The mob, including women and school children from nearby villages, began forming from the morning and took the police personnel by surprise. The police put up barricades and, at one time, tied the gates with handcuffs to prevent the protesters from forcing their way in.

With the mob pelting stones and footwear, the magistrate came to the police station and remanded the four accused persons to 14 days of judicial custody. The accused — Mohammed alias Areef, J. Shiva, J. Naveen and C. Chennakeshavulu — were later taken to the Cherlapalli Central Prison.

The Shadnagar Bar Association has unanimously resolved not to appear for the accused in the Dr P. Priyanka Reddy case. The association condemned the incident on Saturday, and said the four accused did not deserve legal aid.

This decision came even as several cities across the nation mourned Dr Priyanka Reddy, and protests broke out in TS and AP demanding justice for the victim and death to the accused on Saturday.

Protests and candlelight rallies were held at Mumbai, Delhi and other prominent cities and towns across the country. Scores of people of all age groups came on to the roads in several parts of the Telugu states holding placards and banners with slogans like 'Hang the accused' and 'We want justice for Priyanka'.

Train smash-up due to MMTS guard's fault

ADITYA CHUNDURU I DC HYDERABAD, NOV. 30

The train smash at the Kacheguda station on November 11 seemed to have occurred due to an error by the guard on the MMTS train. This goes against the accepted theory that it was caused by MMTS driver Chandrasekhar, who succumbed to his injuries six days after the accident. Sixteen others sustained injuries and train services were disrupted for two days.

According to a report by the Commission of Railway Safety, which has been accessed exclusively by Deccan Chronicle, there were several factors that led to the accident, including mismanagement by railway officials. The report submitted by Commissioner of Railway Safety Ram Kripal and signed on November 26 states that the MMTS guard sounded the bell, even though he did not see a green light at the starter signal. The bell prompted the pilot to start the train.

The MMTS guard is supposed to sound two bells: one, after he has ascertained that all passengers have boarded the train and second when the starter signal turns green. The guard did not see the starter signal, but still sounded both bells.

said it is possible the MMTS guard lied to the inspection panel.

"The report states that the weather was clear and there were no visibility issues. The starter signal is located at the end of the platform. Since the platform at Kacheguda is not curved, there is no reason why the signal wouldn't be visible to him," he said. In any case, when a starter signal is not visible to a guard, the guard is supposed to be given a starter/repeater indicator in the middle of such a platform. This situation did not arise at Kacheguda. The

The report notes that there was mismanagement before and after the accident. The accident occurred at 10.40 am. Hyderabad division officials informed the Secunderabad division at around 10.50 am. The accident relief train reached there only at 12.50 pm, taking two hours to cover a distance of less than 8 km. "It is likely," said Mr Subhash, "that SCR officials were unable to clear the tracks in time.

Ideally, the ART should have reached the spot in less than 30 minutes."

Also, the Kacheguda station master was found to be at fault for his mismanagement of signal and point knobs without waiting for the prescribed amount of time. The MMTS train's signals were processed in around 30 seconds, though a minimum of two minutes is prescribed. Another case of mismanagement was that the Hundry Express was recorded to have arrived at 10.40 in the station' records — even though it had arrived.

Swine flu: HC questions state's preparedness

Court worried over the way dengue outbreak was handled

HYDERABAD, NOV. 30

With the mishandling of the dengue outbreak still fresh in memory, the High Court has begun taking stock of the state government's preparedness to tackle swine flu during the winter. A division bench comprising Chief Justice Raghavendra Singh Chauhan was dealing with three PILs related to the inaction of the authorities in controlling the spread of diseases.

The court directed the Chief Secretary to file an affidavit indicating the steps, both preventive and curative, being taken by the government to tackle swine flu which usually the government to increase the number of diagnostic laboratories to 10 in cities across the state to detect the virus and appoint trained staff for them. The bench told the government to publicise precautionary and preventive measures to be taken with regard to swine flu, dengue and chikungunya through the media. Justice Chauhan asked the government to direct all private hospitals to deal with swine flu case as part of corporate social responsibility, particularly for the economically weaker sections. The court took cognizance of the submissions of counsels Kovutturi Pavan Kumar and were only two diagnostic centres to detect swine flu and arrangements had not been made to tackle the disease and the vaccine was not available.Mr Pavan Kumar said the government was not properly utilising media to create awareness among the public. The etomology department had not put out even one post since the formation of the Telangana. Concerned over the non-availability of vaccines, the Chief Justice sought details from the medical department officer, who was present in the court. 'Like polio vaccination, the authorities should create awareness among the people to get vaccinated as

TS police to get wireless system used by US cops

VIKRAM SHARMA | DC HYDERABAD, NOV. 30

Post September 11, 2001, when passenger airlines crashed into the World Trade Centre in the United States, communications failure was identified as a critical element that undermined the response to the deadly attacks. The first responders — the police officials — struggled to communicate with each other as their radios operated on different frequencies, and so did the fire fighters.

Closer home, when terrorists carried out multiple attacks in Mumbai on November 26, 2008, police officials were once again faced with a situation where they were unable to communicate with each other, which hampered their response.

