the Pakistani delegation, according to a Pakistani newspaper.

Salman, also known as MbS, gave Khan his private jet to travel to the US on a week-long visit and to attend the 74th session of the UN General Assembly in New York last month. Khan went to Riyadh and held talks with the Crown Prince first before leaving for the US.

It was reported that the special jet developed a "technical glitch" as Khan was returning to Islamabad from New York on September 28, forcing the PM and his delegation to return to New York and then take a commercial flight back to Pakistan. However, according to a report

Prince Salman had given Imran Khan his private jet to travel to the US to attend a UNGA session in New York last month. Reuters in weekly newspaper The Friday Times, the Crown Prince recalled the plane as he was unhappy with some of Khan's actions.

"Inexplicably, the Saudi Crown Prince, Mohammad bin Salman, was so alienated by some dimensions of the Pakistani prime minister's diplomacy in New York he couldn't have been happy at the prospect of Imran Khan, Recip Tayyib Erdogan and Mahathir Mohammad planning to jointly represent the Islamic bloc, nor with Pakistan's interlocution with Iran without his explicit approval — that he visibly snubbed Imran by ordering his private jet to disembowel the Pakistani delegation," says the editorial written by veteran journalist Najam Sethi.

Pakistan dismissed as "utter fabrication" the report published in the newspaper.

MINISTER: PAKSITAN TO ENGAGE CHINA ON CPEC PROJECTS DURING KHAN'S VISIT

Islamabad: Pakistan will engage China at the highest level for talks on several big projects in the fields of hydropower, oil refinery and steel mills as part of the $60 billion China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) during Prime Minister Imran Khan's visit to the country, a senior minister has said. Khan will arrive in Beijing on Tuesday on a two-day visit to China, during which he will meet President Xi Jinping. Pakistan's Federal Minister for Planning, Development and Reforms, Makhdum Khusro Bakhtyar, said Pakistan would start formal negotiations on additional CPEC projects, including a major overland LNG terminal, 7,000-megawatt Bunji hydropower project, Pakistan Steel Mills, oil refineries as well as joint ventures in businesses and technology, Dawn reported. PTI

IMRAN TO U.S. SENATORS: NO TALKS WITH INDIA UNTIL SITUATION IN KASHMIR CHANGES

Islamabad: Pakistan Prime Minister Imran Khan told a visiting US Congressional delegation on Monday that talks with India were out of the question in view of the situation in Kashmir after India revoked Jammu and Kashmir's special status. Khan held a meeting with US senators Chris Van Hollen and Maggi Hassan, who had visited Pakistan-occupied Kashmir on Sunday, Geo News reported. Khan said he was the biggest supporter of Pakistan-India talks, but stressed that it would impossible until the situation, according to him, changes for the better in Kashmir. PTI

ASIA-PACIFIC WATCHDOG FILES REPORT

Terror financing: Pak likely to remain on FATF's grey list

SAJJAD HUSSAIN ISLAMABAD. OCTOBER 7

THE CHANCES are high that Pakistan will be retained on the 'grey list' during the FATF's crucial plenary meetings this month as the country has complied with just one of the 40 recommendations set by the global anti-money laundering watchdog at the time of the country's inclusion in the list, according to a report by the Asia Pacific Group (APG).

The APG released its muchawaited 228-page 'Mutual Evaluation Report' on Saturday, days ahead of the key Financial Action Task Force's (FATF) plenary meeting which will give its decision on Pakistan's 'grey list' status.

Pakistan was placed on the grey list by the Paris-based watchdog in June last year and was given a plan of action to complete it by October 2019, or face the risk of being placed on the black list with Iran and North Korea.

The cut-off date for Pakistan to show improvement to APG was October 2018 and the Pakistani authorities insisted that they made a lot of progress during the past year.

According to the report, out of FATF's 40 recommendations on curbing money laundering and combating the financing of terrorism, Pakistan was fully compliant only on one. It was largely compliant on nine, partially compliant on 26 and non-compliant on four recommendations, The Express Tribune reported.

Pakistan faces high risks of money laundering and terror financing and it needs to improve the understanding of these risks that are also emanating from various terrorist groups operating in the country, the report said.