Seamless communication is a must for first responders and the Telangana police has finally woken up to the reality. The state police is revamping its communication system by replacing the wireless sets with APCO 25 — a digital trunked sophisticated radio system developed by the US-based Association Public Safety Communications Officials International (APCO).

The police across United States communicates over APCO 25. The TS police communication system has been in use for the last 21 years. Sources

Telangana police told Deccan Chronicle that though the proposal to replace the wireless communications system has been in place for the last few years, it did not materialise due to various reasons. Last month, the technical evaluation of the systems was carried out and the deal is likely finalised December. It is likely that by January the new system will be in place and put to use.

To begin with, the new system will be made available to the Hyderabad police. In different phases, it will be available for Cyberabad Rachakonda Police commissionerates and subsequently deployed in the districts. The requirement for the state is being projected at 20,000 wireless sets and initially 2,000 will be procured. The new system will cost the government around ₹200 crore. For Hyderabad alone, the estimate is about ₹70 crore. Besides talkie sets. repeaters and towers will have to be installed at various places.

Explaining the features of the new system, sources said that the APCO 25 allows seamless communication over multiple channels. "A key feacan listen to two frequencies instead of the existing system of switching between single frequeninstance, the user can listen to the updates from the West Zone of Hyderabad and another major event in Cyberabad. Both frequency channels will be divided by time slots depending on what information comes in first," a source said, adding that the new system is interoperable.

Also, the system allows a separate channel for communication between senior police officers. The protocols also include security options in which voice and data traffic can be cryptographically protected from eavesdrop-ping. In the existing system, the user had to manually switch channels on the VHF sets. Moreover, there was lack of compati-bility with other radio communication tools and the transmission of information was not seamless.

"The new system is compatible and can be integrated with systems being used by all other agencies like the GHMC, fire, revenue department which will ensure that officers of multiple departments can talk to each other." the source said. The walkie talkie sets will be purchased from either Motorala or Kenwood.

College student commits suicide

Kurnool: An intermediate second year boy has allegedly committed suicide by hanging himself in his hostel room at the BC Students Management Hostel in Yammiganur town in the early hours of Saturday. The deceased was identified as Mahendra, resident of Merugudoddi village, Kodumuru mandal, studying at Sri Raghavendra private junior college. This is the fifth suicidal death from the same college in the past three years. The college has been running only for the past three years, Of the five suicides, three were during the current year. Narrating Mahendra's suicide attempt. the circle inspector Sridhar said the entire episode was recorded on closed circuit belonging to woman Burgupalli Karimnagar district allegedly tried to kill her two children husband and father-in-law by feeding them sweet payasam laced with poison before eloping with her boyfriend.

The attempt took place on Friday but came to light on Saturday after the woman's mother-in-law lodged a complaint with the police.

According to assistant subinspector Vivek, Uma was married to Vilasagaram Anjaiah of Burgupalli. She was having an extramarital affair with Thirupathi of the same village. To elope with Thirupathi, she fed poisonchildren - Sidhartha (11) and Manvitha (4), as well as husband Anjaiah and father-inlaw Rajesham on Friday night After they fell unconscious, eloped with her boyfriend. Friday morning. On Anjaiah's mother Laxmi, who did not consume the payasam, noticed her family members in an unconscious state. She immediately took the help of neighbours and shifted the four unconscious to the Karimnagar main hospital. Doctors say the condition of four-year-old Manvitha is critical while the remaining three are recovering. ASI Vivek said a case has been registered against Uma and Thirupathi, following a complaint lodged by mother-in-law Laxmi.

The wedding season is in full swing this time of the year. While it is a joyous occasion for the couples and their families, residents claim to be having sleepless nights because of it. This is courtesy of the loud music, firecrackers and drunken revelry that surround these weddings.
"Now that the wedding season is here, we hear awful, cacophonous bands playing well beyond the 10 pm time limit causing a headache to everyone who isn't drunk and dancing, with the music. Why are we forced to stay awake for their celebration?" questioned Mani Shanker, a resident of Banjara Hills.

Dr P. Priyanka Reddy might not have been an IT employee, but her story has resonated with many women IT professionals. For them, too, getting home after a long day at work is quite unnerving. That some IT companies have discontinued their bus services, forcing their women employees to find their own way home, has only exacerbated these fears.

As a cost cutting measure, many IT companies, including MNCs such as Cognizant and Deloitte, discontinued two-way bus services for their employees. The employ-ees, especially women, working in such companies have since struggled to commute long dis-

No streetlights in IT corridor

DC CORRESPONDENT HYDERABAD, NOV. 30

Even before the gang rape and murder of Dr Priyanka Reddy, women professionals working in the IT corridor have been wary of commuting through the region's various isolated and dark spots. For these women, moving in packs is the ideal solution.

Aadhya changed), an employee of JDA, situated near Meenakshi Towers, said she dreads walking from her office towards Raheja Mindspace after 9 pm.

"There are no street lights on this road, though the office buildings are gleaming in the distance. After 9 pm, vehicles are sparse on the road and it is scary walking towards Mindspace. I

Several other IT professionals from the Raheja Mindspace area said their companies were considering discontinuing bus services.

'My family is letting me work because my company offers me transport due to my night-shift. If I move to a day-shift and I don't get transport facilities, my family will force me to resign," said a 22year-old employee of Cognizant.

Protestors want accused 'encountered'