The report underlined that Pakistan's regulators have very limited understating of the money laundering and terror financing regimes. The report has not agreed with Pakistan's assessment that it faces "medium" category risks of money laundering and terrorism financing. PTI

Judge orders Trump to produce his tax returns; ruling on hold after appeal

LARRY NEUMEISTER NEW YORK, OCTOBER 7

A US federal judge Monday emphatically rejected President Donald Trump's challenge to the release of his tax returns to New York prosecutors, saying the president's broad claim of immunity from all criminal investigations is at odds with the Constitution. But an appeals court blocked any handover of the records for now.

At issue is a request from Manhattan District Attorney Cvrus R Vance Ir that Trump's accounting firm turn over eight years' worth of his business and personal tax returns for an investigation into the payment of hush money to two women who claimed to have had affairs with the president.

US District Judge Victor Marrero turned down Trump's attempt to keep the records under wraps. The President's lawyers immediately appealed to the 2nd US Circuit Court of Appeals, which granted a stay of the judge's ruling pending an expedited review.

"The Radical Left Democrats have failed on all fronts," Trump fumed on Twitter, "so now they are pushing local New York City and State Democrat prosecutors to go get President Trump. A thing like this has never happened to any President before. Not even close!'

The criminal investigation in New York is unfolding with Trump already under siege on Capitol Hill from a fast-moving impeachment drive set off by his attempts to get Ukraine's leader to investigate his political rival Joe Biden. AP

CLIMATE PROTESTERS BLOCK ROADS AROUND WORLD

Activists practice yoga at Westminster Bridge during the Extinction Rebellion protest in London on Monday. Reuters

■Thousands of climate-change protesters took to the streets in cities around the world on Monday, launching two weeks of peaceful civil disobedience to demand immediate action to cut carbon emissions.

■ In London, 217 activists from the Extinction Rebellion group were arrested as they blocked bridges and roads in the city centre, while protesters in Berlin halted traffic at the Victory Column roundabout.

■ Dutch police stepped in to arrest more than 100 climate activists blocking a street in front of the country's national museum and there were similar protests in Austria, Australia, France, Spain and New Zealand.

Scottish court rejects legal challenge to no-deal Brexit

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA EDINBURGH, OCTOBER 7

ANTI-BREXIT CAMPAIGNERS on Monday failed to secure a court ruling forcing Prime Minister Boris Johnson to seek an extension if no deal is reached about Britain's departure from the European Union.

The case was brought to try to compel Johnson to comply with legislation requiring him to ask Brussels for more time if no agreement was reached before the end-of-month Brexit deadline.

But judge Lord Pentland told Scotland's highest civil court, the Court of Session in Edinburgh the government had already made "unequivocal assurances" it would abide by the law.

There was "no doubt" Johnson and the government accepted the need to comply and they intended to do so, the judge said in his ruling. "I am not persuaded that it is necessary for the court to grant the orders sought or any variant of them," he added.

FBI: Most prolific serial killer

in US murdered at least 50

US to step aside for Turkish assault on Kurds in Syria

Republican leaders join chorus of criticism; Trump defends move, says time to end 'ridiculous war'

ZEKE MILLER, LOLITA C BALDOR. ROBERT BURNS & JILL COLVIN WASHINGTON, OCTOBER 7

US PRESIDENT Donald Trump's sudden decision to pull back US troops from northern Syria drew quick, strong criticism Monday from some of his closest allies in Congress. It was condemned, too, by Kurdish fighters who would be abandoned to face a likely Turkish assault after fighting alongside Americans for years against the Islamic State.

THE SYRIAN Democratic Forces (SDF), a coalition of militias led by Kurdish fighters, have been one of America's closest allies in the fight against the IS in Syria. However, Ankara considers the SDF closely aligned to militants who have fought a years-long insurgency in Turkey. The SDF consider the US move to step aside for a Turkish attack on them as a betrayal of their alliance. The SDF are also responsible for many jailed IS fighters, and there are fears of a potential IS revival if the SDF are wiped out by Turkish forces.

The announcement threw the military situation in Syria into fresh chaos and injected deeper uncertainty into US relations with European allies. Republican Senator Lindsey Graham called it "a disaster", while Syria's Kurds accused the US of turning its back on allies and risking gains made in the yearslong fight against ISIS. Trump defended his decision, acknowledging in tweets that "the Kurds fought with us" but adding that they "were paid massive amounts of money and equipment to do so". "I held off this fight for almost 3 years, but it is time for us to get out of these ridiculous Endless Wars, many of them tribal, and bring our soldiers home." he wrote.

Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan has threatened for months to launch a military operation across the Syrian border. He views the Kurdish forces as a threat to his country.

Nikki Haley, who served as US ambassador to the United Nations, said the US "must always have the backs of our allies, if we expect them to have our back... Leaving them to die is a big mistake." AP

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

WASHINGTON, OCTOBER 7

A 79-YEAR-OLD man murdered at least 50 people, making him the most prolific serial killer in US history, the FBI said Sunday. Samuel Little confessed to 93 killings – mostly of women – between 1970 and 2005, the FBI said.

Although investigators have only confirmed his involvement in 50 of them, they believe all of Little's confessions are credible. The FBI has set up a website showing his videotaped recollec-alongside sketches – drawn by Little — of the people he claims to have murdered. "Many of his victims' deaths, tions of unidentified killings, however, were originally ruled overdoses or attributed to accidental or undetermined causes Some bodies were never found,' the FBI wrote on the website.

He was jailed for life in 2014 after being convicted of three murders. "For many years, Samuel Little believed he would not be caught because he thought no one was accounting for his victims," FBI analyst Christie Palazzolo said.

WESTERN CULTURAL ORGANISATIONS HAVE OFTEN BEEN BENEFICIARIES OF RICH RUSSIANS

Oligarchs, as patrons of art, present a softer image of Russia to West

GRAHAM BOWLEY OCTOBER 7

VLADIMIR POTANIN, a Russian billionaire who made his fortune in banking and natural resources, has been a donor and board member of the Guggenheim Museum since 2002. More recently he gave $6.45 million to the Kennedy Center in Washington, which used some of the money to install the "Russian Lounge," a meeting space, in the performing arts complex created, in part, by Congress. His name is now inscribed on a wall there.

Manhattan, another wealthy oligarch, Leonid Mikhelson, helped underwrite a 2011 exhibition through his foundation, which is dedicated to the appreciation of Russian contemporary art. Two years later, the museum named him a trustee, a position he held until last year — three years after the company he directs was placed under sanctions by the US government.

Fort Ross, a California state historic park that commemorates a 19th-century Russian settlement in Sonoma County, was struggling in 2010 when Viktor Vekselberg, another oligarch, stepped in to help financially. His foundation continued as a patron until last year, when sanctions were imposed on him and his company, and the Justice Department told the park's caretakers to stop taking his money.

Since the fall of the Soviet Union, rich Russians have emerged as influential patrons of the arts, and Western cultural organisations have often been the beneficiaries. Carnegie Hall, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Art Institute of Chicago, the Brooklyn Academy of Music and Lincoln Center are among those who have received gifts from moneyed Russians or the companies they control over the Members of the Bolshoi Ballet at a performance in Washington that was sponsored by a Russian bank under sanctions. NYT past decade.

vance their individual tastes and Though wealthy patrons social standing, much of the have long used the arts to ad-Russian giving is different. While sonal preferences and support a wide range of cultural activities, they often employ philanthropy to celebrate their homeland, depicting it as an enlightened wellspring of masterworks in dance, painting, opera and the like. These patrons have been quite oligarchs also promote their per-public in their philanthropy, and there is little evidence that their donations have been directed or coordinated by Moscow. But they all enjoy good relations with the Kremlin — a prerequisite to flourish in business in Russia — and their giving fits seamlessly with President Vladimir Putin's expanding efforts to use the "soft power" of cultural diplomacy as a tool of foreign policy.

The effect, however cultivated, helps burnish the image of a nation whose aggression in Ukraine and election meddling have led it to be viewed by many as a hostile power.

"When Western publics think about Russia, Putin wants them to think about Pushkin, Tolstoy, Tchaikovsky," said Andrew Foxall, a Russia expert at the Henry Jackson Society in London. "What he does not want Western publics to think about is the actions of his regime that goes to war with its near neighbours."

Russian giving, and strained relations between the countries, created something of a minefield for US cultural organisations, many of which depend on philanthropic support and embrace shared aesthetic experiences as opportunities for bridge-building. It presents them with an ethical challenge: Are they putting themselves at risk, however unwittingly, of helping promote a one-sided view of a country that the United States is officially sparring with?

Experts said accepting such donations runs counter to the spirit of US policy designed to isolate some Russian interests. NYT

At the New Museum in